PREFACE

THE chief purpose of this volume is to provide a reliable account of the text and canon of Richard Crashaw's complete works, and to make it easier than it has hitherto been to appreciate the qualities and follow the development of his mind and art. With it there goes no attempt to guide the reader in the assignment of praise or blame. The more striking merits of Crashaw's poetry have often been described, and his place among the more considerable poets of his time is now so well established as hardly to call for repeated definition here. Neither does it seem necessary any longer to apologize for what used to be censured as his 'faults' of taste and expression. Attempts to read the literature of the seventeenth century in the spirit in which it was written are often more whole-hearted now than they used to be; and with no very violent effort of sympathy and imagination the modern student will be able to understand and enjoy some of the features of Crashaw's art which the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries were wont to deplore. But it is among the requisites of any closer study, such as this volume is intended to facilitate, that the text on which it is based should not only supply the most accurate possible record of what the poet wrote, but by its convenient disposition serve as a mirror to his growing and changing nature as thinker and as artist—in either or in both of which respects previous editions of Crashaw have usually been a good deal to seek.

The circumstances are somewhat peculiar. Crashaw was anything but a prolific writer, even considering his early death, but he was clearly given to revising, recasting, and amplifying such portions of his works as seemed worth the trouble. Between the first, second, and third published volumes of his English poems the differences are often substantial and striking; and it seems obvious that the method generally followed hitherto of crystallizing the text into a single form and leaving its evolution to be gathered from foot-notes is not the most helpful that could be devised.

The plan which has been adopted in the present edition should be clear enough from the textual introduction, but it may be shortly premised here that the two main stages discernible in the text of some of the most important English poems, corresponding to the first edition (Steps to the Temple . . . With other Delights of the Muses, 1646) and the much altered and extended second edition of the same work (1648) find their counterpart in the present volume in what may be described as corrected reprints, aiming at true texts, of the first edition and of Carmen Deo Nostro, the collection published in Paris in 1652 and consisting almost entirely of 'divine' poems which had been revised for the edition of 1648 or had appeared there for the first time. The Paris edition has been followed for these poems, rather than that of 1648, because although in general it conforms closely to the 1648 text it also contains some new and undoubtedly authentic alterations and additions—one of the finest examples of Crashaw's invention, for example, appearing here for the first time¹; and further because the peculiar conditions and features of its production place it among the most interesting and valuable volumes of English poetry published during the seventeenth century. The text of the first edition (1646) has been adopted for poems reprinted in 1648 with little or no alteration, as well as for the early form of poems which in the second edition were much changed, because on the whole, and as often happened in the seventeenth century, the first edition was more carefully and characteristically produced. The poems which in the present volume are printed twice are with hardly any exception poems which had been so much changed between 1646 and 1648 that to print one text only and indicate the variants by means of foot-notes would be to give less than its due prominence to a very important aspect of Crashaw's work; and the method of double presentation has the further advantage that it holds the foot-notes within convenient bounds, restricting them very largely to cross-references which may facilitate comparison and to the recording of manuscript variants, which have the usual and strong claim to attention that they seem often to point back to a still earlier stage of composition than that enshrined in the first published edition. The MSS. usually conform most closely to the text of 1646, which has therefore in most instances been taken as the basis of collation.

Between the two sections of the present edition thus corresponding to the editions of 1646 and 1652 will be found the few poems which are peculiar to the edition of 1648. The Latin and Greek epigrams published in 1634 and 1670 precede the poems from the volume of 1646, and after Carmen Deo Nostro are printed certain additional Latin, Greek, and English poems, chiefly from manuscript sources. Of the MSS. the most important are British Museum Add. MSS. 40176 and 33219, and Harleian 6917; and Bodleian MS. Tanner 465, all of which contain material not found elsewhere. From MS. Tanner 465 five poems are now, it is believed, printed for the first time. MS. Harleian 6917 yields the fine Epithalamium, which was not printed or claimed for Crashaw until it appeared in the London Mercury, June 1923, p. 159 sqq.; and the reader's attention is specially drawn to the introductory notes on these MSS.

The attempt has been made to represent accurately each of the original editions on which, successively, the present one is based, preserving their essential features and recording all departures from them in the foot-notes, with the following exceptions:

(1) long 'f' and devices like 'ð' for 'om' or 'q̄' for 'que' are abandoned throughout the text;

(2) errors of spacing, wrong founts, and turned letters are corrected silently, these including the frequent use of 'à' for 'a', 'th-' for 'th' in the Paris edition of 1652. On the other hand, the faults or inconsistencies of accentuation in Latin and Greek verses have not been eradicated.

Seventeenth-century variants of any genuine significance, in printed editions as well as in MSS., are recorded in the foot-notes, together with suggestions of modern editors which have been found interesting or helpful, but not the numerous misprints occurring in the volume of 1648, except where that volume, being the only authority, has been used as the basis of the text; and not, again, manuscript variants merely and obviously due to hasty or ignorant copying. The foot-notes also usually take no account of variant spellings.

'Significant variants', however, are understood to include many instances of variant punctuation, both in printed and in manuscript versions. To record all differences of punctuation whatever would of course unduly encumber the apparatus, but in the unavoidable necessity of making selections consistency has been aimed at, the general rule observed being only to note instances where the variant stop could have had a special emphasizing or explanatory shade of significance for the seventeenth-century reader. Where the foot-notes give no contrary indication it must be assumed that the other printed texts and the MSS. concerned agree or are of similar import, or again (as frequently in the MSS.) that there is no punctuation at all.

It was hoped that it might also be possible to record the variant usage of italics in the printed editions, corresponding to the manuscript convention of writing certain words and phrases in a larger hand for the sake of emphasis. But this again would have tended to overweight the foot-notes and the intention was in general abandoned. In some more striking instances, however, where the printed editions use no italics but a MS. distinguishes a word or a phrase, the circumstance has been recorded. The convention has also been observed in printing the poems for which MSS. are the only authority.

The materials for a biography of Crashaw are a little less exiguous than they were fifty years ago, when Grosart published his edition, and though the reconstruction of details in the poet's experience must remain largely a matter of conjecture, the new facts and documents which have come to light since Crashaw's life was written for the Dictionary of National Biography are perhaps considerable enough to justify, as a setting for them, a restatement of the more important of those which were earlier available. This edition is the first to include a copy of Crashaw's letter written from Leyden in 1644 and of the Queen's letter introducing him to the Pope in 1646.¹

The notes at the end of the volume are intended to supplement the biography, to elucidate obscurity, to supply where necessary evidence of authorship, and to provide illustrative material such as may throw light on the influences which went to make Crashaw's poetry what it was.

It is a pleasure to own my indebtedness and express my gratitude to all those who have assisted me with their information or counsel, and of whom some are mentioned at the relevant points. Other obligations fall to be acknowledged here. The value of the help given by Professor E. Bensly in regard to Crashaw's Latin and Greek verses, and the generosity of the giving, could hardly be overstated. His scholarly tact and wide knowledge of medieval and Renaissance as well as of ancient Latin and Greek have been placed unreservedly at my service and have given me far more confidence than I could otherwise have felt in attempting to define this difficult part of the text. I cannot claim that the result is such as Professor Bensly would have secured himself; I am sure that most of what is good in it is due to him. It is specially gratifying to recall various peculiarities of word or phrase which by classical standards might seem to require emendation, but which have been shown to accord with medieval or later practice and therefore allowed to stand. Professor Bensly has also supplied many Greek and Latin parallels given in the Commentary. Particular thanks are also due to Lord Denbigh, for the loan of his copy of Carmen Deo Nostro,

1. 1612-1631. London and Yorkshire.

ALTHOUGH in the Admission Book of Pembroke College, Cambridge, Richard Crashaw is no doubt correctly described as 'natus Londini', since at the time of his birth his father, William Crashaw, was preacher at the Temple, the Crashaw family had for generations before this been settled in Yorkshire. The more original form of the name, Crawshaw, is still of fairly common occurrence in that county and is even to be found at the present day in the small community of Handsworth, near Sheffield, where William Crashaw was born in 1572. The researches of Dr. Grosart at the parish church of Handsworth showed that William Crashaw's father and grandfather were both apparently named Richard, and that Richard Crashaw, the grandfather of the poet, died in 1585.

William Crashaw entered St. John's College, Cambridge, on May 1, 1591. The date of his first graduation is not recorded, but on May 19, 1594, he succeeded to the Bishop of Ely's Fellowship at the same college, being nominated by the queen in the temporary vacancy of the bishopric. He proceeded M.A. in 1595 and subsequently took the degree of B.D. How long he resided at Cambridge is not known, but he maintained for many years his relations with St. John's, and his memory is secured there by the collection of his own books which, apparently, he induced the Earl of Southampton to buy and present to the college library.¹

His will at Somerset House begins with a statement of the various places with which he had been pastorally connected after he left Cambridge: 'I William Crashawe, Bachelor in Divinitye Preacher of Gods worde. First at Bridlington then at Beverley in Yorkeshire afterwards at the Temple Since then Pastor of the Church of Ag: Burton in the diocese of Yorke.

Nowe Pastor of that too greate Parishe of Whitechappell in the Suburbs of London. . . .’ His biographers have hitherto shelved or been baffled by the question how long his tenure of these cures respectively lasted, and in the absence of contemporary records at the churches in question the difficulty is great. It is well, however, for the present purpose to be as sure as possible of his whereabouts at the times when and after his son was born. It is clear that he was settled in London as early as February 14, 1607/8, when he preached his anti-Roman and anti-Brownist ‘sermon at the Crosse’—for in the first printed edition of that energetic work (1608) he is already described as ‘preacher at the Temple’. And it is also clear that he still held the same office as late as August 30, 1613, when he signed Sir Thomas Cuming’s ‘Album Amicorum’ (British Museum Add. MS. 17083, f. 145 v.) as ‘Gul. Crashavius verbi div. ap. Templar. london praedic.’. On March 23, 1614, however, he writes to St. John’s College about his books, giving as his address ‘Ag. Burton’,¹ so that evidently by that date he had obtained the living to which his right had earlier been disputed (see D.N.B. art. William Crashaw). It is probable that he was reinstated here as a result of his (undated) petition to the king, now in the British Museum (Royal MS. 17. B. ix.), in which he requests facilities for compiling ‘A discoverye of popy[s]he Corruption requiringe A kingely reformation . . .’ and asks that with a view to the necessary leisure he may be restored to a ‘litle vicharage’ of which he had been dispossessed ‘in ye last yeare of the Queene’. On November 13, 1618, he was instituted to the living of St. Mary Matfellow, Whitechapel,² where he remained until his death in 1626.

He was twice married, but the year of his first marriage and the identity of his first wife remain unknown in spite of careful inquiry, and approximations of date have to suffice. The terminus a quo is provided in an answer to some of the polemical utterances into which William Crashaw had been led by his strong Puritan sympathies and his vigorous zeal; this was The Overthrow of the Protestants Pulpit-Babels, Convincing their Preachers of Lying & Rayling, to make the Church of Rome seeme mysticall Babell. Particularly confuting VV. Crashawes Sermon at the Crosse, printed as the patterne to iustify the rest. . . . Togeather with a discovery of M. Crashawes spirit : and an Answer to his Iesuites Ghospell. By I. R. Student in Duinity. . . M.DC.XII. On p. 321 of this work the writer mentions a sermon preached by William Crashaw on February 21, 1609/10 (published in 1610) on the subject of Virginia, and addressing its author suggests that he might have been glad for some ministers 'to forsake their Benefices, and goe to Virginia in person, that you might have stepped into one of their roomes with your wife, whom perchance then you had in hart if not in house (for you married not long after) . . .'.

Richard Crashaw, apparently the only issue of this marriage, seems to have been born towards the end of 1612 or early in 1613. He is described in the Admission Book of Pembroke College, Cambridge, as 'annos habens 18' on July 6, 1631, and from the obituary publication in honour of William Crashaw's second wife, to be quoted below, it appears that he was baptized eight years before October 1620, though the 'eight years' are doubtless only approximate. The date of the first wife's death is unknown, but the second marriage took place in 1619. This is shown both by the registers of All Hallows, Barking, and in the volume of Marriage-licences granted by the Bishop of London (Harleian Society, vol. xxvi, 1887) :

May 8 Mr William Crashawe, Clerk, B.D., of St Mary, White-chapel, Widower, 42, & Elizabeth Skynner, of same, Spinster, 26, dau. of Anthony Skynner, of same, Gent, who consents ; at All Hallows Barking.

This second wife died about October 4, 1620, soon after which there appeared The Honour of Vertue. or The Monument erected by the sorowfull Husband, and the Epitaphes annexed by learned and worthy men, to the immortall memory of that worthy Gentle-woman M^{rs} Elizabeth Crashawe. Who dyed in childbirth, and was buried in Whit-Chappell: Octob. 8. 1620. In the 24¹ yeare of her age. . . . [n.d.] The reference to Richard Crashaw's baptism occurs on p. A 3 verso of this publication, where it is stated that 'The Funerall Sermon was made by Doctor Vsher of Ireland, then in England, and now Lord Bishop of Meath, in Ireland. It was her owne earnest request to him, that he would preach at the Baptisme of her Sonne, as he had eight yeares afore, being then also in England,¹ at the Baptisme of her husbands elder sonne'. The only other reference to the future poet is in the tribute which is made to Elizabeth Crashaw's 'singular motherly affection to the child of her predecessor'.

William Crashaw's will, dated June 10, 1622, was proved on October 16, 1626, by Robert Dixon, the other executor appointed being 'my sonne Richarde', who was then only about fourteen years of age. No special legacy is made to him in the will and he was no doubt otherwise provided for, though it seems clear that his portion was not very large. His father had never been a rich man, and in the petition to the king already mentioned William Crashaw speaks of 'havinge spent my patrimonye in bookes, and my time in perusinge them'; and though he subsequently married one who according to The Honour of Vertue was 'like to be of great estate, and therefore much sought after by yong gallants and rich heires', it is not known that he derived any great pecuniary benefit from the step. But beyond its various worldly dispositions the will contains a solemn asseveration of the faith which both in the pulpit and in his published works William Crashaw had so often and so zealously upheld, and of which his son's later career was to provide so explicit a denial:

I accounte Poperie (as nowe it is) the heape and chaos of all

² This is no doubt the Richard Crashaw referred to in Epigrammatum Hecatontades Dvæ. Authore R. B. Londini . . 1627 Hecatontas Altera No. 11 is inscribed 'Ad virum probatissimum, Richardum Crashaw Ciuem Londinensum' and runs as follows.

Nesciat, ut manuum quid agat tua dextra, sinistra,

I beleue the Popes seate and power to be the power of the greate Antechrist and the doctrine of the Pope (as nowe it is) to be the doctrine of Antechriste. yea that doctrine of Divells prophecied of by the Apostle and that the true and absolute Papist soe livinge and dyeinge debarrs himself of salvation for oughte that we knowe, . . .

William Crashaw's real and characteristic though not strikingly eminent gifts as a writer had often been employed in works of devotional as well as of controversial intent,¹ and in these his deep and earnest piety may be unmistakably discerned. Some of them are in verse, which is by no means wanting in movement and inspiration, and it is of interest to observe that Richard Crashaw apparently read it with care and admiration, since he occasionally re-echoes it in his own poetry. The poem, in particular, at the end of his father's Manuall for true Catholickes . . ., called 'The Conclusion, with a devout and holy prayer' was probably remembered both for its rhythm and its phraseology by Richard Crashaw when he wrote his version of Psalm xxiii (see the notes to that poem, p. 435, below).

It was not, apparently, before 1629 that Crashaw entered the Charterhouse, and where he first went to school is not known. His earliest biographer, Lloyd (Memoires, &c., 1668),² speaks of his having been under the protection of two lawyers, Sir Henry Yelverton and Sir Randolph Crew, of whom it is to be noted that the latter became a governor of the Charterhouse in 1628. The minutes of an Assembly of Governors, under the date July 2, 1629, contain a list of boys passed for admission successively as places fell void, and 'Richard Crosshow' is thirteenth in the list with a note 'no exception to his age'.³ The only other relevant entry in the school

² The two first published biographies, or rather approaches to a biography, of Crashaw, Lloyd's, and Wood's in Fasti Oxonienses, II, col. 4 (ed. Bliss, 1820) are given in Appendix II. Both are scrappy and rhetorical, drawing upon the Preface to Steps to the Temple for some flamboyant phrases, and Lloyd's is certainly not accurate in all its details. But their contact with Crashaw's time gives them thus much authority.

³ This probably means that Crashaw was over the age at which 'gown-boys' or Foundation Scholars were admitted; or else it is records is one dated July 11, 1631, to the effect that 'Richard Crasshowe' was sent as exhibitor to Pembroke College, Cambridge.

Lloyd gives much credit to Robert Brook, who was Head Master of the Charterhouse from 1628 to 1643, for laying the foundations of Crashaw's future proficiency as a writer, by prescribing exercises imitative of 'the choicest Orators and Poets'; and Crashaw himself pays a tribute to his former master in the address to Brook prefixed to the Latin epigrams published in 1634. But whether any of the poems which are preserved were written during his boyhood must remain doubtful. It seems at least probable that some of them belong to his school days, more especially some of the epigrams. In *Charterhouse: Old and New*¹ (1910, p. 14) an old rule under the Founder's will is mentioned which 'used to provide that the Foundation Scholars in the highest form should every Sunday set up in the Great Hall four Greek and four Latin verses apiece upon any part of the second lesson appointed for the day, for the Master of the Hospital or any stranger to view'. The English poems, again, in MS. Tanner 465, on the Gunpowder Treason and on the King's Coronation, which are marked by a violence of tone and striving after effect, of somewhat youthful quality, may well have been written before he went to Cambridge. The same is possibly true of some of the Latin verses preserved in MS. Tanner 465, and of the version of Psalm xxiii, which has a childlike simplicity besides recalling the style of William Crashaw's poem mentioned above.²

Just before he left school Richard Crashaw became the heir to certain property and to twenty pounds in money left him by his godfather, the Richard Crashaw who was Master of the Goldsmiths' Company and who appears to have died on June 2, 1631. The relevant portion of the will, as quoted in Notes and Queries, Ninth Series, vi, July 28, 1900 (p. 64), is as follows:

Item I give and bequeath unto Richard Crashawe my godsonn sonne of Willyam Crashawe late of White Chappell preacher a proviso lest he should become over age by the time a vacancy occurred. It should be added that the records only refer to 'gown-boys' and not to the other Carthusians, who were boarders. I am indebted to the Master of the Charterhouse for this information.

II. 1631-1643. Cambridge.

Richard Crashaw was matriculated at Cambridge as a pensioner on March 26, 1632, but the entry in the Admission Book of Pembroke College is as follows :

Julii 6. 1631 Richardus Crashawe Gulielmī pr(e)sbyteri filius natus Londini annos hēns 18, admissus est ad 2^{ae} mensæ ordinem sub tutela M^{ri} Tourney

In September 1631, the death of Dr. Samuel Brooke, of Trinity College, occurred ; in October that of Dr. Mansell, President of Queens' College, and of William Herry, Fellow of Pembroke ; and the elegiac poems written by Crashaw for these occasions are the first of a series belonging to the early years of his residence. There is of course no reason to suppose that any friendship or personal feelings were involved in his relations with these fairly prominent figures. But the fact of his writing these funeral verses so soon after his arrival shows that he went to Cambridge with a marked talent, and if, as is possible, he was invited to write them, it suggests that, like Cowley, he brought with him a certain repute. Other occasional verses that he composed about this time, royal felicitations and commendatory poems prefixed to books, are mentioned in the section on the chronology of his works, p. lxxxvii, below.

The year 1634 was that of his graduation as B.A. and of the appearance at Cambridge of his book of Latin epigrams.

Up to this date and indeed right up to the appearance in 1646 of his Steps to the Temple, the published works of Crashaw give no evidence of strong Romanist inclinations. The third poem 'on the Gunpowder-Treason' (p. 387, below) is thoroughly Protestant in its denunciation of Papal truculence, and the Latin epigram on the shadow of St. Peter (p. 19, below), still suggests an attitude of somewhat satirical criticism towards the Roman claims. Moreover, his reference, in the prose address to the reader, p. 14, below, l. 25, to the 'Acygniani' (the anagram for the Jesuits or Ignatians employed in Barclay's Euphormionis Satyricon (1603-7), seems to indicate that a spirited though polite resistance was being made to Jesuit propaganda. But his High Anglicanism was clearly well developed by 1634. The epigrams are preceded by complimentary verses to his tutor, Tournay, a notable High-Churchman, and to Laney, then the Master of Pembroke, who is praised for his zeal in restoring beauty to the college chapel and to its worship. In the following year, too, Crashaw contributed his prefatory poem to Shelford's Five pious and learned Discourses, . . . Cambridge 1635, in which the doctrine of Justification by Faith is impugned as it had already been by Tournay,¹ and in which another Protestant theory, accepted by Crashaw's father, that the Pope is Antichrist, is also called in question (see Crashaw's poem, p. 137, below, and the note thereto, p. 139).

It was probably in the year 1635, too, that Crashaw was elected to his Fellowship at Peterhouse, then perhaps the most important focus at Cambridge of Laudian High-Churchmanship. His formal admission is dated November 20, 1636,² but according to contemporary habit this may well have followed by as much as a year or more his entry upon his duties. The new chapel at Peterhouse was begun during Matthew Wren's Mastership, in 1632, and continued under Cosin, who succeeded Wren in 1634; and even as early as July 1635, the college records (Box 'Collegium' R 9) show that Crashaw was concerned in its embellishment. About this time there are several items recording the purchase, among other things, of 'frames' (which are credibly though not certainly picture-frames) and on July 30:

Crashaw is also described as ' Coll. S. Pet. Socius ' in Carmen Natalitium, etc., published in 1635 (see foot-notes to p. 161, below). It is likely to have been about this time that he wrote the two Latin poems, first published in 1648, appealing for the assistance which Peterhouse needed for the completion of its new buildings, ' Votiva Domus Petrensis Pro Domo Dei ' and ' In cæterorum Operum difficili Parturitione Gemitus '.

Whether during his residence at Peterhouse Crashaw was formally ordained in the Anglican Church or not,¹ the Preface to Steps to the Temple (1646) makes it seem probable that he was appointed to some sort of official charge of Little St. Mary's, the church which adjoins Peterhouse and which served as the college chapel prior to the building of the new one :

Reader, we stile his Sacred Poems, Stepps to the Temple, and aptly, for in the Temple of God, under his wing, he led his life in St Marnes Church neere St Peters Colledge There he lodged under Tertullian's roofoe of Angels . There he made his nest more gladly then David's Swallow neere the house of God . where like a primitive Saint, he offered more prayers in the night, then others usually offer in the day , There, he penned these Poems, Stepps for happy soules to chmbe heaven by.

Beyond this practically no information is available as to Crashaw's life at Cambridge between his appointment to the Peterhouse Fellowship and his loss of it some time in 1643. It is not likely, however, to have been very eventful. He speaks regretfully, soon after his departure, of the ' little contenfull kingdom ' that the Fellowship had meant for him, and it may be supposed that his time was divided chiefly between his pupils and his ministrations and his poetic activities at Peterhouse or in Little St. Mary's. Joseph Beaumont, the poet, and Fellow of Peterhouse from 1636-44, seems to have been among his chief friends during this period.²

Among the first pupils assigned to him was Ferrar Collet,³ younger brother of Mary Collet and nephew of Nicholas Ferrar, the founder of the Anglican community at Little

Gidding. This is one of the first signs of Crashaw's connexion with that community;¹ but that the relationship was of earlier origin is suggested by the fact that Crashaw had already written the commendatory poem published with the translation of Lessius' Hygiasticon, 1634 (see p. 156, below), this work having been a favourite with Nicholas Ferrar, who may well have encouraged Crashaw to write in its praise. The translation from Barclay's Argenis ('No roofes of gold o're riotous tables shining', see p. 338, below), also probably written with Little Gidding in mind, is perhaps of later date. The first published statement of the connexion is that made in Memoirs of the Life of Mr. Nicholas Ferrar. By P. Peckard, D.D. . . . Cambridge . . . MDCCXC., where with reference to the vigils which were kept at Little Gidding it is said (p. 243) that 'Several religious persons both in the neighbourhood, and from distant places, attended these watchings: and amongst these the celebrated Mr. Rich. Crashaw, Fellow of Peterhouse, who was very intimate in the family, and frequently came from Cambridge for this purpose, and at his return often watched in Little St. Mary's Church near Peterhouse'. This a good though late authority, being based largely on family tradition, but now that Crashaw's letter, written in 1643/4 to one of the Ferrar family, has come to light, the intimacy of which Peckard speaks is seen to have been deeper than could before have been surmised.

When the conflict between the King and Parliament broke out—it is foreshadowed in the verses which Crashaw added in 1640 to the poem originally called 'A Panegyrick. Upon the birth of the Duke of Yorke' (see p. 176, below)—Crashaw's sympathies, as was to be expected, showed themselves to be pronouncedly and more than sentimentally royalist. A document is preserved in the Treasury at Peterhouse from which it appears that he was one of several Fellows who joined their forces to guarantee a loan of sixty pounds to the king in 1642.¹ But it is not known that this document was discovered, and Crashaw's disappearance from the University was no doubt due to other than purely political causes. The High Church proclivities and practices for which he had probably earned notoriety would make him the natural prey of those who were now to administer the new religious régime. On December 20 and 23, 1643, the Parliamentary Commissioners, under the Act of August 28, 1643, 'Monuments of Superstition or Idolatry to be demolished',² visited Peterhouse and Little St. Mary's. At Peterhouse, it appears from William Dowsing's Diary,³ 'We pulled down 2 mighty great Angells with Wings, & divers other Angells, and the 4 Evangelists & Peter with his Keies, over the Chapell Dore, & about a hundred Chirubims & Angells & divers Superstitious Letters in gold'; at Little St. Mary's⁴ 'We brake down 60 Superstitious Pictures, Some Popes & Crucifixes & God the father sitting in a chayer & holding a Glasse in his hand'. And probably in connexion with this visitation, though without formal eviction as yet from his Fellowship, Crashaw seems to have left Cambridge about the end of 1643. It is very possible that he retired first to Little Gidding.

The next definite news of Crashaw is that he is in Holland in February 1643/4, in circumstances that witness very clearly to the closeness of his relationship with the Little Gidding community. The evidence for this is the letter already referred to above, the only piece of English prose from Crashaw's hand known to exist⁵, and a document of the greatest interest for the light which it throws upon his character and temperament and upon his situation and feelings at this very critical moment of his life. The letter has been preserved among other original documents belonging to descendants of the Ferrar family ; it is now in the possession of Mr. J. Burford Leonard,¹ and was first published in an article entitled ' Richard Crashaw and Mary Collet ' contributed to the Church Quarterly Review, vol. lxxiii, No. 146, January 1912, p. 358, by Miss E. Cruwys Sharland. Both the handwriting and the signature ' R C. ', as well as the personal references in the letter, point unmistakably to Crashaw's authorship.

It shows that Crashaw has been for some little time at Leyden and that a lady who may have been Mary Collet, the niece of Nicholas Ferrar and, since 1632, the ' Mother ' ² of the Community, is also there ; but that for reasons which are not stated and which may have been of a political or religious nature, he is no longer allowed to see her. How Mary Collet, if indeed it was she, came to visit Holland at this time, or why Crashaw accompanied or joined her there does not appear. It does not follow necessarily from anything said in the letter that she had gone primarily on his behalf. Evidently she had an uncle in Leyden (and it will be remembered that the Ferrars were of Flemish descent), into whose house Crashaw had earlier been admitted with her. Crashaw, however, now writes (possibly either to John Ferrar, the brother and biographer of Nicholas, or to Mary Collet's father) to inform him that these relations have been broken off and to propose a plan by which Crashaw hopes to do a service, to derive some profit still from his Fellowship, and perhaps to secure the reversion of his office in happier times. The plan is to send in a formal resignation of the Fellowship in favour of his friend and former pupil, Ferrar Collet, who was now a By-Fellow, and who if appointed to Crashaw's post would have the usual right to let part of the accommodation which went with it and thus be in a position to place at Crashaw's disposal the ' chamber-income ' of which he stood in so much need.

The final paragraph of the letter tells of more intimate things. In it Crashaw anticipates and seeks to remove the anxiety which he thinks his news will naturally arouse, assuring his friend that he is not yet 'purposed for fixing'. This may, of course, only refer, as the immediate context might imply, to the choice of an abiding city or a fixed occupation; but the tone of the whole paragraph, with the apology for what seems to the writer 'a defect at least a disproportion of my weak soul to seuerer courses' and the suggestion that delay will be in the nature of a relief to his correspondent, point to the conclusion that he is rather, or also, thinking of religious settlement and perhaps of the discipline which monastic life, for example, would impose. It is not hard to believe that his troubles were already encouraging him to take the step, which he must have taken by 1646, of seeking admission into the Roman Communion.

It is not known whether the practical object of this letter was served. Ferrar Collet, with several others, was himself turned out of Peterhouse on January 3, 1644/5, for refusing to accept the Covenant.¹ But the preservation of the letter, seeing that it was to be destroyed 'if nothing to this purpose' suggests that something may have been attempted or even done, at least for the time.² The following is the text of the letter: ³

Dear Sr

God knows I cary about me y^e mind and thoughts of some great landed man, and think my share in the hazards of Englands to be no small one. ² Such an expedient would not be without parallel. Of Robert Quarles it is recorded that 'on his appointment to a Peterhouse Fellowship he wrote privately to the dispossessed Joseph Beaumont, acquainting him with his intention to hand over to the latter all the pecuniary profits of the office; a promise which he faithfully fulfilled'. (T. A. Walker, Peterhouse, p. 112.)

³ The letter is written on a single sheet, 11½ × 7⅔ in., 76 ll recto and 29 verso. There is therefore much cramping and the readings are not all quite certain. But all the instances in which the text given here differs from that already published have had very careful consideration, and all the points that still remain doubtful are noted. proceedings of Parliament, and other scandalous acts'. On April 8, 1644, 'Mr. Tolly, Mr. Beaumont, Mr. Pennyman, Mr. Crashaw, and Mr. Comyn', not being resident when summoned, were ejected from their Fellowships, and their successors were appointed on June 11 of the same year.¹

Whether Crashaw ever returned to England, and if so at what date, are questions which as yet admit of no certain answer; but if he did return—and this seems rather more than possible—it would be natural for him at this time to seek shelter at Oxford. There the Court had been established since July 1643, and there, until April 17, 1644, he would have an opportunity of meeting Susan, first Countess of Denbigh, to whom he was to acknowledge an 'immortall obligation' (see page 231, below). On that date, however, the Countess of Denbigh left Oxford for Exeter with Queen Henrietta Maria, to whom she was First Lady of the Bedchamber, and thence proceeded with the queen to France.² Wood's statement that Crashaw was incorporated at Oxford in 1641 is confessedly based on hearsay; but it is very possible that the fact is true and the date incorrect; and further, it is intimated clearly in the letter from the queen recommending Crashaw to the Pope in 1646 that he had been a member of both English universities, and, less clearly, that he went to France direct from England. There is therefore considerably more than a shadow of justice in the claim that Crashaw was of Oxford as well as of Cambridge, though the evidence, attractive as it may be to Oxford alumni, hardly amounts to proof.

The queen's dispatch from Paris, of September 7, 1646, affords the next certain date in Crashaw's life. The statement in it that he had 'vescú prés d'un an auprès de moy' need not be understood as conflicting with Wood's assertion that he was presented to the queen through the agency of Cowley, who is said to have gone to Paris as secretary to Lord Jermyn in 1646.³ But it seems quite as likely that on Crashaw's removal to Paris some time in 1645 he made or renewed acquaintance with the Countess of Denbigh, and that she had at least had

If the statements are correct that Crashaw had been in France for about a year in September 1646 and that he had gone there to practise his new faith in greater peace and security, the date of his acceptance of it must go back to 1645, and may even be earlier. The first edition of Steps to the Temple (1646) containing the 'Apology' for the Hymn to St. Teresa, 'as having been writ when the author was yet among the Protestants' has usually and rightly been taken as a forward limit, but there is nothing in either the poem or its title to suggest that the conversion was very recent.

While in Paris Crashaw could hardly fail to renew the acquaintance with Cowley that is likely to have begun at Cambridge (and perhaps may have been continued at Oxford, where Cowley retired on his ejection).² And there is reason to surmise that Crashaw then submitted for Cowley's criticism some of the new verse that was afterwards incorporated in the second edition of Steps to the Temple (1648) and in which 1653¹ (chap. xxxvii, p. 169) is more prejudiced, and obviously not very well informed, since no mention is made of Crashaw's death, but it may preserve some truth in its details.

Master Crawshaw (Son to the London Divine) and sometimes Fellow of St Peter house in Cambridge) is another slip of the times, that is, transplanted to Rome. This peevish sillie Seeker glided away from his Principles in a Poetical vein of fancy, and impertinent curiosity; and finding that Verses, and measur'd flattery took, and much pleas'd some female wits, Crawshaw crept by degrees into favour and acquaintance with some Court-Ladies, and with the gross commendations of their parts and beauties (burnisht and varnisht with some other agreeable adulations) he got first the estimation of an innocent, harmless Convert; and, a purse being made by some deluded, vain-glorious Ladies, and their friends, the Poet was dispatch'd in a Pilgrimage to Rome, where if he had found in the See Pope Urban the eighth, instead of Pope Innocent, he might possibly have received a greater quantity, and a better number of Benedictions; For Urban was as much a pretender to be Prince, and Oecumenical patron of Poets, as head of the Church; but Innocent being more harsh and dry, the poor small Poet Crawshaw, met with none of the generation and kindred of Mæcenas, nor any great blessing from his Holiness, which misfortune puts the pitiful wier-drawer to a humor of admiring of his own raptures: and in this fancy (like Narcissus) he is fallen in love with his own shadow, conversing with himself in verse, and admiring the burth of his own brains; he is onely laughed at, or (at most) but pityed by his new Patrons, who conceiving him unworthy of any preferments in their Church, have given him leave to live (like a lean swine almost ready to starve) in a poor Mendicant quality; and that favour is granted, only because Crawshaw can rail as satyrically and bitterly at true Religion in Verse, as others of his grain and complexion can in Prose, and loose discourses: this fickle shuttlecock so tost with every changeable puff and blast, is rather to be laughed at, and scorned for his ridiculous levity, than imitated in his sinfull and notorious Apostacy and Revolt.

And an anecdote of Crashaw recorded by Sir Robert Southwell in a letter written from Rome, December 23, 1660, and now among the manuscripts belonging to the Marquis of Egmont,² tells the same story of failure and disappointment, the touch of ironical humour attributed to Crashaw offering no real opposition to what we otherwise know of his character, though the story is probably not free from invention.

The last night one was telling me the life and death of your famous Cambridge wit, Crasshaw, who coming here to the last Pope Innocent, declared his condition and abilities, and that he had left all for the Roman Church, so in fine expecting to meet with a happy maintenance here, the Pope gave him but twenty pistoles, with which departing very ill satisfied, he told the person that presented him, certainly if the Roman church be not founded upon a rock, it is at least founded upon something which is as hard as a rock. He after, by the favour of a Cardinal, got a place of two hundred crowns a year, but in a short time after died.

The English wits do think that if they turn, and come hither, they shall be courted as princes; which is a sad mistake, for it is well if they get a livelihood.¹

Whatever truth there may be in Bargrave's assertion as to the reasons which led to Crashaw's appointment at Loreto, it is a fact that on April 28, 1649, he was admitted by proxy in the degree of 'beneficiatus'² to a vacancy, in the gift of Cardinal Palotto, at the Cathedral of the Santa Casa. The formal documents at Loreto referring to Crashaw, which are

¹ The same letter speaks of the duties and way of living of the servants of Cardinals.

I have now had some opportunity of seeing Rome and viewing the magnificence of the Pope's Court, which certainly is the most absolute model of punctuality and method of any other in the world; for each Cardinal going to the palace has all his train of coaches and livery men, in so precise an equipage, that their whole pomp falls under the eye at one view. There is no straggling of servants or other disorder here, for each person, even to the least, has all the rules of his duty at his fingers' ends, and obeys them with a kind of agility, nay, the servants here are so versed in the points of ceremony and honour that belongs to their Cardinal in respect of others, that upon rencounter of coaches in the street they instruct what measure of respect is to be showed, or what state to be kept, in respect of the way or pre-eminence, for such are the punctilios of this place, which in another country would be ridiculous. There is no expense here but what is designed for ostentation and show, for you shall have a Cardinal that in the morning went to the Court with a train of fifty coaches, return home, disband all his company, and only have one pigeon for dinner, with a few herbs and fruit. Perhaps he has one servant that there attends him, but all the rest eat abroad, and the greatest wages that any gentleman of their attendance has is ten crowns a month.

given in full in Appendix II, pp. 420-4, below, show that he died there on August 21 in the same year, and was buried 'in tumulo sacerdotum'.¹

Of the two editions of Steps to the Temple, &c., which had appeared since Crashaw left England (1646 and 1648), the second contained much material that was not included in the first. The volume published in 1652, Carmen Deo Nostro, adds little to that which appeared in 1648, but the additions include some of the finest lines Crashaw ever wrote (ll. 93-108 of 'The Flaming Heart'). The last publication in the seventeenth century to contain new material in English by Crashaw appears to have been the Letter (? 1653) given on pp. 348-50, below—an amplified version of the address to the Countess of Denbigh published in Carmen Deo Nostro 'Persuading her to Resolution in Religion & to render her selfe without further delay into the Communion of the Catholick Church.' Here again Crashaw is at his best, some of the new lines being among the most memorable of their kind ever written. And when we survey the remarkable development of Crashaw's genius close up to the end of his life, in circumstances that must often have been trying and distracting in the extreme, his 'unfulfilled renown' becomes indeed comparable with that of those other two English poets whose work his own in some ways strangely foreshadows, and who, like him, found in Italy a retreat and a final resting-place.

IV. Contemporary and Posthumous Fame.

It was perhaps owing in some measure to Cowley's famous elegy 'On the Death of Mr. Crashaw' and to Pope's criticism in his letter to Henry Cromwell (December 17, 1710) that Crashaw was less completely forgotten in the first century and a half after his death than might have been expected from the fate of some hardly less distinguished contemporaries. During his lifetime he seems to have enjoyed no very wide reputation. Within the limited Cambridge circle in which he moved from 1631 to 1643 he must clearly have been highly esteemed; but a much more general recognition could hardly be attained before the publication of Steps to the Temple, &c., in 1646, and this was only three years before he died.

The first public reference to his work seems to have been that made in the course of a review of pagan and Christian poets occurring in Canto IV of Psyche: or Loves Mysterie In XX Canto's: . . . By Joseph Beaumont, . . . London M.D.C.XL.VIII, where two stanzas (Nos. 94 and 95, p. 48) are devoted to Crashaw and to an expression of regret that he can no longer help the writer with criticism of his verses.¹ Stanza 93 praises Gregory of Nazianzen.

Various references belonging to the next few years indicate that Crashaw's repute grew with some vigour. In both Carier's Missive to King James, reissued in 1649 with a Preface by N. Strange, and Birchley's Christian Moderator (1652) he is described as 'well-knowne for his excellent Poems'. Two lines (11-12) of his 'Know you faire on what you looke' are quoted in the 1650 and subsequent editions of Wit's Recreations by way of introduction to a part of Vaughan's 'The Resolve'. In 1651 'Jo. Leigh, Esquire', in a commendatory poem prefixed to the volume of Cartwright's dramas and poems, refers to Crashaw among authors whose works had been published by Humphrey Moseley :

*Then learned CRASHAWV's Muse proves to the eye and in the same year appeared Clement Barksdale's Nympha Libethris, Or The Cotswold Muse, with its lines on ' Herbert and Crashaw ' : ¹

When into Herbert's temple I ascend
By Crashaw's steps, I do resolve to mend
My lighter verse, and my low notes to raise,
And in high accent sing my Maker's praise.
Mean while these sacred poems in my sight
I place, and read, that I may learn to write.

In the MS. of An English Traveler's First Curiosity, or The Knowledge of his owne Country, by Henry B[elasyse], 1657 (Hist. MSS. Comm., Var. Coll. II, 1903, p. 194), Crashaw appears in very highly distinguished company : ' What nation can shew more refined witts then those of our Ben, our Shakespeare, our Baumont, our Fletcher, our Dunn, our Randol, our Crasheuw, our Cleveland, our Sidney, our Bacon, &c.' And some passages in Paradise Lost quoted in the Commentary at the end of the present edition seem to show that Milton had been interested by Crashaw's translation from Marino, ' Sospetto d'Herode ' (p. 109, below).

But the early tributes to Crashaw's genius came to their most eloquent expression in the resonant couplets of Cowley's fine poem, first published in 1656 :

*Poet and Saint ! to thee alone are given
The two most sacred Names of Earth and Heav'en
The hard and rarest Union which can be Next that of Godhead with Humantie . . .*

Soon after this, other signs of admiration, less effusive but perhaps not less convincing, began to appear ². In 1658 there was published The Upright Man And His Happy End : Opened and Applied In A Sermon Preached at the Funerals Of the Honourable Francis Pierrepont, Esq; . . . By John Whitlock, M.A. . . . and on fol. G 3 verso of this work a poem is begun which is a tissue of appropriations from Crashaw's verses 'Upon the Death of the most desired Mr. Herrys'. The identity of the appropriator is unknown, but his retribution was swiftly prepared for him. Thomas Shipman's Carolina: or, Loyal Poems . . . London. 1683 contains, on p. 29, 'The Plagiary. 1658. *Upon S. C. a Presbyterian Minister, and Captain, stealing 48 Lines from Crashaw's Poems to patch up an Elegy for Mr F. Not to steal Jewels only, but the Chest

Not to nib bits of Gold from Crashaw's Lines,
But swoop whole Strikes together from his Mynes !

A different kind of tribute was paid by one John Lidyat, in 1675. A copy of Crashaw's works, as published in 1670 (No. 7 in the list given below, p. lii), is extant¹ in which the separate title-page to Carmen Deo Nostro is missing and the general title-page replaced by another, specially printed, and modelled on the abstracted title-page to Carmen Deo Nostro Sacred Poems Collected, Corrected, Augmented, Most Humbly Presented, To My Valentine Mrs. Margaret Neal By her most devoted servant John Lidyat *Death and Absence differ only in this, That Absence is but a Short Death, and Death a long Absence. Who takes every acquaintance for a Friend, is like him who takes every Pebble Stone for a Diamond.—Dedicated in the year M.DCLXXV.*²

Meanwhile the account of Crashaw in Lloyd's Memoires (see Appendix II, p. 415, below) had appeared, to be followed by The Lives Of the most Famous English Poets, or the Honour of Parnassus ; . . . Written by William Winstanley, Author of the English Worthies. . . . London. . . . 1687., which contains (pp. 161–162) a section on Crashaw as rhapsodical as Lloyd's paragraph, describing him as 'This devout Poet, the Darling of the Muses, whose delight was the fruitful Mount Sion, more than the barren Mount Pernassus . . . a religious pourer forth of his divine Raptures and Meditations, in smooth and pathetick Verse. His Poems consist of three parts, . . . Steps to the Temple, . . . charming the ear with a holy Rapture. The

The first piece of real and considered criticism of Crashaw is that contained in Pope's letter to Henry Cromwell, December 17, 1710 (ed. Elwin and Courthope, vol. vi, pp. 116-18), a descant on the theme that Crashaw is 'one of those whose works may just deserve reading'. Pope reserved his highest commendation for the incidental beauties of Crashaw's poetry, and showed his sincerity by borrowing some of them.¹ Yet, in spite of the interest which may have been stimulated by even the faint praise of such an authority, Crashaw's work was with much truth to be described as 'sinking into utter oblivion' in the course of the eighteenth century.² No place was found for him in Johnson's Lives of the Poets, and the mention of him in the Life of West is perhaps a greater honour for both West and Cowley (who is quoted) than for Crashaw.³ Some references in the *Gentleman's Magazine*⁴ revealed a deep ignorance of the original publications of Crashaw's works that was shared in large measure by the first makers of Crashaw reprints.

Once fairly begun, however, the recovery was not slow (see the list of eighteenth- and nineteenth-century editions, p. lxxxii, sqq., below). Shelley was probably acquainted with Crashaw's poetry;⁵ and it is not the least of Crashaw's honours that a part (ll. 43-64) of the 'Hymn to St. Teresa' (p. 132, below) was acknowledged to have been constantly in the mind of Coleridge 'whilst writing the second part of Christabel; if, indeed, by some subtle process they did not suggest the first thought of the whole poem'.⁶

II. TEXT AND CANON

THE works of Richard Crashaw existed in the seventeenth century in the following different forms :

- (1) poems printed singly in volumes of occasional verse or in books to which they were prefixed by way of commendation ;
- (2) six volumes devoted to Crashaw's work alone and containing fresh material of varying quantity ; and probably three ¹ volumes consisting only of republished material ; and
- (3) manuscripts, belonging as a rule to the period before the editions appeared.

Of the early editions of Crashaw only three were published during the poet's lifetime and only one while he was resident in England. Of the manuscripts seen by the present editor only two are devoted entirely to works by Crashaw, one of these (Brit. Mus. Add. MS. 40176) containing an autograph dedication which is now printed for the first time and which is the only portion of Crashaw's works at present known to exist in his own handwriting. The other MSS., usually miscellanies and commonplace-books containing excerpts of different lengths, are copies, at removes probably of varying distance from the original. The MSS. are open to the usual suspicions, but it seems likely that their variants often preserve true readings or represent Crashaw's own retouchings. The relations of the MSS. to the printed editions and to the present text are indicated in the following bibliography ; and the authenticity of ' doubtful ' poems, especially those which have not been printed before, is discussed in connexion with the MSS. in which they are found. Arguments in favour of genuineness are supported by parallels quoted in the commentary.

MS. versions in the British Museum and the Library of Trinity College, Dublin respectively (Nos. 10 and 11 below).

Two of the epigrams in this edition are also given, with Greek translations, in a series of seven epigrams published at the end of Horæ Subsecivæ: seu Prophetiæ Jonæ et Historiæ Susannæ Paraphrasis Græca Versibus Heroicis. Authore H. Stubbs ex Æde Christi, Oxoniæ. (London, 1651). This supplement is preceded by the notice 'Ne subsequentes Paginæ vacarent, visum est adnectere Miscellanea quædam Epigrammata è Randolpho, Crashawo, &c. Græcè reddita. The variants to these two epigrams (viz. 'Christe, loquutus eras', p. 26, below and 'Infantis fore te', p. 31, below) are recorded in the foot-notes. The same series contains three epigrams, also in Latin and Greek, obviously translated from Crashaw's English ones ('Let it no longer be a forlorn hope', 'Two went to pray?' and 'Could not once blinding me', pp. 85, 89, 102, below) unless the Latin versions are Crashaw's own originals. Other Latin versions of two of these three epigrams are in this 1634 edition ('Ille niger sacris', p. 17, below, and 'En duo Templum adeunt', p. 15, below) but it is not impossible that Crashaw made the versions thus preserved in the volume by Henry Stubbs (or Stubbe) and subsequently suppressed them. Of the other ('Crudelis, nonne sufficit') no other early Latin version appears to exist. The three Latin epigrams in question are given in the Commentary, in connexion with their English representatives. See pp. 434-5, below.

The volume of 1634 is on the whole carefully printed, and though not perfect in this respect may well have been seen through the press by Crashaw himself, since he was then in residence at Cambridge. A few mistakes in the chapter or verse numbers preceding the epigrams have been corrected in the present edition.

Designated '34' in the footnotes.

2. Steps to the Temple. Sacred Poems, With other Delights of the Muses . . . London . . . 1646. (Title-pages reproduced on pp. 73 and 147, below). A 1, blank; A 2, title-page; A 3-6, prefatory matter; B-G 11 in twelves, poems and index. Second title-page F 3 recto.

Entered on the Stationers' Register June 1, 1646, as 'a booke called Stepps to the Temple, sacred poems, &c, by Rich: Crashaw '.

Collated with the editions of 1648, 1652, and 1670 (Nos. 3, 4, and 7, below) and with MSS. A few trifling differences between the British Museum copy and the Bodleian copy of this issue are recorded in the foot-notes.

Much of the textual interest of this volume lies in the fact that it preserves the early form of many poems which afterwards appeared in a much revised form in the volumes of 1648 and 1652, but it has also been followed in the present edition for the poems which were reprinted in 1648 with little or no alteration, because of its careful printing and characteristic and expressive punctuation. One poem in this collection which although reprinted in 1648 is, for reasons given in the notes, almost certainly not by Crashaw has been omitted here and placed in Appendix I, of poems probably spurious (see p. 410, below). With this exception the volume of 1646 is reproduced bodily though not literatim, and without following the original order, which was due to a printer's error signalized in a stop-press notice facing p. 1 :

Reader, there was a sudden mistake ('tis too late to recover it) thou wilt quickly find it out, and I hope as soone passe it over, some of the humane Poems are misplaced among the Divine.

The rectification of this mistake is not difficult, the originally intended order being fairly clear from the grouping of subjects and from the order in the corrected second edition of 1648. The actual order of the poems in the 1646 edition may be seen from the list of contents, pp. 199-201, below.

The admission of this probably spurious poem and the unknown editor's reference to Crashaw as 'now dead to us' would make it fairly certain that Crashaw was not immediately responsible for the form in detail of this volume, were there not already reason to believe that he had been in Paris for some time when it appeared. But though he cannot, therefore, have seen it through the press a MS. containing some slight improvements upon the MSS still extant seems to have been used, though probably not an autograph MS., not all of very recent transcription, and not in every respect reliable. That much of it may have gone back at least as far as to 1635 is suggested by the fact that the poem beginning 'Brittaine! the mighty

Oceans lovely Bride,' (see p. 176, below) refers to nothing later than the birth of the Princess Elizabeth in that year, although a longer form had been printed in a Cambridge collection (Voces Votivae, &c.) in 1640. And the occasional imperfection of the printer's copy may be illustrated by ll. 17-18 of the poem 'On a foule Morning . . .' (see p. 182, below) where the edition of 1646, followed by that of 1648, reads

Shall rise in a sweet Harvest ; which discloses
To every blushing Bed of new-borne Roses.

for which latter line MS. Tanner seems to supply the true reading :

Two euer blushing beds of new blowne roses.

Mistakes of this kind might of course be made by a printer, especially if he were setting up from dictation ; but in this instance the reading of 1646 is repeated in Add. MS. 33219 (No. 13, below), which is itself probably derived entirely from an early MS. and not even partly from a printed edition, though not from the same MS. as that used by the printer. It is, therefore, very likely that the printer's copy contained the same error. Such circumstances would be explicable if, as Add. MS. 40176 seems to show, Crashaw was in the habit of employing a scrivener who was occasionally puzzled and overcome by the poet's not too legible handwriting, and whose makeshifts were not always observed and corrected. But though it has thus seemed indispensable to depart here and there from the 1646 text in favour of a MS. (especially Tanner 465, q.v. p. lxi, below) or later printed variant, a good array of examples might also be quoted, and may be gathered from the foot-notes, of the superiority of the readings of 1646 over the readings of the MSS. And one plausible, though by no means certain, explanation of the textual questions which thus arise would be that when the edition of 1646 was proposed, Crashaw hastily went over a MS. of fairly early origin, improving and adding to it without correcting all its errors of transcription.

Designated ' 46 ' in the foot-notes.

3. Steps to the Temple, Sacred Poems. With The Delights of the Muses . . . The second Edition wherein are added divers pieces not before extant . . . London . . . 1648. (Title-pages and engraving reproduced on pp. 204-5, 213, below.) The engraving which should precede the title-page is absent in some copies. A 1, title-page ; A 2-4, prefatory matter ; B-F 12 in twelves, poems and index + title-page to The Delights of the Muses. Fresh pagination then begins ; A-C 12 in twelves, poems ; two leaves without signature, index to The Delights of the Muses.

Collated with the editions of 1646, 1652, and 1670 (Nos. 2, above, 4 and 7, below). Examples of trifling differences between the British Museum copy and the present editor's copy of this issue are given in the foot-notes. There are many more.

In this edition, which is on the whole much less carefully printed than that of 1646, several poems, as stated on the title-page, appeared for the first time and several already published in the first edition were amplified to the dimensions which they usually retain in Carmen Deo Nostro (1652). By 1648 Crashaw had probably been absent from England for three years ; but the supposition that he had written, for him, a good deal between 1646 and 1648 seems a likely one, and, though some of the material appearing here for the first time no doubt represents gleanings from the Cambridge period (especially the poems in Latin), the religious and devotional verse now first published seems likely to have been very largely of recent composition. No fresh MS. appears to have been used for the poems which were here reprinted without substantial change. A few obvious misprints in the text of 1646 are corrected, but many more are introduced and the punctuation is frequently altered in a more modern and less expressive direction. On the other hand, for several consecutive pages, perhaps entrusted to an inexperienced but careful compositor, both the punctuation and the spelling of 1646 are followed almost exactly. This text has only been used as a basis for poems which are peculiar to this volume. See pp. 211, 229, below for the original lists of contents.

Designated ' 48 ' in the foot-notes.

Collated with the editions of 1646, 1648, and 1670 (Nos. 2, 3 above, 7 below).

This is a carefully and in the circumstances a well-produced volume, containing some important matter never before published, but consisting chiefly of poems either first printed in 1648 or first printed there in their altered and expanded forms. It is reprinted here entirely, with due corrections. The numerous misprints which it contains are yet not more numerous than might have been expected from its having been set up by a foreign compositor with probably little knowledge of English and perhaps none at all. The sign 'y' for 'th' in the MS. caused him a good deal of confusion. Crashaw had now been dead for about three years and the volume was no doubt seen through the press by Thomas Car (see p. xxxiv above), who contributes two prefatory poems.

Thomas Car seems to have wished posterity to believe that the twelve engravings in this volume were all from the hand of Crashaw himself, and his words to that effect (p. 235, below) have usually been accepted. But that they need some serious qualification is suggested both by the inequalities of style and technique which the engravings present and by the fact that several of them are marked 'I. Messenger excud.' or 'Messenger excud.' Jean Messenger was a printer and publisher of engravings whose business, according to Nagler, Neues allgemeines Künstler-Lexicon (1840), flourished between 1615 and 1631. An engraving from his studio of later date (1637) has been seen in the Bibliothèque Nationale, but it seems difficult to believe that he engraved these drawings in the first instance for Crashaw's volume, especially as their style is in general more characteristic of the first than of the second quarter of the century. And if he executed some he might equally well have done the rest. One, that heading the poem 'In the Holy Nativity' (see p. 247, below), bears the initials I. G. and comprises a couplet in French. Nevertheless it seems probable that at least the two engravings heading respectively the poem addressed to the Countess of Denbigh (p. 236, below) and 'The Weeper' (p. 308, below) represent Crashaw's own drawings.

Different copies of this issue occasionally vary in respect of these engravings. One of the two British Museum copies lacks them altogether. In the Bodleian copy the engraving usually preceding 'The Himn, O Gloriosa Domina' (see p. 302, below) is replaced by another, as follows:

The engraving reproduced on p. 254 below from the Bodleian copy sometimes appears without its framework and with other varieties of detail.

Designated '52' in the footnotes.

Size $8\frac{1}{4} \times 6\frac{3}{8}$ in. Two leaves only. Poem begins on verso of title-page (p. 1) and ends on A 2 verso (p. 3).

The copy of this work in the British Museum, with the date 1653 added in ink in a contemporary hand, is believed to be unique.¹ The Letter is a longer form of the poem first published in Carmen Deo Nostro (1652), from which it also differs greatly in the lines common to both versions.

Collated with the editions of 1634, 1646, and 1648 (nos. 1, 2, and 3, above). The 1648 edition of Steps to the Temple apparently supplies the 'poemata', printed here, with emendations, between the dedicatory poem beginning 'O mihi' and the poem headed 'Lectori', in the following order; and with the following headings:

The additions to the epigrams consist of five in Latin, of which the two following are also in MS. Tanner 465 (No. 12, below):

O ut ego angelicis fiam bona gaudia turmis, (p. 70, below) and of Greek versions of nine which had already been published in Latin in 1634. The Greek immediately follows the Latin in each instance.

Only one emendation of the earlier text has been found, apart from trifling differences of punctuation.

Collated with the editions of 1646, 1648, and 1652 (Nos. 2, 3, and 4, above).

This volume is a reprint of the editions of 1646 and 1652, and its claim to be the 'second edition' is no doubt made in ignorance of the genuine second edition (1648). It thus has

B. MANUSCRIPTS

10. British Museum Add. MS. 40176.

Size $5\frac{1}{2} \times 3\frac{4}{5}$ in., 59 leaves, bound in vellum.

This MS. was acquired by the Museum in February 1922, and consists of what appears to be an early draft of the volume published in 1634 (No. 1, above) ; it may, however, have been designed for circulation in MS. form. It has a general title-page 'Sacroru~ Epigramātum Liber.', and it contains all the epigrams which were printed in 1634, with the addition of six which were not printed, but which are also found in MS. Tanner 465 (No. 12, below) ; and of which the following are the first lines :

Jam cedant, veteris cedant miracula saxi,
Candide rex campi, cui floris eburnea pompa est,
Ergo ille, Angelicis o sarcina dignior alis,

The variant readings in the epigrams in this MS. are not very numerous, but they suggest that it is of earlier date than the MS. used by the printer.

The chief interest of this MS. lies in its dedication, which is quite different from that published, and which, as appears from a comparison of the handwriting with that of Crashaw's two signatures at Peterhouse, Cambridge, and of the letter quoted above, p. xxvii, was written and signed by the poet himself, the rest of the volume, except the title-page, also inscribed by Crashaw, being in another hand, possibly that of a professional scrivener. The following is a reproduction of the signature :

Tuorum minimorum minimus —
Edm. Crashaw.

This dedication is the only portion of Crashaw's works known to be extant in his own handwriting ; the handwriting of Add. MS. 33219 (No. 13, below), which was once, on the confident affirmation of Grosart, thought to be an autograph MS., is altogether different.

The order of the epigrams in the MS. differs somewhat from the published order. In the MS. they run as follows :

The first eight in 1634, then Jam cedant, veteris cedant miracula saxi—Gutta brevis nummi (vitæ patrona senilis)—Aspice (namque novum est) ut ab hospite pendeat hospes—Ferte sinus, ô ferte : cadit vindemia cœli—Ille niger sacris exit (quam lautus !) ab undis—Ecce hic peccator timidus petit advena templum—Dic mihi, quò tantos properas, puer auree, nummos—Non modò vincla, sed & mortem tibi, Christe, subibo—Candide rex campi, cui floris eburnea pompa est—Ille Deus, Deus : hæc populi vox unica : tantum—the five next following in 1634—Dum linquunt Christum (ah morbus !) sanantur euntes :—En redeunt, lacrymasque breves nova gaudia pensant.—I miser, inque tuas rape non tua tempora curas—Ah satis, ah nimis est : noli ultra ferre magistrum—Uno oculo ? ah centum potius mihi, milia centum :—the thirteen next following in 1634—Arma, viri ! 11. Trinity College Dublin MS. F. 4. 28 (659).

Size $7\frac{1}{4} \times 5\frac{3}{4}$ in.

A seventeenth-century MS. containing Latin poems of a religious nature and other matter, including a list of ' Lord Chancellors &c. of Ireland ', in which the latest year recorded appears to be 1688. ' Classis F ' of the Dublin MSS. is described in the Catalogue by Monck Mason as ' ex dono Reverendi admodum viri, Johannis Stearne, Episcopi Cloghorensis, honoratis nostri Vice-Cancellarii ; A. D. 1741— '. On p. 2 there is a bookplate with crest and motto and ' Thomas Madden of the Inner Temple London Esq. descended of the Maddens formerly of Maddenton in Wiltshire, who are now seated at Rousky Castle in the County of Fermanagh in the Kingdome of Ireland '.

Pages 38–68 contain ' Christiania Epigrammata ' of unknown authorship. Crashaw's Latin epigrams begin on p. 73, with heading : ' Epigrammata Divina Siue Occurrentia Quaedam ex X^{ti} Uitâ et Quatuor Euangelij decerpta. ' Crashaw is not mentioned by name. The epigrams published in 1634 are then given entire, up to and including l. 16 of the penultimate epigram beginning ' Ah tamen Ipse roga '. They are numbered and divided into two parts, each with separate numbering, the first epigram in the second part (headed ' Secunda Pars Epig: Divin: ') being that which begins ' Ulmum vitis ' (p. 41, below). This epigram is followed by that beginning ' Saxa ? illi ' (p. 42, below) otherwise the order of the epigrams in the MS. is that of the printed edition.

This MS. betrays much carelessness and ignorance in its copyist, with full evidence of which it has not seemed worth space to encumber the foot-notes. There is, besides, very little punctuation, and the MS. seldom follows the printed edition in the use of brackets. On the other hand, it appears to have been derived from another MS. and not from the printed text, and it contains some variant readings which may well represent, however dimly, a true though earlier stage of composition, and these have been generously recorded.

Designated 'D' in the foot-notes.

12. Bodleian MSS. Tanner 465 and 466.

Size of Tanner 465, $7\frac{5}{8} \times 5\frac{5}{8}$ in. 110 leaves.

Size of leaves in Tanner 466 various. Crashaw's poems occur in two sections of the book, viz. fos. 1-38, measuring $6\frac{1}{4} \times 8\frac{3}{4}$ in., and fos. 154-173, measuring 8×6 in.

A collection of poems by various seventeenth-century writers, but mainly by Crashaw, in the handwriting and formerly in the possession of Archbishop Sancroft, who lived in Cambridge as student and Fellow of Emmanuel College from 1633 to 1651.

On fo. 38 verso of Tanner 466 the serial number 465 is given, together with the following description, applying also to what is now Tanner 465: 'Poemata varia Lat: & Angl: Quorum plurima scribuntur Manu Gul. Sancroft olim Coll: Eman: Cantabr. Soc: deinde Arch: Epi Cantuar.' There is no sure indication of the date or dates at which the transcriptions were made, and the poems copied seem to belong to the period of Crashaw's residence both at Pembroke and Peterhouse, though chiefly at the former. (See the section on the chronological order of Crashaw's works, p. lxxxvii, below.)

On the front page of Tanner 465 there is a list of contents which begins as follows: 'Mr Crashaw's poems transcrib'd frō his own Copie, before they were printed; among w^{ch} are some not printed. Latin, on y^e Gospels✓ p. 7. On other Subjects. p. 39. 95. 229. English sacred poems p. 111. on other subjects—39. 162. 164.✓ 167✓. 196. 202.✓ 206. 223.✓ Suspetto di Herode. translated frō Cav. Marino. p. 287✓.'

In this list the tick '✓', which has sometimes been printed as a 'v', signifies 'cetera' and seems, for the most part, to be used as the abbreviation 'sqq.' is used now. Of the 110 leaves in Tanner 465, fos. 1-96 correspond to the old pagination referred to in the list, extending on both sides of the leaves up to p. 300, there being numerous gaps. All the pages mentioned, however, are still in the volume, except 287. 'Suspetto di Herode'¹ is in Tanner 466, in two copies, fos. 154-63 and 164-73, of which the second gives the original page-numbers 287, 288, 289, and then stops paging. Beyond this Tanner 466 only contains three poems by Crashaw, and these are also in Tanner 465, viz. :

On the proud banks of great Euphrates flood
Happy Me ! Oh happie Sheep !
O te, te nimis, & nimis beatum,

The opening paragraph in the list, referring to Crashaw alone, is followed by an index of other poems, sometimes with their authors' names, e. g. :

MSS. Tanner 465 and 466, it will be seen, are of the highest importance both for the poems by Crashaw printed in the seventeenth century and for those not then printed, Tanner 465 being, except as regards five pieces, the only authority for the latter.

The following is a list of first lines of poems which occur in Tanner 465 and which were also published during the seventeenth century, the lines preceded in the list by their MS. page-numbers and followed by their page-numbers in the present edition. In the text of the MS. the headings of poems by Crashaw are sometimes followed by the initials 'R. C.' or the designation 'R. Crashaw', and these are distinguished in the present list by an asterisk. In the MS. a stroke has usually been drawn through the poems which were published.

As regards the textual authority of these poems and their relationship to the text of 1646, there is no reason to doubt that, as stated in the index, they were derived from Crashaw's 'own Copie' ; but it does not, of course, follow that the latter was in Crashaw's handwriting or that it was the same copy which was ultimately sent to the printer. As already pointed out in connexion with the volume printed in 1646, the MS. then used by the printer, while agreeing in its general outlines with the

Tanner MSS., appears to contain some improvements on them, though here and there the readings of these MSS. are certainly to be preferred and have occasionally been adopted in the present text. A notable instance of this superiority, in addition to that already quoted, occurs in 'Sospetto d'Herode'¹, stanza 51, l. 1, where the MS. supplies the three missing words of a curious gap, all modern editions hitherto having been obliged either to rely on guesswork or to follow the seventeenth-century editions in reading a blank, indicated by a line. In two or three other places, too, the MS. versions of this poem restore sense where it has hitherto been lacking; of which a good instance may be found in stanza 48, ll. 2-4. Here the edition of 1646, followed by all editors, reads

The fields fair eyes saw her and saw no more
But shut their flowery lids; for ever Night
And Winter strow her way.

and the MS., with evident reason, punctuates l. 3

But shut their flowery lids for ever Night

The general character of this MS. seems to confirm the impression that several copies of a collection of English poems by Crashaw were in circulation before 1646, with mistakes in them which the poet himself could hardly have made, and which were possibly due to faulty copying on the part of a scrivener; and that perhaps, as occasion offered, Crashaw retouched these copies in accordance with his latest inspiration, without, as a rule, noticing the copyist's errors and with anything but business-like consistency. It may thus well be that Tanner 465 and 466, Add. MS. 33219 (No. 13, below), and the published text of 1646 were all derived from separate copies.

The following is a list of the poems in MS. Tanner 465 which were not printed in the seventeenth century and which have hitherto been attributed to Crashaw by modern editors (beginning with Grosart) chiefly on the evidence of the index or of the fact that the initials 'R. C.' or 'R. Cr.' are attached to them in the text.

It must be noted, however, at the outset, that the index contains some mistakes; e. g. in the extract quoted above the page-number following the entry 'On Y^e Lady Parker' should be '233', not '235'; that following the entry 'On an Infant' should be '232', not '234'. Again, the poem beginning 'Ask me no more', on p. 195, is attributed to Sir H. Wotton instead of to Carew, and the mistake is repeated in the text. It must not, therefore, be too lightly concluded that poems attributed to Crashaw in the index or by means of initials in the body of the MS. are necessarily by him, though if the internal or other evidence does not conflict, the assignment by initials may carry a good deal of weight. And, on the other hand, the prevailing uncertainty of the index may afford an additional reason for ascribing to Crashaw any poems which on internal grounds alone may seem likely to be from his hand.

In this list, besides asterisks indicating that the poems in question are assigned to Crashaw by initials, a cross preceding a MS. page-number signifies that the page-number is mentioned in the MS. index of Crashaw's poems quoted above.

It will appear from the first of these two lists that pp. 7-65, allowing for the missing pp. 23-38, are occupied entirely by Latin poems, of which a good number were published, either in Latin or in English translations, among Crashaw's works during his lifetime, and there seems to be no reason, as a general rule, to reject the rest. Three poems, however, provide exceptions to this rule, those of which the first lines are respectively

Dum vires refero vomitûs, & nobile munus,
Quid facis ? ah ! tam perversâ quid volvitur irâ ?
Sordes ô tibi gratulamur istas,

The Latin burlesque poem by W. Hawkins, to which the last two of these poems refer, En Priscianus verberans et vapulans, has for its theme an incident that occurred at Hadleigh School, in Suffolk, where Hawkins was Master, and was first published in 1632. This edition included five prefatory lines (fo. A 2 verso) signed 'Gaguinus Nash Magister Artium'. The same work was published with additions in 1634, with title Nisus verberans et vapulans, and in this volume Nash's verses are supplemented by two lines (39 and 40) from the first of the two poems in question attributed to Crashaw (one word only is changed), and fourteen lines from different parts of the second (with several variants). The contribution is signed 'Gaguinus Nash, Mag. Art. Aulae Pembr. Socius'. It seems likely that Nash offered Hawkins both poems and that Hawkins exercised rights of censorship in the interests of space. There is no apparent reason why Crashaw should have been concerned, and the theme is not one which could be expected to appeal to him. This applies no less strongly to the poem 'Dum vires refero vomitûs, et nobile munus', the composition of which would have been very much at variance with the spirit and the tone of Crashaw's works as they are otherwise known. These three poems are therefore placed in Appendix I (Poems probably spurious).

Pages 66-94 of the MS. are blank or missing or occupied by poems definitely and credibly attributed to other writers than Crashaw.

Page 95 has the Latin poem in honour of Dr. Brooke, followed on p. 96 by the poem on Dr. Mansell, which may be fairly ascribed to Crashaw by its position and by the fact that it is not attributed to any one else in the MS. Pages 97-102 are blank and the succeeding pages to 110 inclusive are missing. Pages 111-34 consist of a group of English poems, all published as Crashaw's in the seventeenth century with the exception of a single epigram ascribed in the Index to 'T. R.' and in the text to 'T. Randolph' (i. e. 'On Good Friday', p. 130), and of the four 'not printed' poems occurring on pp. 119, 123, 129, and 130. For the authenticity of these four poems the internal evidence is very strong apart from their incidence in this large group of poems which is clearly attributable to Crashaw. From p. 134 to p. 163 the succession of Crashaw's poems is a good deal broken up by poems definitely and no doubt fairly ascribed to other authors or to 'Anon'.

Page 164, containing only the poem 'Upon a Gnat burnt in a Candle' is given to Crashaw in the index and has therefore been printed as Crashaw's by several modern editors. It is true that it is not ascribed to any one else in either index or text; but even so there is fairly strong evidence, both external and internal, against its authenticity. In the first place the poem occurs in another Bodleian MS. (Rawl. poet. 147, pp. 14-15), where it is attributed in both index and text to one 'Thomas Vincent, Coll. Trin.'. And the comparatively awkward, jerky prosody and the absence of any imagery characteristic of Crashaw strengthens faith in the relatively unknown Vincent's claim to the authorship. This poem has therefore in the present edition been placed in Appendix I.

From p. 165 onwards it will be noticed that the initials 'R. Cr.' are much more frequently attached in the MS. to poems by Crashaw, all the poems from pp. 165-79 being so distinguished except the poem on p. 166 ascribed to Randolph. This section includes two poems unpublished in the seventeenth century (pp. 176-8) in which the internal evidence does not conflict with the initials,¹ and this applies also to the poem on p. 196 which is placed to Crashaw's account in both text and index. There is no reason, again, to doubt the index on the score of pp. 202-3, containing the elegy on Mr. Stanninow, who is also celebrated in Steps to the Temple, the elegy in the MS. being full of very characteristic imagery. For the remaining eight in the serial list given above (pp. 180-92, 205, and 229) it will be seen that the external evidence is on the whole negative, i.e. neither index nor text definitely gives them to Crashaw, nor are they definitely ascribed to another hand, with the possible exception of the poem on p. 205, which is listed separately though the index is non-committal as to its authorship.

As the chief evidence, therefore, for these poems being from the hand of Crashaw must be derived from the poems themselves, it is well to be sure at the outset as to the kinds of test that are likely to give reasonable satisfaction.

It is obvious that close parallels, amounting to whole phrases or lines, between these more doubtful poems and other poems printed contemporaneously in Crashaw's works, may carry considerable weight, but they can only be admitted as evidence after due allowance has been made for the existence of a stock of conventional images and turns of phrase, upon which any poet of this time would be apt to draw, and for the very general habit of plagiarism, at every stage between unconscious reminiscence and intentional appropriation. In the circumstances it could easily happen that a close and obvious parallel, though valuable as confirmatory evidence, might have much less weight by itself than when combined with parallels which are verbally more distant, but which show how on two similar occasions the poet's mind has reacted in the same way, passing through similar associations without necessarily adopting the same phraseology. And it will be an added advantage if both these kinds of parallel can be supplemented by considerations of prosody, of characteristic poetic gesture, of predilection for certain kinds of imagery, all these factors pointing, though with varying certainty, in the direction of a single author.

In Crashaw, as distinguished from the majority of his contemporaries, the reader learns to expect a considerable sureness and consistency of touch in the management of the seven-, eight-, and ten-syllabled lines, with much successful variety of stress, with numerous rhetorical and dramatic pauses, and with a well-marked faculty for building up the separate sentences into a well-rounded verse-paragraph, often culminating with epigrammatic effect at the close. The poem 'On a foule Morning, being then to take a journey', published in 1646, affords a fair example of Crashaw's average prosody :

Staggers out of the East, looses her way
Stumbling on Night ? Rouze thee Illustrious Youth,
And let no dull musts choake the Lights faire growth.
Point here thy Beames ; ô glance on yonder flockes,
And make their fleeces Golden as thy lockes.

Unfold thy faire front, and there shall appeare
 Full glory, flaming in her owne free speare
 Gladnesse shall cloath the Earth, we will instile
 The face of things, an universall smile 10
 Say to the Sullen Morne, thou com'st to court her
 And wilt command proud Zephrus to sport her
 With wanton gales : his balmy breath shall lick
 The tender drops which tremble on her cheek
 Which rarified, and in a gentle raine
 On those delicious bankes distill'd againe
 Shall rise in a sweet Harvest ; which discloses
 Two euer blushing beds of new-borne Roses.
 Hee'l fan her bright locks teaching them to flow,
 And friske in curl'd Mæanders : Hee will throw 20
 A fragrant Breath suckt from the spicy nest
 O'th pretious Phœnix, warme upon her Breast.
 Hee with a dainty and soft hand, will trim
 And brush her Azure Mantle, which shall swim
 In silken Volumes ; wheresore're shee'l tread,
 Bright clouds like Golden fleeces shall be spread.
 Rise then (faire blew-ey'd Maid) rise and discover
 Thy silver brow, and meet thy Golden lover
 See how hee runs, with what a hasty flight
 Into thy Bosome, bath'd with liquid Light 30
 Fly, fly prophane fogs, farre hence fly away,
 Taint not the pure streames of the springing Day,
 With your dull influence, it is for you,
 To sit and scoule upon Nights heavy brow ;
 Not on the fresh cheekes of the virgin Morne,
 Where nought but smiles, and ruddy joyes are worne.
 Fly then, and doe not thinke with her to stay ;
 Let it suffice, shee'l weare no maske to day.

This poem also illustrates some other qualities of Crashaw's style ; the peculiar lightness, energy, and limpidity of expression—the 'nimble raptures' of which he speaks in another poem ; the comparative simplicity of thought, though the early training in the school of epigram sometimes shows its effect ; and the employment of imagery which though often conventionally extravagant practically never fails to justify itself by a genuinely sensuous quality, favourable to strong contrasts of light and shade and colour, and appealing almost as much to the faculties of smell and touch as to the faculty of vision. The latter sense, however, is the most vigorously exercised, the peculiar pictorial effect recalling Crashaw's known addiction to the arts of 'Drawing, Limning and Graving'

(Preface to Steps to the Temple). The poem also contains some of Crashaw's favourite images, the metaphorical use of 'swim' (l. 24), for example—and of 'bath'd' (l. 30). The phoenix (l. 22) is, of course, no rara avis in seventeenth-century poetry, but it certainly occurs in Crashaw's works with distinctive frequency. But the most common and characteristic of all Crashaw's images is that of 'the tear' (compare l. 14), which in its various associations of rain, rivers, seas, pearls, diamonds, milk, cream, and stars, is contemplated by Crashaw so insistently as to suggest the origin of its fascination in some unusually deep-seated mental bias.

This published poem may now be compared with one of the 'doubtful' poems from the MS, the second of the two on the king's coronation :

Strange Metamorphosis ! It was but now
 The sullen heauen had vail'd its mournfull brow
 With a black maske : the clouds with child by greife
 Traueld th' Olympian plaines to find releife
 But at the last (having not soe much powe'r
 As to refraine) brought forth a costly shower
 Of pearly drops, & sent her numerous birth
 (As tokens of her greife) unto the earth.
 Alas, the earth, quick drunke with teares, had reel'd
 From of her center, had not Joue vpheld 10
 The staggering lumpe : each eye spent all its store,
 As if heereafter they would weepe noe more.
 Streight from this sea of teares there does appeare
 Full glory flaming in her owne free sphære.
 Amazed Sol throwes of his mournful weeds,
 Speedily harnessing his fiery steeds,
 Up to Olympus stately topp he hies,
 From whence his glorious rivall hee espies.
 Then wondring starts, & had the curteous night
 Withheld her vaile, h' had forfeited his sight. 20
 The joyfull sphæres with a delicious sound
 Affright th' amazed aire, & dance a round
 To their owne Musick, nor (vntill they see
 This glorious Phœbus sett) will quiet bee.
 Each aery Siren now hath gott her song,
 To whom the merry lambes doe tripp along
 The laughing meades, as joyfull to behold
 Their winter coates couer'd with flaming gold.
 Such was the brightnesse of this Northerne starre,
 It made the Virgin Phoenix come from farre 30

To be repaird . hither she did resort,
 Thinking her father had remou'd his court.
 The lustre of his face did shine soe bright,
 That Rome's bold Eagles now were blinded quite,
 The radiant darts, shott from his sparkling eyes,
 Made euery mortall gladly sacrifice
 A heart burning in loue , all did adore
 This rising sunne. their faces nothing wore,
 But smiles, & ruddy joyes, & at this day
 All melancholy clouds vanisht away.

It will be observed that l. 14 of this poem exactly repeats l. 8 of the other, and that ll 38-9 correspond closely to l. 36 of the other. But as already suggested it is possible to give too much weight to facts of this kind, striking though they may be. The line repeated verbatim, at least, was worth stealing, and the evidence needs to be confirmed by parallelism of a less simple nature and by reference to qualities which both poems may share with other works known to be by the same poet. It would be of no avail, further, to point to similarities arising from the use of classical personifications, or from the use of the hackneyed similitude about the sun dispelling the clouds of grief or the mists of dullness; or from the presence in both poems of the ubiquitous Phoenix. It is rather in the details of the pictures, in small points of style and imagery closely woven into the texture of the thought that parallels of more persuasive force are likely to be found. Thus it may be noticed that in the first of the two quoted poems the 'blindfold day' is delayed and made to stagger from its course as a result of the unusual obscurity, though in the end the sullen morn consents to wear no mask. In the second it is the 'sullen heauen' which has 'vail'd its mournfull brow with a black maske', and the earth that 'staggers' from its centre under the excessive load of grief discharged from the sky. Again, in the first poem, l. 6, as a result of the sun's appearance, the fleeces of the flocks are to become as golden as the sun's own beams. In the second, l. 26, the appearance of the sun's royal rival will enable the lambs, or the meadows—and in the close association of ideas it hardly matters which—'to behold their winter coates couer'd with flaming gold'. Furthermore, the second poem shows the same easy flow of verse and diction, the characteristic afflatus, the epigrammatic flavour, the cult of luxurious imagery, and contains, in ll. 6-12, a riot of similitudes based on the thought of tears.

It is clear that none of these factors alone could properly carry conviction as to the authorship of the second poem ; but their accumulated weight seems at least sufficient to justify its continued inclusion in editions of Crashaw's works, if not once for all to dispel the mists of doubt. And if this poem be included it may go in company with the four that immediately precede it in the MS., viz. three on the Gunpowder Plot and the first of the two on the king's coronation, and also the poem on the birth of the Princess Elizabeth which comes next after the coronation poems, and the poem on p. 229 of the MS., on the death of Dr. Porter ; for all of which, evidence, hardly less arresting, of Crashaw's authorship is adduced in the notes at the end of this volume.

The discussion and the illustration of the internal evidence for Crashaw's authorship of these poems have been prolonged here partly because the present edition is the first to include five poems from this MS. to which similar criteria have been applied and in regard to which the evidence, though not as finally decisive as could be wished, is yet as strong as such evidence can usually be, depending as it does not on one or two different factors only, but, as with the poems already considered, on several.

The following are the titles of the five poems in question :

(1)	200	On the death of William Henshaw, Student in Emān. Coll	401
(2)	201	An Elegy upon the death of Mr Wm Carre, student in Emān: Coll	402
(3)	233	An Elegy on the death of the Lady Parker	403
(4)	234	An Elegy upon the Death of Mr. Christopher Rouse Esquire	404
(5)	235	An Epitaph	405

The present editor's notice and suspicion had already fallen upon (5) with its ' watry pearls from each kind eye ' (l. 6), when his attention was very kindly drawn by Mr. E. J. O'Brien, of Forest Hill, Oxford, to this, to (4), the long elegy which immediately precedes the epitaph and of which the epitaph is presumably a continuation, and to (1). This led to a fuller and more careful consideration of all the poems in the

MS. not there definitely attributed to Crashaw, and to the decision to print in a special section these three and the two others on what is virtually internal evidence alone, this seeming to demand their provisional inclusion in the Crashaw canon until they can be finally shown to proceed from another hand, or from another hand unguided by Crashaw.

It has to be admitted that there is some serious external evidence against Crashaw's authorship, in that all the first four poems (and as already indicated No. 5 is apparently an appendage to No. 4) are listed in the index apart from the initial section pertaining to Crashaw (see the sections of the index quoted above, p. lix), and two of them (Nos. 1 and 2) are, both in the index and in the text, attributed to another author 'Peter Cornwallis'. Furthermore, these two poems occur again in another Bodleian MS., Rawl. poet. 147 (which contains also No. 3 and the poem on the death of Dr. Porter occurring on p. 229 of Tanner 465—both unassigned to any author) and there again they are ascribed to 'Cornwallis'.¹ As against this, however, it may be recalled :

(1) That the MS. as a whole is devoted primarily to Crashaw.

(2) That the index is both faulty and incomplete.

(3) That in at least one instance the compiler erred as to the authorship of a poem, attributing Carew's 'Ask me no more' to Sir Henry Wotton.

(4) That the ascription to Peter Cornwallis might have arisen from Cornwallis's having claimed them whereas in fact he had appropriated them, or obtained Crashaw's assistance in writing them or induced Crashaw to write them for him.

(5) That Cornwallis is otherwise apparently unknown as a poet, whereas if the ascription to him is correct he is the author of two poems which not only recall features of Crashaw's style and imagery but which vie intrinsically with that writer's best achievements in the elegiac form.

(6) That although with poets of solid contemporary standing, like Donne and Ben Jonson, minute and frequent points of similarity might conceivably arise from obsequious imitation, Crashaw could have had no such repute at the age of twenty as would lead to his being followed as closely as he appears to be

by the author of the elegies on Henshaw and Carre, both of whom died in 1633.

The second of these two poems provides the more obvious though not necessarily the most convincing kind of parallel suggestive of Crashaw's authorship, containing as it does in ll 25-6, almost exactly, the line which has already been shown to be common to the two poems last quoted—' Full glory flaming in her own free Sphere '. Lines 35-6 again are almost exactly repeated in another of Crashaw's published poems, the second elegy on Mr. Herrys (p. 170, below), ll. 59-60 :

Spare him Death, o spare him then,
Spare the sweetest among men.

But there are a good number of more minute features suggestive of Crashaw's hand both in this and in the other four poems, and so far as these indications have seemed definable they are illustrated in the notes at the end of this volume. A few may also be exemplified here, as :

In (1), phrases like ' the liquid jewel of a tear ' l. 24, ' our wat'ry eyes ' l. 27, compared with numerous phrases of similar import and feeling in Crashaw's works.

In (2) ll. 17-18 .

And in spite of the sick steames
And lazy foggs of death, his beames

compared with ll. 29-30 of ' Temperance ' (p. 343, below) .

A soul, whose intellectuall beames
No mists doe mask, no lazy steames.

In (3) the turn of phrase, with inversion in the second line, in ll. 11-12 :

Nor can my humble fancy soare so high
As was her Excellence

compared with ll. 17-18 of the poem ' Upon the Birth of the Princess Elizabeth (see p. 391, below) :

And though these humble lines soare not soe high
As is thy birth . . .

In (4) apart from the fine and characteristic imagery maintained throughout, small points like the use of ' I mean ' in ll. 29 and 36. Compare ' The Weeper ', stanza 1, ll. 5-6, p. 79, below) :

I meane
Thy faire Eyes sweet Magdalene

and the first poem on the king's coronation, l. 31 (p 389, below) :

I meane those three great starres . . .

Or, again, the fondness for the double adjective shown in ll. 1, 7, and 12. A study of Crashaw's works, and perhaps especially of his early works, will suggest that this frequency is characteristic ; often the double adjective occurs, as in l. 1 here, at the beginning of a line, the first adjective consisting of one syllable and the second of two, or three by 'equivalence', e.g. ' Rich liberal Heaven ', ' Fair, flowery Name ', ' Sly lurking Treason ', ' Black dismal Horror ', ' Poor meagre Horror ', ' Dark, dusty Man ', ' Dull, sluggish Isle '.

And in (5) l. 4 :

Which now makes Abram's bosom fine compared with ' The Weeper ', stanza 2, l 6 :

What ever makes Heavens fore-head fine

There remains the poem on p. 205 of the MS. ' On a freind '. This has hitherto figured only in Grosart's edition, and is re-admitted here because the internal evidence (especially the imagery, the epigrammatic flavour, and the fluent expression in ll. 4-5), although on the whole less strong than in the poems considered above, seems to warrant its inclusion in an edition where, if error is unavoidable, it is desired to err rather upon the inclusive side than otherwise.

Other poems in this MS. which seemed to call for consideration have been considered, and though there are several which cannot be assigned to any particular author there appears to be no positive reason for assigning them to Crashaw, and they are therefore excluded from this edition. It is unfortunate that no greater certainty seems attainable at present.

Designated ' T ' in the foot-notes, ' T5 ' and ' T6 ' distinguishing, where necessary, MSS. Tanner 465 and 466 ; ' TA ' and ' TB ' distinguishing the two copies of ' Sospetto d'Herode ' in Tanner 466.

13. British Museum Add. MS. 33219.

Size 6½ × 4 in. 50 leaves, numbered in pencil. No original page numbers. Four blank sheets precede and twelve follow the numbered leaves. One blank sheet between fos. 1 and 2 ; two between fos. 12 and 13. The whole bound in silvered silk.

This collection, though without date or indication of its origin or first ownership, seems for reasons given below in the section on the chronological order of Crashaw's poems, likely to contain only poems written before 1635, and may therefore with some plausibility be assigned approximately to that date. It also contains nothing known to be by any one but Crashaw. It gives the impression of having been designed as a gift to a lady; and since the two dedicatory poems which are chiefly responsible for this impression are certainly in Crashaw's style, it is possible, though by no means certain, that Crashaw was himself the donor. At the same time it is quite clear that the volume, though so catalogued, is not in Crashaw's handwriting. This had long been suspected from the strange verbal errors which the MS. contains and which could hardly all have been made by the poet himself; and the suspicion becomes certainty when the MS. is compared with the signatures at Peterhouse or with the other two known specimens of Crashaw's autograph.

While seeming indubitably to preserve some true early readings, this MS. sometimes shares the errors of the printed editions, and its relation to Crashaw's original MS., for the reason already suggested on p. xlv, above, is almost certainly not direct and is possibly less close than that of MS. Tanner 465.

This MS. is the only source of the two dedicatory poems with which it commences and of the translation from Grotius, 'O thou the span of whose Omnipotence'. The following are the first lines of its contents, the three poems not found elsewhere marked '†'.

14. British Museum MSS. Harleian 6917 and 6918.

Size $7\frac{7}{8} \times 5\frac{3}{4}$ in. No. 6917, 105 leaves; No. 6918, 102 leaves and slightly stouter paper. The handwriting of No. 6917 is apparently continued in No. 6918, with modifications perhaps due to the advance of years, and it may be that the two MSS. were once united, though the pagination is not continuous. There is a note on fo. 2 verso of No. 6917, in Edward Harley's hand, to the effect that the book is 'out of Lord Somers Library'; but of the earlier ownership of these MSS. there appears to be no indication beyond the name on the initial page of No. 6918, 'Peter Calfe'. Calfe appears to be the author of several poems at the end of No. 6918, one of which has a clear reference to the year 1659; but the writing is obviously different from that of the major portion of that MS. and it seems unlikely that Calfe was the first owner.

The two volumes contain a large collection of English poems, chiefly of the seventeenth century. No. 6917 seems to be of the earlier compilation, and to judge by the poems selected and by the evidence of their references to external events its transcriptions were made somewhere between 1630 and 1645. Carew, Herrick, Randolph, Corbet, and King are among the principal authors represented. At fo 54 (p 99) begins a selection of six poems which, although not there assigned to any writer, were all published in the first edition of Steps to the Temple (1646). Between the fifth and the sixth of these intervene the satirical verses on Sir John Suckling, attributed to Sir John Mennis,¹ and Suckling's 'The Reply'. The following are the first lines of Crashaw's poems :

101	Where art thou, Sol, while thus the blindfold day . . .	181

103	A Brooke whose streame so great so good . . .	175
103	To these whom death againe did wedd . . .	174
107	Who ere she bee . . .	195

Of these poems it will be seen from the notes to the present edition that the third and the fourth were probably both written in 1631, and it is very probable that all of them belong to the undergraduate stage of Crashaw's career (1631-4) and were copied about that time. (Cp. the heading to the first of these six poems as copied in Add. MS. 22118: 'Croshe: To y^e Deane on occasion of sleeping chappell'.)

The variant readings presented by these two MSS. are on the whole slight and do not call for special comment here.

The six poems which are indisputably Crashaw's are immediately (beginning on fo. 52, p. 95) preceded by the Epithalamium which is now for the first time included in an edition of Crashaw's works and which seems never to have been printed until 1923.² Its authorship is attributed to Crashaw on the general principles indicated in the discussion of MS. Tanner 465 (pp. lxxvi-lxxiii, above), and for the particular reasons of parallel, &c., given in the notes to this poem on pp. 462-3, below. No poem between pp. 400 and 409 is ascribed to Crashaw with the same confidence that is felt in regard to this one.

² London Mercury, June, pp. 159 sqq., ed L C. Martin.

MS. Harleian 6918 contains only one poem by Crashaw, that beginning 'Deare Hope; Earth's dowry, and heauens debt'. This is on fo. 80 verso, and the poem by Cowley to which it is an answer precedes it, beginning on fo. 80. (See p. 345, below).

Designated 'H' in the foot-notes.

15. British Museum Add. MS. 22118.

Size $6\frac{3}{4} \times 4$ in. 49 leaves.

This volume contains miscellaneous poems (by Randolph, Carew, Corbet, &c.). The date at which the transcriptions were made is uncertain, but it is probable that nearly all the poems by Crashaw belong to the undergraduate period of his residence at Cambridge and were copied then or soon after. The 'Panegyric' addressed to the queen, for example, 'Brittaine! y^e mightye Oceans louely bride' is in the earlier form in which it appears in the edition of 1646 (and in which the latest reference is to the birth of the Princess Elizabeth in 1635), not the form to which it was amplified for Voces Votivæ (1640) and published in the 1648 edition of Steps to the Temple. The following are the first lines of the poems by Crashaw, which extend, with interruptions, from fo. 10 to fo. 29 verso. They are usually ascribed to him by the designation 'Crosch:'.

16. British Museum Add. MS. 34692.

Size $7\frac{2}{3} \times 3\frac{3}{16}$ in. 33 leaves.

The major portion of this MS. is occupied by a sermon by 'Thom. Lenthall' in defence of the divine right of kings and by the preface thereto dated 'Pemb: Hall: Cal: July: A^o 1642://'. The sermon is followed by two of Crashaw's poems, preceded by an emblematic page (fo. 26 recto) comprising Crashaw's couplet

Live IESU Live & lett it bee
My life to dye for love of thee

Designated 'A34' in the foot-notes.

17. British Museum MS. Sloan 1925

Size $5\frac{1}{2} \times 3\frac{1}{2}$ in. 75 leaves.

The contents of this note-book are described on the title-page as 'Poems Characters Proverbs Sentences Historicall Remarques Tales'. There is no clear indication of date. The selections from Crashaw's works begin at fo. 17 and are continued to fo. 27, but for the most part they consist only of extracts, 2-7 lines long. Two of the epigrams in English are given in full on fo. 25: 'Each blest drop on each blest limme' and 'See here an easy feast y^t knows no wound', but for the rest the only poem quoted entire is 'Musicks Duell'. The excerpts were probably taken from another MS. containing Crashaw's early work. The following are the first lines of poems from which they are derived:

Now westward Sol had spent y^e richest bea[m]es
What bright soft thing is this?
Haile, Sister Springs,
Welcome my Griefe, my Ioy; how deare's
Each blest drop on each blest limme,
See here an easie Feast y^t knows no wound
Well Peter dost thou wield thy active sword,
Thou hast the art on't Peter; and canst tell Rise, Heire of fresh Eternity,
Come wee Shepheards who have seene
Who ere shee bee,
Rise then, immortall maid! Religion rise!
I would be married but I'de haue no wife,
Where art thou Sol, while thus the blind-fold Day
Passenger who e're thou art,
Death, what dost? ô hold thy Blow,
A plant of noble stemme, forward and faire,
To see both blended in one flood

Designated 'S' in the foot-notes.

18. British Museum Add. MS. 22603.

Size $6\frac{4}{5} \times 4\frac{1}{4}$ in. 72 leaves.

This volume contains numerous seventeenth-century extracts from Cleveland, Herrick, Lovelace, &c.; Clement Paman is strongly represented. There is only one poem by Crashaw, 'An Elegie on a Scholler' ('ffaythlesse and fond mortalitie') concluding with l. 30, 'Theyr Cadence is Rhetoricall' (p. 166, below).

Designated 'A226' in the foot-notes.

19. Bodleian MS. Rawl. poet. 142.

Size $8\frac{1}{8} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ in. 84 leaves.

Among the extracts in this volume are two items by Crashaw (1) part of 'The Weeper', and (2) 'The Teare'. As usual in the MSS. the version of 'The Weeper', so far as it goes, conforms more closely to the 1646 than to the 1648 text, and the copy may well have been made during the Cambridge period (pp. 79 and 83, below).

Designated 'R' in the foot-notes.

20. Bodleian MS. Rawl. poet. 147.

Size $5\frac{1}{2} \times 4\frac{9}{10}$ in. 140 leaves.

This large collection contains the following poems of which the authorship is uncertain (see pp. lxxiii-lxxiii, above):

14	Sylly Buzzing wanton Elfe	413
37	Hee's dead Oh what harsh Musick's there . . .	393

40	Can such perfection fade? Can virtue dye . . .	403
42	Death hath drawn our golden Carre	402
50	See a sweete streame of Helicon	401

It also comprises the two following which may, on the evidence of MS. Tanner 465 (No. 12, above), be more confidently attributed to Crashaw.

Designated 'R7' in the foot-notes.

21. British Museum Add. MS. 18044.

Size $6\frac{7}{10} \times 4\frac{2}{5}$ in. 188 leaves.

A note-book comprising 'Collections out of seucrall Authors

by Marmaduke Raudon Eboriensis 1662 Hodsdon'. All the material of the Crashaw selections is to be found in the text of Carmen Deo Nostro (1652), to which few variants are presented; it seems likely that these are due to another hand than Crashaw's and that the MS. is derived from the printed book and not from another MS. Indeed this is almost certain from its inclusion of the Latin verses ('Sum pulcher' etc) attached to one of the engravings printed in 1652, probably not by Crashaw at all. The extracts begin at fo. 7 verso, with the general heading 'Out of Crashawes Poemes' and then 'The office of the Holy Crosse' (see p. 263, below). This is followed by twelve of the poems.

Designated 'A1' in the foot-notes.

22 Bodleian MS. 31037 (Eng. misc. e. 13, known as 'Dr. Lynnet's Commonplace Book').

Size $7\frac{4}{8} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ in. 31 leaves.

This contains only 'To y^e reader on Lessius hygiasticon' (see pp. 156 and 342, below), probably derived from either the 1634 or the 1636 edition of that work.

23. British Museum Add. MS. 11258.

Size $7\frac{5}{8} \times 6$ in. 41 leaves.

This is a collection chiefly of late seventeenth- and also of eighteenth-century extracts; and it contains, of Crashaw's, only the version of Martial's epigram 'Four Teeth thou had'st that rank'd in goodly State' (p. 188, below).

24. A MS. formerly in the possession of the late Mr. Bertram Dobell, of which the present whereabouts are unknown. It contains 'The Weeper', part of the 'Hymn in honour of S Teresa' and the epigram 'On the B. Virgins bashfullnesse'. It was lent to Mr. G. Thorn Drury, who noted the variants recorded in the present edition. See pp. 89, 309 sqq., and 319, below.

Designated 'Dobell' in the foot-notes.

C. MODERN EDITIONS

The modern editing of Crashaw's works may be said to date from the year 1785, with the publication of:

Poetry By Richard Crashaw With Some Account of the Author ; and an Introductory Address to the Reader, By Peregrine Phillips.

This is a small volume ($5\frac{3}{4} \times 3\frac{1}{2}$ in., pp. xxiv, 158) containing a selection clearly derived from the reprint published in 1670 (No. 7 above), without reference to the other original editions or to any MSS.

Two years later Headley's Select Beauties of Ancient English Poetry (1787), vol. i, pp. 49 sqq., included 'The Alarm of SATAN, with the Instigation of HEROD', being stanzas 5-66 of 'Sospetto d'Herode'. This is followed by the note 'Translated from Marino, by R. Crashaw, Edit. 1670'.

The first edition to claim completeness was that included in Anderson's A Complete Edition of the Poets of Great Britain . . . London. (The second title-page gives place and date: Edinburgh . . . Anno 1793.) Poems by Crashaw are given in vol. iv (pp. 707-54) and it is stated in the introductory notice that 'His whole works, reprinted from the edition in 1648, are now, for the first time, received into a collection of classical English poetry'. The bibliographical notes show that the editor had seen neither the volume of 1646 nor that of 1652 (Nos. 2 and 5, above), but since he quotes ll. 93-108 of 'The Flaming Heart' (see p. 326, below) he presumably had seen a copy of the 1670 edition (No. 7, above). A few Latin epigrams are included, doubtless from the volume of 1634 or from that of 1670 (Nos. 1 and 6, above). No other sources seem to have been utilized and the edition is of no great interest. The claim of completeness is not justified, even for the edition of 1648, and the original order of the poems in that volume is abandoned.

The next edition was that contained in vol. vi of Chalmers's The Works of the English Poets . . . in twenty-one volumes . . . London . . . 1810. In this again the text appears to be based on the edition of 1648, and the editor has the distinction of being the first to fill up the blank in stanza 51, l. 1 of 'Sospetto d'Herode'. The reading 'proud usurping Herod', for which there is no other authority and which is clearly the result of a guess, persisted in the two editions of 'Sospetto d'Herode' which came next, and which are no doubt based entirely on Chalmers's text. These are: (1) in The Works of the British Poets. With Lives of the Authors by Ezekiel Sanford . . . Philadelphia . . . 1819. 'Sospetto d'Herode' occupies pp. 191-212 of vol. i and is the only poem by Crashaw represented. (2) The Suspicion of Herod, Being The First Book of The Murder of the Innocents. Translated from the Italian By Richard Crashaw . . . Printed by Bournes Jun., Brothers, Church Street, Kensington. MDCCCXXXIV.

A good number of years now elapsed before the next edition: The Poetical Works of Richard Crashaw and Quarles' Emblems. With Memoirs and Critical Dissertations, by the Rev. George Gilfillan . . . Edinburgh . . . M.DCCC.LVII. This was issued again in Cassell's Library Edition of British Poets (n. d.). It appears to be based, independently of earlier modern reprints, only upon the edition of 1670 (No. 7, above).

Since then, (to take no further account of selections) there have been three editions aiming at and claiming completeness, including the poems in Latin. These are:

(1) The Complete Works of Richard Crashaw, Canon of Loretto. Edited by William B. Turnbull, Esq. . . London . . . 1858.

In the preface to this volume it is stated that 'In preparing the present edition, the first that contains the whole of Crashaw's writings known, I have carefully examined and collated all the earlier ones'. It must be admitted, however, that there is no very great evidence of this process, and far too much reliance seems to be placed on the reprint of 1670 (No. 7, above). Turnbull's edition is of little value now that so many poems by Crashaw have been rescued from MSS., of which Turnbull takes no notice. It is also very careless. Many of the numerous misprints in the text are recorded with savage triumph by Grosart, though Grosart had much less ground for self-satisfaction than this action implied.

(2) The Complete Works of Richard Crashaw. For the first time collected and collated with the original and early editions, and much enlarged . . . Edited by the Rev. Alexander B. Grosart . . . Printed for Private Circulation. 1872.

The chief merits of this edition are its inclusion of a freshly compiled biography, with many new facts, and of numerous poems derived from MSS. and not printed before ; its use of MSS. to correct mistakes in the original texts, and its great advance upon previous reprints in bibliographical investigation and description. Grosart not only states but shows that he has seen all the original editions, and he succeeded in tracking down the poems which had been published before they were collected in 1646. Unfortunately, having secured his material he proceeded in his own edition to shuffle it confusingly together, arranging the poems in a way that makes it difficult to see at once from what original volumes they are taken ; and the text itself has but little consistency of plan, no effort being made to show the evolution of the poems existing in more than one form. Perhaps the limits of Grosart's want of judgement in this respect are reached where he cheerfully mixes the two versions of 'The Weeper', incorporating in the revised version of 1648 and 1652 the stanzas which are peculiar to the text of 1646. The apparatus is very incomplete, and the volumes as a whole carry many marks of the carelessness and haste with which they must have been compiled. It was typical of Grosart that having discovered Add. MS. 33219, he hailed as 'hitherto unprinted and unknown' two poems which he prints himself elsewhere in his own edition from the original printed texts.

It seems fair to say of this edition that it is as good and as bad as Grosart's editions were wont to be ; it did some useful work in its own time and still retains a little value. But it falls very far below the standards of conscientious modern editing.

(3) Richard Crashaw Steps to the Temple Delights of the Muses and other Poems The text edited by A. R. Waller . . . Cambridge : at the University Press 1904.

This edition, which has the great merit that it follows a consistent though hardly a perfect plan, and which considered as a mere reprint is more reliable than any of its predecessors, is yet marred by too many signs of hasty editing to be thoroughly serviceable. In the preface it is stated that 'The text of 1648 has been followed but only those poems have been printed which were not revised at a later date for the volume entitled Carmen Deo Nostro, 1652 . . . The text of the first edition . . . 1646, has been collated with that of 1648, and both texts with that of Carmen Deo Nostro, and the verbal alterations, omissions and additions in these three texts will be found in the Appendix, this course being deemed more satisfactory than to form an eclectic text by guesswork'.

Were it possible to be content with a single text of the more extensively revised poems, there might be little to object to in the method proposed here, provided: (1) that all the obvious misprints in the original texts are corrected and no fresh ones introduced; (2) that the variants are not only recorded but adopted where they are necessary to the sense; and (3) that the variants are recorded fully, clearly, and conveniently. In all these respects, however, Waller's edition fails, sometimes seriously—the absence of numbered lines, in particular, combined with the dismissal of the apparatus to the Appendix, causing much difficulty. And then, as already maintained, the static presentation of a changing text like Crashaw's cannot be satisfactory. The different phases must be shown in their proper order and contexts; and any edition that merges in an Appendix of critical notes a fine poem like the second version of the appeal to the Countess of Denbigh (see p. 348, below) can hardly be said to treat its material with fairness and respect. The bibliographical note prefixed to this volume is not adequate to the material.

III. THE CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER OF CRASHAW'S POEMS

The order in which Crashaw's poems were written is a question that only admits of safe settlement in respect of those which can be referred to definite occasions, and these are a minority. But though to the rest no precise date can be assigned with any confidence there are considerations which justify the rough arrangement of many of them in groups corresponding to broadly definable stages in the poet's career and development; and it may be helpful to set these considerations down.

First, however, it will be convenient to supply in chronological order a list of the poems which were composed for definite and identifiable occasions, or of which the publication separately from volumes devoted to Crashaw's works alone supplies a date that will serve as a terminus ad quem. The evidence for the dates assigned will be found in the foot-notes to the poems in question or in the Commentary. The poems attributed to Crashaw for the first time in this edition are marked with an asterisk.

Apart from these more certain assignments, the relative chronology of many poems may be gathered, in widely varying degrees of precision, from indications such as the following :

(1) A hint of date may sometimes be taken from a MS. intimation. Thus if at the head or the foot of a poem Crashaw is described as of 'Aul. Penb.' or of 'Coll. Petren.' there is some reason to suppose that the poem was written during his attachment to the society mentioned. Or again, when in MS. Tanner 466 the date 'Nov. 25 1637' is placed prominently on the title-page to the translation from 'Sospetto d'Herode' it seems likely that the date is taken from the original MS. and refers to the time of composition rather than to that of transcription.

(2) The subjects of Crashaw's poems sometimes afford a suggestion of chronology even though assignment to a particular year can hardly seem justified. Thus the poems on 'the King's Coronation' are, from their subject, scarcely likely to have been written in the first instance much later than February 1626 ; but though precocity such as this would imply was not unparalleled in the seventeenth century it must also be allowed that these poems may have been written, possibly as school exercises, some time after the event which they celebrate and that they may even have been revised before they were distributed or lent at Cambridge. In juxtaposition with these two poems in the MS. occur the three poems ' On y^e Gunpowder-Treason ', which for other reasons, to be indicated below, are also likely to have been written first at a very early date. Several of the secular Latin poems and of the Latin epigrams might also well have been written as school exercises (see p. xx, above).

Again it is to be expected that religious or devotional subjects would tend to exclude secular ones after 1635, when Crashaw left Pembroke College to take up his connexion with Peterhouse and its chapel. It is to be noted that in the list given above of the more confidently datable poems only four are later than 1635, and that of these all are formal congratulatory addresses to the queen, and the last and longest an amplification of material probably written at least as early as 1631; and it seems fair to assume that this diminution is due to the claims of other occupations and interests, which if they left him leisure for writing at all would naturally lead him to write ' divine ' poetry rather than poetry of any other kind. It is worth remembering, too, with regard to poetry on amatory subjects, that the acceptance of a Fellowship meant the acceptance also of celibacy during its tenure, so that even the ' not impossible she ' of a famous poem which for other reasons seems likely to have been written before 1635 might tend to fall outside the range of poetical subjects after that date.

(3) The MS. selections from Crashaw's works often contain a large percentage of occasional poems which are assignable only to very early dates. And where there is reason to suppose that the MS., or the relevant part of it, was copied all at one time, it seems fair to surmise, so long as it is not concluded, that the poems not so datable in the same series are also of early composition. Evidence of this kind may at least have a good deal of confirmatory weight, and it was partly on account of this that it seemed worth while to give a list of the poems occurring in each MS. For example, reference to p. lxxvii, above, will show that in MS. Harleian 6917 two of the six poems known to be by Crashaw belong to the year 1631. If the Epithalamium occurring in the same MS. is his, the latest date assignable to any poem in the series is still, apparently, only 1635, and the poems which cannot be dated may well be contemporaneous or earlier. Similarly, the range of assignable dates in Add. MS. 22118 is 1631-5 and the MS. also contains two of the poems given in MS. Harleian 6917, so that confirmatory evidence is available, for these at least, that they belong to the same period. But the most useful MS. in this connexion is Add. MS. 33219. It seems to be an anthology, compiled for a lady, of Crashaw's best work in English up to date, whatever the date was, and it was evidently all copied out at one time. The occasional verse which it contains ranges from 1631 to 1634, the panegyric poem beginning ' Britain ! the mighty Oceans lovely bride ! ' (see p. 176, below) showing clearly by the omission in the MS. of the relevant lines that ' the Lady Elizabeth ' was not yet born when the poem was written in that form. Add. MS. 33219 also contains all the English poems in MS. Harleian 6917 (except the Epithalamium) and in Add. MS. 22118, and in so far as 1634 may be regarded as a date-limit for the composition of all the poems occurring here—and on the whole the inference seems fairly just—a terminus ad quem is found for many of Crashaw's best-known pieces first published in 1646, including ' The Weeper ', ' Musicks Duell ', ' Wishes. To his (supposed) Mistresse ', and the ' divine ' epigrams. It will be noticed that no poem in this MS. gives evidence that any very pronounced High Anglican or Roman doctrines had been accepted ; and indeed, apart from the ' Assumption ' poem contained in MSS. Tanner 465 and Add. MS. 34692 (where it is followed by the designation ' Rob: Crashaw: A: Pet: Artib: Magister: ') poems of such doctrinal import are not found in MS. form except in Add. MS. 18044, where they seem to be derived from the volume published in 1652.

(4) The argument from the internal evidence of style and literary influence is perhaps the most hazardous of all, but here again confirmatory evidence is sometimes supplied. Thus the assignment of an early date to the English epigrams seems to be supported by their occasional reflection of the works of William Crashaw¹ (see the notes to the Epigrams, pp. 434-5, below) ; and the same influence seems to be discernible not only in the style but in the religious bias of the third poem on the 'Gunpowder-Treason' (see p. 387, below—'his Holinesse a feast Hath now præpar'd'), and the theory that the Gunpowder-Treason poems are more or less contemporaneous with those on the king's coronation thus receives some partial confirmation. The notes to the version of Psalm xxiii (p. 435, below) will suggest that the example of William Crashaw was not forgotten when it was written, and the simplicity of the style lends support to the supposition of an early date.

If the argument from the contents of Add. MS. 33219 has any value it would appear that the Italian influence comes in early, since that MS. contains the short translations from Ceba and Marino (see pp. 188 and 190, below), and 'The Weeper', in which Marino's influence may be traced; and the same influence may also be looked for elsewhere among comparatively early poems, as, if the date in the MS version of the translation from 'Sospetto d' Herode' is to be trusted, Crashaw was still interested in Marino in 1637. This is of course precarious evidence, and so is the occurrence of echoes from Crashaw in the verse of Joseph Beaumont (or vice versa); but this perhaps mutual influence of the two English poets would be most likely to affect works written during the association of Crashaw and Beaumont as contemporary Fellows of Peterhouse. The works of St. Teresa, with their atmosphere of rapturous devotion, seem to have come in Crashaw's way somewhat later than the Italian influence. Steps to the Temple (1646) contains, it is true, the 'Apology' for the hymn in her honour 'as having been written when the author was yet among the Protestants'; but the succeeding poem, with its main title 'The Flaming Heart', apparently borrowed from the biography in English of the saint which appeared at Antwerp in 1642, suggests that the Teresa poems as a whole had not long been extant.

The poems which were added to Steps to the Temple in 1648 show that, apart from the continued preoccupation with 'divine' subjects and the continued and perhaps increased fostering of an exalted religious sense, Crashaw's style was now developing away from the clearly apprehended imagery and precise metrical forms of his earliest poetry towards a freer verse and more complex metaphorical utterance, in which the images, as in Shakespeare's later style, seem to follow each other in quicker succession, without always being clearly conceived or fully exploited; and these are criteria which again may be used as confirmatory tests in determining the period of any poem (such as that 'On the Assumption') which was published in the volume of 1646 but which it seems reasonable, on other grounds, to assign to a later date than the majority of the poems in that volume.

It seems hardly worth space to embark upon a detailed chronological list in which so much would needs be conjectural; but if account be taken of all the considerations advanced above there would seem to be some semblance of authority for the following loose and hypothetical grouping, which together with the safer list already given may serve at least as a basis for future and more precise estimates.

Periods	Groups.
Up to 1630.	Poems on the Gunpowder-Treason and the King's Coronation Some of the Latin and English epigrams. Translations of Psalms xxiii and cxxxvii.
Up to 1635	Latin epigrams published in 1634 Some of the Latin secular poems comprised in the editions of 1646 and 1648 All the English poems in Add MS 33219.
1637	'Sospetto d' Herode.'
1635-45	Latin poems on Peterhouse and its chapel 'In the Glorious Assumption' 'Lo here a little volume' Teresa poems
1645-8	Most of the additions in English in the volume of 1648.
1647-9	The additions to the 'divine' poems which appear for the first time in Carmen Deo Nostro (1652), and the amplified version of the introductory poem in that volume published separately in (?) 1653 (see p xlix above, No. 5).

Tutori suo summè observando.

MEssis inauravit Cereri jam quarta capillos,
 Virtus habet Bacchum quarta corona suæ,
 Nostra ex quo, primis plumæ vix alba pruinis,
 Ausa tuo Musa est nidificare sinu.
 Hic nemus, hic soles, & cælum mitius illi :
 Hic sua quod Musis umbra vel aura dedit.
 Sedit ibi securo malus quid moverit Auster,
 Quæ gravis hybernæ vexerit ala Jovem.
 Nescio quo interea multum tibi murmure nota est :
 Nempe sed hoc poteras murmur amare tamen. 10
 Tandem ecce (heu simili de prole puerpera) tandem
 Hic tenero tenera est pignore facta parens.
 Jamque meam hanc sobolem (rogo) quis sinus alter haberet ?
 Quis mihi tam notæ nempe teporis erat ?
 Sed quoque & ipsa Meus (de te) meus, improba, tutor
 (Quam primum potuit dicere) dixit, erit.
 Has ego legitimæ, nec lævo sydere natæ
 Non puto degeneres indolis esse notas ;
 Nempe quod illa suo patri tam semper apertos,
 Tam semper faciles nôrit adire sinus. 20
 Ergo tuam tibi sume : tuas eat illa sub alas :
 Hoc quoque de nostro, quod tuearis, habe.
 Sic quæ Suada tuo fontem sibi fecit in ore,
 Sancto & securo melle perennis eat.
 Sic tua, sic nullas Siren non mulceat aures,
 Aula cui plausus & sua sarta dedit.
 Sic tuus ille (precor) Tagus aut eat objice nullo,
 Aut omni (quod adhuc) objice major eat.

 Me mea (si rudis est, sit rudis) herba juvat.
 Nulla meo Circæa tument tibi pocula versu :
 Dulcia, & in furias officiosa tuas.
 Nulla latet Lethe, quam fraus tibi florea libat,
 Quam rosa sub falsis dat malè fida genis. 20
 Nulla verecundum mentitur mella venenum :
 Captat ab insidiis linea nulla suis.
 Et spleni, & jecori folius bene parcitur istis.
 Ah malè cum rebus staret utrumque meis.
 Rara est quæ ridet ; nulla est quæ pagina prurit .
 Nulla salax, si quid nôrit habere salis.
 Non nudæ Veneres : nec, si jocus, uds habetur :
 Non nimium Bacchus noster Apollo fuit.
 Nil cui quis putri sit detorquendus ocello ;

 Hæc coràm, atque oculis legeret Lucretia justis :
 Iret & illæsis hunc pudor ipse genis.
 Nam neque candidior voti venit aura pudici
 De matutina virgine thura ferens :
 Cum vestis nive vincta sinus, nive tempora fulgens,
 Dans nive flammeolis frigida jura comis,
 Religiosa pedum sensim vestigia librans,
 Ante aras tandem constitit ; & tremuit.
 Nec gravis ipsa suo sub numine castior halat
 Quæ pia non puras summovet ara manus. 40

Sæpe vel ipse sua calamum mihi blandus ab ala,

Vel matris cygno de meliore dedit.

Sæpe Dionææ pactus mihi sarta coronæ ;

Sæpe, Meus vates tu, mihi dixit, eris.

I procul, i cum matre tua, puer improbe, dixi :

Non tibi cum numeris res erit ulla meis.

Quantus ibi & quantæ premeret Puer ubera Matris !

Nec cælos vultu dissimulante suos.

60

Ejus in isto oculi satius essent sydera versu ;

Sydereo matris quàm bene tuta sinu !

Matris ut hic similes in collum mitteret ulnas,

Inque, sinus niveos pergeret, ore pari !

Utque genis pueri hæc æquis daret oscula labris !

Et bene cognatis iret in ora rosis !

Quæ Maricæ tam larga meat, quàm disceret illuc

Uvida sub pretio gemma tumere suo !

Staret ibi ante suum lacrymatrix Diva Magistrum :

Seu levis aura volet, seu gravis unda cadat ;

Luminis hæc soboles, & proles pyxidis illa,

Pulchrius unda cadat, suavius aura volet.

Quicquid in his sordet demum, luceret in illis.

Improbe, nec satis est hunc tamen esse tuum ?

Improbe cede puer : quid enim mea carmina mulces ?

Carmina de jaculis muta futura tuis.

Cede puer, quæ te petulantis fræna puellæ ;

Turpia quæ revocant pensa procacis heræ ;

Quæ miseri malè pulchra nitent mendacia limi ;

Quæ cerussatæ, furta decora, genæ ;

Quæ mirere rosas, alieni sydera veris ;

Quas nivis haud propriæ bruma redempta domat.

Cede puer (dixi, & dico) cede improba mater :
Altera Cypris habet nos ; habet alter Amor.
Scilicet hîc Amor est. Hîc est quoque mater Amoris.
Sed mater virgo. Sed neque cæcus Amor.
O puer ! ô Domine ! ô magnæ reverentia matris !
Alme tui stupor & relligio gremii !
O Amor, innocuæ cui sunt pia jura pharetræ ;
Nec nisi de casto corde sagitta calens ! 90
Me, puer, ô certâ, quem figis, fige sagittâ.
O tua de me sit facta pharetra levis.
Quoddque illinc sitit & bibit, & bibit & sitit usque ;
Usque meum sitiit pectus, & usque bibat.
Fige, puer, corda hæc. Seu spinis exiguis quis,
Seu clavi aut hastæ cuspide magnus ades ;
Seu major cruce cum totâ ; seu maximus ipso
Te corda hæc figis denique. Fige puer.
O metam hanc tuus æternum inclamaverit arcus :
Stridat in hanc teli densior aura tui. 100
O tibi si jaculum ferat ala ferocior ullum,
Hanc habeat triti vulneris ire viam.
Quique tuæ populus cunque est, quæ turba, pharetræ ;
Hic bene vulnificas nidus habebit aves.
O mihi sis bello semper tam sævus in isto !
Pectus in hoc nunquam mitior hostis eas.
Quippe ego quàm jaceam pugnâ bene sparsus in illâ !
Quàm bene sic lacero pectore sanus ero !
Hæc mea vota. Mei sunt hæc quoque vota libelli.
Hæc tua sint Lector ; si meus esse voles. 110
Si meus esse voles ; meus ut sis, lumina (Lector)
Castâ, sed ô nimium non tibi sicca precor.
Nam tibi fac madidis meus ille occurrerit alis,
(Sanguine, seu lacrymâ diffuat ille suâ :)
Stipite totus hians, clavisque reclusus & hastâ :
Fons tuus in fluvios desidiosus erit ?
Si tibi sanguineo meus hic tener iverit amne,
Tunc tuas illi, dure, negabis aquas ?
Ah durus ! quicumque meos, nisi siccus, amores
Nolit ; & hîc lacrymæ rem neget esse suæ. 120
Sæpe hîc Magdalinas vel aquas vel amaverit undas ;
Credo nec Assyrias mens tua malit opes.

Scilicet ille tuos ignis recalescet ad ignes ;
Forsan & illa tuis unda natabit aquis.
Hic eris ad cunas, & odoros funere manes :
Hinc ignes nasci testis & inde meos.
Hic mecum, & cum matre sua, mea gaudia quæres :
Maturus Procerum seu stupor esse velit ;
Sive per antra sui lateat (tunc templa) sepulchri :
Tertia lux reducem (lenta sed illa) dabit.
Sint fida precor ah (dices) facilisque tenebræ ;
Lux mea dum noctis (res nova !) poscit opem.
Denique charta meo quicquid mea dicat amori,

SI nimum hic promitti tibi videtur, Lector bone, pro eo cui satisfaciendo libellus iste futurus fuerit; scias me in istis non ad hæc modò spectare quæ hic habes, sed ea etiam quæ olim (hæc interim fovendo) habere poteris. Nolui enim (si hactenus deesse amicis meis non potui, flagitantibus à me, etiam cum dispendii sui periculo, paterer eos experiri te in tantum favorémque tuum) nolui, inquam, fastidio tuo indulgere. Satis hic habes quod vel releges ad ferulam suam (neque enim maturiores sibi annos ex his aliqua vendicant) vel ut pignus plurimum adultiorumque in sinu tuo reponas. Elige tibi ex his utrumvis. Me interim quod attinet, finis meus non fefellit. Maximum meæ ambitionis scopum jamdudum attigi: tunc nimirum cum quaecunque hoc meum penè infantis Musæ murmur ad aures istas non ingratum sonuit, quibus neque doctiores mihi de publico timere habeo, nec sperare clementiores; adeò ut de tuo jam plausu (dicam ingenuè & breviter) neque securus sim ultrà neque sollicitus. Prius tui, quisquis es Lector, apud me reverentia prohibet; de cujus judicio omnia possum magna sperare: posterius illorum reverentia non sinit, de quorum perspicacitate maxima omnia non possum mihi non persuadere. Quanquam ò quàm velim tanti me esse in quo patria mea morem istum suum deponere velit, genio suo tam non dignum; istum scilicet quo, suis omnibus fastiditis, ea exosculatur unicè, quibus trajecisse Alpes & de transmarino esse, in pretium cessit! Sed relictis huc numis improbæ spei votis, convertam me ad magistros Acygnianos; quos scio de novissimis meis verbis (quanquam neminem nominarim) iratos me reliquisse: bilem verò componant; & mihi se hoc debere (ambizioso juveni verbum tam magnum ignoscant) debere, inquam, fateantur: quòd nimirum in tam nobili argumento, in quo neque ad foetida de suis Sanctis figmenta, neque ad putidas de nostris calumnias opus habeant confugere, de tenui hoc meo dederim illorum magnitudini unde emineat. Emineat verò; (serius dico) Sciántque me semper se habituros esse sub ea, quam mihi eorum lux major affuderit, umbrà, placidissimè acquiescentem.

The Preface to the Reader.

Learned Reader,

THe Authors friend, will not usurpe much upon thy eye :
This is onely for those, whom the name of our Divine Poet hath not yet seized into admiration, I dare undertake, that what Jamblicus (in vita Pythagoræ) affirmeth of his Master, at his Contemplations, these Poems can, viz. They shal lift thee
Reader, some yards above the ground : and, as in Pythagoras Schoole, every temper was first tuned into a height by severall proportions of Musick ; and spiritualiz'd for one of his weighty Lectures ; So maist thou take a Poem hence, and tune thy soule by it, into a heavenly pitch ; and thus refined and borne up upon ¹⁰ the wings of meditation, in these Poems thou maist talke freely of God, and of that other state.

Here's Herbert's second, but equall, who hath retri'd Poetry of late, and return'd it up to its Primitive use ; Let it bound back to heaven gates, whence it came. Thinke yee, St. Augustine would have steyned his graver Learning with a booke of Poetry, had he fancied their dearest end to be the vanity of Love-Sonnets, and Epithalamiums ? No, no, he thought with thus, our Poet, that every foot in a high-borne verse, might helpe to measure the soule into that better world : Divine Poetry ; I dare hold it, ²⁰ in position against Suarez on the subject, to be the Language of the Angels ; it is the Quintessence of Phantasie and discourse center'd in Heaven ; 'tis the very Outgoings of the soule ; 'tis what alone our Author is able to tell you, and that in his owne verse.

It were prophane but to mention here in the Preface those under-headed Poets, Retainers to seven shares and a halfe ; Madrigall fellowes, whose onely businesse in verse, is to rime
a poore six-penny soule, a Subburb sinner into hell ;—May

³ admiration,] admiration 48 ¹¹ meditation, 48 · meditation. 46
¹⁷ their] its 48 ²⁹ Subburb] Subburd 46

such arrogant pretenders to Poetry vanish, with their prodigious 30 issue of tumorous heats and flashes of their adulterate braines, and for ever after, may this our Poet fill up the better roome of man. Oh! when the generall arraignment of Poets shall be, to give an accompt of their higher soules, with what a triumphant brow, shall our divine Poet sit above, and looke downe upon poore Homer, Virgil, Horace, Claudian? &c. who had amongst them the ill lucke to talke out a great part of their gallant Genius, upon Bees, Dung, froggs, and Gnats, &c. and not as himselfe here, upon Scriptures, divine Graces, Martyrs and Angels.

Reader, we stile his Sacred Poems, Stepps to the Temple, and 40 aptly, for in the Temple of God, under his wing, he led his life in St. Maries Church neere St. Peters Colledge: There he lodged under Tertullian's rooffe of Angels: There he made his nest more gladly then David's Swallow neere the house of God: where like a primitive Saint, he offered more prayers in the night, then others usually offer in the day: There, he penned these Poems, Stepps for happy soules to climbe heaven by.

And those other of his pieces intituled, The Delights of the Muses, (though of a more humane mixture) are as sweet as they are innocent.

The praises that follow are but few of many that might be 50 conferr'd on him, hee was excellent in five Languages (besides his Mother tongue) vid. Hebrew, Greek, Latine, Italian, Spanish, the two last whereof hee had little helpe in, they were of his owne acquisition.

Amongst his other accomplishments in Accademick (as well pious as harmlesse arts) hee made his skill in Poetry, Musicke, Drawing, Limming, graving, (exercises of his curious invention and sudden fancy) to bee but his subservient recreations for vacant houres, not the grand businesse of his soule.

To the former Qualifications I might adde that which would 60 crowne them all, his rare moderation in diet (almost Lessian temperance) hee never created a Muse out of distempers, nor with our Canary scribblers) cast any strange mists of surfets before the Intelectuall beames of his mind or memory, the latter of which, hee was so much a master of, that hee had there under locke and key in readinesse, the richest treasures of the best Greeke and Latine Poets, some of which Authors hee had more at his command by heart, then others that onely read their workes, to retaine little, and understand lesse.

The Preface to the Reader. 77

Enough Reader, I intend not a volume of praises, larger then his booke, nor need I longer transport thee to thinke over his vast perfections, I will conclude all that I have impartially writ of this Learned young Gent. (now dead to us) as hee himselve doth, with the last line of his Poem upon Bishop Andrews Picture before his Sermons

The Weeper.

- 1 HAile Sister Springs,
 Parents of Silver-forded rills !
 Ever bubbling things !
 Thawing Christall ! Snowy Hills !
 Still spending, never spent ; I meane
 Thy faire Eyes sweet Magdalene.
- 2 Heavens thy faire Eyes bee,
 Heavens of ever-falling stars,
 Tis seed-time still with thee
 And stars thou sow'st whose harvest dares
 Promise the earth ; to countershine
 What ever makes Heavens fore-head fine.
- 3 But wee are deceived all,
 Stars they are indced too true,
 For they but seeme to fall
 As Heavens other spangles doe :
 It is not for our Earth and us,
 To shine in things so pretious.
- 4 Vpwards thou dost weepe,
 Heavens bosome drinks the gentle streame.
 Where th' milky rivers meet,
 Thine Crawles above and is the Creame.
 Heaven, of such faire floods as this,
 Heaven the Christall Ocean is.

The Weeper. For altered and extended version of this poem in 52 (and 48) see p 308, below. 48 inserts after title the couplet 'Loe where a wounded heart etc', which in 52 precedes the poem on a separate page. - 5 Every morne from hence,
A briske Cherub something sips
Whose soft influence
Adds sweetnesse to his sweetest lips.
Then to his Musicke, and his song
Tastes of this breakefast all day long

Takes up among the stars a roome,
And Heaven will make a feast,
Angels with their Bottles come ;
And draw from these full Eyes of thine,
Their Masters water, their owne Wine.
- 7 The dew no more will weepe,
The Primroses pale cheekes to decke,
The dew no more will sleepe,

Much rather would it tremble heere,
And leave them both to bee thy Teare.

Sorrowes best Iewels lye in these Caskets, of which Heaven keeps the Keyes.

10 Not in the Evenings Eyes
When they red with weeping are,
For the Sun that dyes,
Sits sorrow with a face so faire.

Sweetnesse so sad, sadnes so sweet.

The Teare

1 WHat bright soft thing is this ?
 Sweet Mary thy faire Eyes expence ?
 A moist sparke it is,
 A watry Diamond ; from whence
 The very Terme, I think, was found
 The water of a Diamond.

2 O 'tis not a Teare,
 'Tis a starre about to drop
 From thine eye its spheare ;
 The Sunne will stoope and take it up.
 Proud will his sister be to weare
 This thine eyes Iewell in her Eare.

3 O 'tis a Teare,
 Too true a Teare ; for no sad eyne,
 How sad so e're
 Raine so true a Teare as thine ;
 Each Drop leaving a place so deare,
 Weeps for it selfe, is its owne Teare.

4 Such a Pearle as this is,
 (Slipt from Aurora's dewy Brest)
 The Rose buds sweet lip kisses ;
 And such the Rose its selfe when vext
 With ungentle flames, does shed,
 Sweating in too warme a Bed.

5 Such the Maiden Gemme
 By the wanton Spring put on,
 Peepe from her Parent stemme,
 And blushes on the manly Sun :
 This watry Blossome of thy Eyne
 Ripe, will make the richer Wine.

- 7 Thus carryed up on high,

 Sweetly shalt thou lye,
 And in soft slumbers bath thy woe ;
 Till the singing Orbes awake thee,
 And one of their bright Chorus make thee.

On the wounds of our crucified Lord.

O These wakefull wounds of thine !
 Are they Mouthes ? or are they eyes ?
 Be they Mouthes, or be they eyne,
 Each bleeding part some one supplies.

Lo ! a mouth, whose full-bloom'd lips
 At too deare a rate are roses.
 Lo ! a blood-shot eye ! that weepes
 And many a cruell teare discloses.

O thou that on this foot hast laid
 Many a kisse, and many a Teare,
 Now thou shal't have all repaid,
 Whatsoe're thy charges were.

This foot hath got a Mouth and lippes,
 To pay the sweet summe of thy kisses :
 To pay thy Teares, an Eye that weeps
 In stead of Teares such Gems as this is.

The difference onely this appeares,
 (Nor can the change offend)
 The debt is paid in Ruby-Teares,
 Which thou in Pearles did'st lend.

On the bleeding wounds of our crucified Lord

I Esu, no more, it is full tide
From thy hands and from thy feet,
From thy head, and from thy side,
All thy Purple Rivers meet.

Thy restlesse feet they cannot goe,
For us and our eternall good
As they are wont ; what though ?
They swim, alas ! in their owne flood.

Thy hand to give thou canst not lift ;
Yet will thy hand still giving bee ;
It gives, but ô it self's the Guilt,
It drops though bound, though bound 'tis free.

But ô thy side ! thy deepe dig'd side
That hath a double Nilus going,
Nor ever was the Pharian tide
Halfe so fruitfull, halfe so flowing.

What need thy faire head beare a part
In Teares ? as if thine eyes had none ?
What need they helpe to drowne thine heart,
That strives in Torrents of its owne ?

Water'd by the showres they bring,
The thornes that thy blest browes encloses
(A cruell and a costly spring)
Conceive proud hopes of proving Roses.

Sinke Sion, downe and never rise,

Her falling thou did'st urge and thrust,

And haste to dash her into dust.

Chorus. Come wee Shepherds who have seene [1]
 Dayes King deposed by Nights Queene.
 Come lift we up our lofty song,
 To wake the Sun that sleeps too long.

Hee in this our generall joy, [2]
 Slept, and dreamt of no such thing
 While we found out the fair-ey'd Boy,
 And kist the Cradle of our King ;
 Tell him hee rises now too late,
 To shew us ought worth looking at.

Tell him wee now can shew him more [3]
 Then hee e're shewd to mortall sight,
 Then hee himselfe e're saw before,
 Which to be seene needs not his light :
 Tell him Tityrus where th'hast been,
 Tell him Thyrsis what th'hast seen.

Tityrus. Gloomy Night embrac't the place [4]
 Where the noble Infant lay :
 The Babe lookt up, and shew'd his face,
 In spight of Darknesse it was Day.
 It was thy Day, Sweet, and did rise,
 Not from the East, but from thy eyes.

Thyrsis. Winter chid the world, and sent [5]
 The angry North to wage his warres :
 The North forgot his fierce intent,
 And left perfumes, in stead of scarres :
 By those sweet Eyes persuasive Powers,
 Where he meant frosts, he scattered Flowers.

He saw Heav'n blossome with a new-borne light,
 On which, as on a glorious stranger gaz'd
 The Golden eyes of Night : whose Beame made bright
 The way to Beth'lem, and as boldly blaz'd,

 By whom (as Heav'ns illustrious Hand-maid) rais'd
 Three Kings (or what is more) three Wise men went Westward to find the worlds true Orient.

Strucke with these great concurrences of things,
 Symptomes so deadly, unto Death and him ;
 Faine would hee have forgot what fatall strings,
 Eternally bind each rebellious limbe.
 Hee shooke himselfe, and spread his spatious wings :
 Which like two Bosom'd sailes embrace the dimme
 Aire, with a dismall shade, but all in vaine,
 Of sturdy Adamant is his strong chaine.

While thus Heav'ns highest counsails, by the low
 Footsteps of their Effects, hee trac'd too well,
 Hee tost his troubled eyes, Embers that glow
 Now with new Rage, and wax too hot for Hell.
 With his foule clawes hee fenc'd his furrowed Brow,
 And gave a gastly shreeke, whose horrid yell
 Ran trembling through the hollow vaults of Night,
 The while his twisted Tayle hee gnaw'd for spight.

Yet on the other side, faine would he start
 Above his feares, and thinke it cannot be.
 Hee studies Scripture, strives to sound the heart,
 And feele the pulse of every Prophecy.
 Hee knowes (but knowes not how, or by what Art)
 The Heav'n expecting Ages, hope to see
 A mighty Babe, whose pure, unspotted Birth,
 From a chast Virgin wombe, should blesse the Earth.

But these vast Mysteries his senses smother,
 And Reason (for what's Faith to him ?) devoure.
 How she that is a maid should prove a Mother,

Delicious deaths, soft exhalations
Of soule ; deare, and divine annihilations.
A thousand unknowne rites
Of joyes, and rarified delights.

An hundred thousand loves and graces,
And many a misticke thing,
Which the divine embraces
Of the deare spowse of spirits with them will bring.
For which it is no shame,
That dull mortality must not know a name. 80

Of blessings, and ten thousand more ;
If when hee come
Hee find the heart from home,
Doubtles hee will unload
Himselfe some other where,
And powre abroad
His precious sweets,
On the faire soule whom first hee meets.

O faire ! ô fortunate ! ô rich ! ô deare ! 90
O happy and thrice happy shee
Deare silver breasted dove
Who ere shee bee,
Whose early Love
With winged voves,
Makes haste to meet her morning spowse :
And close with his immortall kisses.
Happy soule who never misses,
To improve that precious houre :

Seize her sweet prey ;
All fresh and fragrant as hee rises,
Dropping with a balmy showre
A delicious dew of spices.

L Ove thou art absolute, sole Lord
Of life and death—To prove the word,
Wee need to goe to none of all
Those thy old souldiers, stout and tall
Ripe and full growne, that could reach downe,
With strong armes their triumphant crowne :
Such as could with lusty breath,
Speake lowd unto the face of death
Their great Lords glorious name, to none
Of those whose large breasts built a throne 10
For love their Lord, glorious and great,
Weell see him take a private seat,
And make his mansion in the milde
And milky soule of a soft childe.

Scarce had shee learnt to lisp a name
Of Martyr, yet shee thinkes it shame
Life should so long play with that breath,
Which spent can buy so brave a dcath.

Yet though shee cannot tell you why,
Shee can love and shee can dye.

Scarce had shee blood enough, to make
A guilty sword blush for her sake ;
Yet has shee a heart dares hope to prove,
How much lesse strong is death then love.

Bee love but there, let poore sixe yeares,
Bee posed with the maturest feares 30
Man trembles at, wee straight shall find
Love knowes no nonage, nor the mind.
Tis love, not yeares, or Limbes, that can
Make the martyr or the man.

Love toucht her heart, and loe it beats
High, and burnes with such brave heats :
Such thirst to dye, as dare drinke up,
A thousand cold deaths in one cup.
Good reason for shee breaths all fire,
Her weake breast heaves with strong desire, 40
Of what shee may with fruitlesse wishes
Seeke for, amongst her mothers kisses.

Since tis not to bee had at home,
Sheel travell to a martyrdome.
No home for her confesses shee,
But where shee may A martyr bee.

Sheel to the Moores, and trade with them,
For this unvalued Diadem,
Shee offers them her dearest breath,
With Christs name int in change for death. 50
Sheel bargain with them, and will give Them God, and teach them how to live
In him, or if they this denye,
For him sheel teach them how to dye.
So shall shee leave amongst them sowne,
Her Lords blood, or at lest her owne.

Farewell then all the world, adeiu,
Teresa is no more for you :
Farewell all pleasures, sports and joyes,
Never till now esteemed toyes. 60

Farewell what ever deare may bee,
Mothers armes, or fathers knee.
Farewell house, and farwell home :
Shees for the Moores and Martyrdome.

Sweet not so fast, Loe thy faire spouse,
Whom thou seek'st with so swift vowes
Calls thee back, and bids thee come,
T'embrace a milder Martyrdome.

Blest powers forbid thy tender life,
Should bleed upon a barbarous knife. 70
Or some base hand have power to race,
Thy Breasts chast cabinet ; and uncase
A soule kept there so sweet. O no,
Wise heaven will never have it so.
Thou art Loves victim, and must dye
A death more mysticall and high.
Into Loves hand thou shalt let fall,
A still surviving funerall.

Of soules, which in that names sweet graces,
Find everlasting smiles. So rare,
So spirituall, pure and faire,
Must be the immortall instrument,
Vpon whose choice point shall be spent, 90
A life so loved, and that there bee
Fit executioners for thee,

An Apologie for the precedent Hymne.

THUS have I back againe to thy bright name
 Faire sea of holy fires transfused the flame
 I tooke from reading thee. 'Tis to thy wrong
 I know that in my weak and worthlesse song
 Thou here art set to shine, where thy full day
 Scarce dawnes, ô pardon, if I dare to say
 Thine own deare books are guilty, for from thence
 I learnt to know that Love is eloquence.
 That heavenly maxim gave me heart to try
 If what to other tongues is tun'd so high,
 Thy praise might not speak English too, forbid
 (by all thy mysteries that there lye hid ;)
 Forbid it mighty Love, let no fond hate
 Of names and words so farre prejudicate ;
 Soules are not Spaniards too, one frendly flood
 Of Bapisme, blends them all into one blood.
 Christs Faith makes but one body of all soules,
 And loves that bodies soule ; no Law controules

O 'tis not Spanish, but 'tis heaven she speakes,
'Tis heaven that lies in ambush there, and breakes
From thence into the wondring readers breast,
Who finds his warme heart, hatcht into a nest

On the Assumption.

HArke shee is called, the parting houre is come,
 Take thy farewel poore world, heaven must go home.
 A peece of heavenly Light purer and brighter
 Then the chaste stars, whose choice Lamps come to light her.
 While through the christall orbs clearer then they Shee climbeth, and makes a farre more milky way ;
 Shee's call'd againe, harke how th'immortall Dove
 Sighs to his silver mate : rise up my Love,
 Rise up my faire, my spotlesse one,
 The Winter's past, the raine is gone : 10
 The Spring is come, the Flowers appeare,
 No sweets since thou art wanting here.

After l 58 1635 continues :

Whom Ill, and Good doth equally confound,
And both the hornes of Fates dilemma wound.
Vaine shadow ! that doth vanish quite
Both at full noone, and perfect night.
The Fates have not a possibility
Of blessing thee.
If things then from their ends wee happy call,
'Tis hope is the most hopelesse thing of all.

Crashaw.

Deare Hope ! Earths dowry, and Heavens debt,
The entity of things that are not yet.
Subt'lest, but surest being ! Thou by whom
Our Nothing hath a definition.
Faire cloud of fire, both shade, and light,
Our life in death, our day in night.
Fates cannot find out a capacity
Of hurting thee.
From thee their thinne dilemma with blunt horne
Shrinkes, like the sick Moone at the wholesome morne. 20

The joyes, which wee intire should wed,
 Come deflour'd virgins to our bed.
 Good fortunes without gaine imported bee,
 So mighty Custome's paid to thee.
 For joy, like Wine kept close doth better taste :
 If it take ayre before, its spirits waste.

30

Crashaw.

Thou art Loves Legacie under lock
 Of Faith : the steward of our growing stocke.
 Our Crown-lands lye above, yet each meale brings
 A seemly portion for the Sons of Kings.
 Nor will the Virgin-joyes wee wed
 Come lesse unbroken to our bed,
 Because that from the bridall cheeke of Blisse,
 Thou thus steal'st downe a distant kisse,
 Hopes chaste kisse wrongs no more joyes maidenhead,
 Then Spousall rites prejudge the marriage-bed.

Cowley.

Hope, Fortunes cheating Lotterie,
 Where for one prize an hundred blankes there bee.
 Fond Archer Hope, who tak'st thine ayme so farre,
 That still, or short, or wide thine arrowes are.
 Thine empty cloud the eye, it selfe deceives
 With shapes that our owne fancie gives :
 A cloud, which gilt, and painted now appeares,
 But must drop presently in teares.
 When thy false beames o're Reasons light prevaile,
 By ignes fatui, not North starres we sayle.

50

Crashaw.

Faire Hope ! our earlier Heaven ! by thee
 Young Time is taster to Eternity.
 The generous wine with age growes strong, not sower ;
 Nor need wee kill thy fruit to smell thy flower.
 Thy golden head never hangs downe,
 Till in the lap of Loves full noone

Steps to the Temple.

145

It falls, and dyes : oh no, it melts away
As doth the dawne into the day :
As lumpes of Sugar lose themselves, and twine
Their subtile essence with the soule of Wine. 60

Cowley.

Brother of Feare ! more gaily clad
The merrier Foole o'th' two, yet quite as mad.
Sire of Repentance ! Child of fond desire,
That blows the Chymicks, and the Lovers fire,
Still leading them insensibly on,
With the strange witchcraft of Anon.
By thee the one doth changing Nature through
Her endlesse Laborinths pursue,
And th' other chases woman, while she goes
More wayes, and turnes, then hunted Nature knowes. 70

Crashaw.

Fortune alas above the worlds law warres :
Hope kicks the curl'd heads of conspiring starres.
Her keele cuts not the waves, where our winds stirre,
And Fates whole Lottery is one blanke to her.
Her shafts, and shee fly farre above,
And forrage in the fields of light, and love.
Sweet Hope ! kind cheat ! faire fallacy ! by thee
Wee are not where, or what wee bee,
But what, and where wee would bee : thus art thou
Our absent presence, and our future now. 80

Crashaw.

Faith's Sister ! Nurse of faire desire !
Feares Antidote ! a wise, and well stay'd fire
Temper'd 'twixt cold despaire, and torrid joy :
Queen Regent in young Loves minoritic.
Though the vext Chymick vainly chases
His fugitive gold through all her faces,
And loves more fierce, more fruitlesse fires assay
One face more fugitive then all they,
True Hope's a glorious Huntresse, and her chase
The God of Nature in the field of Grace. 90

Musicks Duell.

NOW Westward Sol had spent the richest Beames
Of Noons high Glory, when hard by the streams
Of Tiber, on the sceane of a greene plat,
Vnder protection of an Oake ; there sate
A sweet Lutes-master : in whose gentle aires
Hee lost the Dayes heat, and his owne hot cares.

Close in the covert of the leaves there stood
A Nightingale, come from the neighbouring wood :
(The sweet inhabitant of each glad Tree,
Their Muse, their Syrē. harmlesse Syrē shee) 10
There stood she listning, and did entertaine
The Musicks soft report : and mold the same
In her owne murmures, that what ever mood
His curious fingers lent, her voyce made good :
The man perceiv'd his Rivall, and her Art,
Dispos'd to give the light-foot Lady sport
Awakes his Lute, and 'gainst the fight to come Informes it, in a sweet Præludium
Of closer straines, and ere the warre begin,
Hee lightly skirmishes on every string 20
Charg'd with a flying touch : and streightway shee
Carves out her dainty voyce as readily,
Into a thousand sweet distinguish'd Tones,
And reckons up in soft divisions,
Quicke volumes of wild Notes ; to let him know
By that shrill taste, shee could doe something too.

His nimble hands instinct then taught each string
A capring cheerefullnesse ; and made them sing
To their owne dance ; now negligently rash
Hee throwes his Arme, and with a long drawne dash 30
Blends all together ; then distinctly tripps
From this to that ; then quicke returning skipps

And snatches this againe, and pauses there.
 Shee measures every measure, every where
 Meets art with art ; sometimes as if in doubt
 Not perfect yet, and fearing to bee out
 Trayles her playne Ditty in one long-spun note,
 Through the sleeke passage of her open throat :
 A cleare unwrinkled song, then doth shee point it
 With tender accents, and severely joynt it 40
 By short diminutives, that being rear'd
 In controverting warbles evenly shar'd,
 With her sweet selfe shee wrangles ; Hee amazed
 That from so small a channell should be rais'd
 The torrent of a voyce, whose melody
 Could melt into such sweet variety
 Straines higher yet ; that tickled with rare art
 The tatling strings (each breathing in his part)
 Most kindly doe fall out ; the grumbling Base
 In surly groanes disdaines the Trebles Grace. 50
 The high-perch't treble chirps at this, and chides,
 Vntill his finger (Moderatour) hides
 And closes the sweet quarrell, rowsing all
 Hoarce, shrill, at once ; as when the Trumpets call
 Hot Mars to th' Harvest of Deaths field, and woo
 Mens hearts into their hands ; this lesson too
 Shee gives him backe ; her supple Brest thrills out
 Sharpe Aires, and staggers in a warbling doubt
 Of dallying sweetnesse, hovers ore her skill,
 And folds in wav'd notes with a trembling bill, 60
 The plyant Series of her slippery song.
 Then starts shee suddenly into a Throng
 Of short thicke sobs, whose thundring volleyes float,
 And roule themselves over her lubricke throat
 In panting murmurs, still'd out of her Breast
 That ever-bubbling spring ; the sugred Nest
 Of her delicious soule, that there does lye
 Bathing in streames of liquid Melodie ;

The Delights of the Muses. 151

Musicks best seed-plot, whence in ripend Aires
A Golden-headed Harvest fairely reares 70
His Honey-dropping tops, plow'd by her breath
Which there reciprocally laboureth
In that sweet soyle. It seemes a holy quire
Founded to th' Name of great Apollo's lyre.
Whose sylver-roofe rings with the sprightly notes
Of sweet-lipp'd Angell-Imps, that swill their throats
In creame of Morning Helicon, and then
Preferre soft Anthems to the Eares of men,
To woo them from their Beds, still murmuring
That men can sleepe while they their Mattens sing : 80
(Most divine service) whose so early lay,
Prevents the Eye-lidds of the blushing day.
There might you heare her kindle her soft voyce,
In the close murmur of a sparkling noyse.
And lay the ground-worke of her hopefull song,
Still keeping in the forward streame, so long
Till a sweet whirle-wind (striving to gett out)
Heaves her soft Bosome, wanders round about,
And makes a pretty Earthquake in her Breast,
Till the fleg'd Notes at length forsake their Nest ; 90
Fluttering in wanton shoales, and to the Sky
Wing'd with their owne wild Eccho's prating fly.
Shee opes the floodgate, and lets loose a Tide
Of streaming sweetnesse, which in state doth ride
On the wav'd backe of every swelling straine,
Rising and falling in a pompous traine.
And while shee thus discharges a shrill peale
Of flashing Aires ; shee qualifies their zeale
With the coole Epode of a graver Noat,
Thus high, thus low, as if her silver throat 100
Would reach the brasen voyce of warr's hoarce Bird ;
Her little soule is ravisht : and so pour'd

Into loose extasies, that shee is plac't
Above her selfe, Musicks Enthusiast.

Shame now and anger mixt a double staine
In the Musitians face ; yet once againe
(Mistresse) I come ; now reach a straine my Lute
Above her mocke, or bee for ever mute.

Or tune a song of victory to mee,
Or to thy selfe, sing thine owne Obsequie ; 110
So said, his hands sprightly as fire hee flings,
And with a quavering coynesse tastes the strings.
The sweet-lip't sisters musically frighted,
Singing their feares are fearfully delighted.

Trembling as when Appollo's golden haire
Are fan'd and frizled, in the wanton ayres
Of his owne breath : which marryed to his lyre
Doth tune the Sphæares, and make Heavens selfe looke higher.
From this to that, from that to this hee flies
Feeles Musicks pulse in all her Arteryes, 120

Caught in a net which there Appollo spreads,
His fingers struggle with the vocall threads,
Following those little rills, hee sinkes into
A Sea of Helicon ; his hand does goe
Those parts of sweetnesse which with Nectar drop,
Softer then that which pants in Hebe's cup.
The humourous strings expound his learned touch,
By various Glosses ; now they seeme to grutch,
And murmur in a buzzing dinne, then gingle
In shrill tongu'd accents : striving to bee single. 130

Every smooth turne, every delicious stroake
Gives life to some new Grace ; thus doth h'invoke Sweetnesse by all her Names ; thus, bravely thus (Fraught with a fury so harmonious)
The Lutes light Genius now does proudly rise,
Heav'd on the surges of swolne Rapsodies.

The Delights of the Muses. 153

Whose flourish (Meteor-like) doth curle the aire
 With flash of high-borne fancyes : here and there
 Dancing in lofty measures, and anon
 Creeps on the soft touch of a tender tone 140
 Whose trembling murmurs melting in wild aires
 Runs to and fro, complaining his sweet cares
 Because those pretious mysteryes that dwell,
 In musick's ravish't soule hee dare not tell,
 But whisper to the world : thus doe they vary
 Each string his Note, as if they meant to carry Their Masters blest soule (snatcht out at his Eares
 By a strong Extasy) through all the sphæares
 Of Musicks heaven ; and seat it there on high
 In th' Empyræum of pure Harmony. 150
 At length (after so long, so loud a strife
 Of all the strings, still breathing the best life
 Of blest variety attending on
 His fingers fairest revolution
 In many a sweet rise, many as sweet a fall)
 A full-mouth Diapason swallowes all.

This done, hee lists what shee would say to this,
 And shee although her Breath's late exercise
 Had dealt too roughly with her tender throate,
 Yet summons all her sweet powers for a Noate 160
 Alas ! in vaine ! for while (sweet soule) shee tryes
 To measure all those wild diversities
 Of chatt'ring stringes, by the small size of one
 Poore simple voyce, rais'd in a Naturall Tone ;
 Shee failes, and failing grieves, and grieving dyes.
 Shee dyes ; and leaves her life the Victors prise, Falling upon his Lute ; ô fit to have

*Out of Virgil,
In the praise of the Spring.*

ALL Trees, all leavy Groves confesse the Spring
Their gentlest friend, then, then the lands begin
To swell with forward pride, and seed desire
To generation ; Heavens Almighty Sire
Melts on the Bosome of his Love, and powres
Himselfe into her lap in fruitfull showers.
And by a soft insinuation, mixt
With earths large Masse, doth cherish and assist
Her weake conceptions ; No loane shade, but rings
With chatting Birds delicious murmurings 10
Then Venus mild instinct (at set times) yeilds
The Herds to kindly meetings, then the fields
(Quick with warme Zephires lively breath) lay forth
Their pregnant Bosomes in a fragrant Birth.
Each body's plump and jucy, all things full
Of supple moisture : no coy twig but will Trust his beloved bosome to the Sun
(Growne lusty now ;) No Vine so weake and young
That feares the foule-mouth'd Auster, or those stormes
That the Southwest-wind hurries in his Armes, 20
But hasts her forward Blossomes, and layes out
Freely layes out her leaves : Nor doe I doubt
But when the world first out of Chaos sprang
So smil'd the Dayes, and so the tenor ran
Of their felicity. A spring was there,
An everlasting spring, the jolly yeare

The beginning of Heliodorus.

THE smiling Morne had newly wak't the Day,
And tipt the mountaines in a tender ray :
When on a hill (whose high Imperious brow
Lookes downe, and sees the humble Nile below
Licke his proud feet, and hast into the seas
Through the great mouth thats nam'd from Hercules)
A band of men, rough as the Armes they wore
Look't round, first to the sea, then to the shore.
The shore that shewed them what the sea deny'd,
Hope of a prey. There to the maine land ty'd 10
A ship they saw, no men shee had ; yet prest
Appear'd with other lading, for her brest
Deep in the groaning waters wallowed
Vp to the third Ring ; o're the shore was spread
Death's purple triumph, on the blushing ground
Lifes late forsaken houses all lay drown'd
In their owne bloods deare deluge, some new dead,
Some panting in their yet warme ruines bled :
While their affrighted soules, now wing'd for flight
Lent them the last flash of her glimmering light. 20
Those yet fresh streames which crawled every where Shew'd, that sterne warre had newly bath'd him there :
Nor did the face of this disaster show
Markes of a fight alone, but feasting too,
A miserable and a monstrous feast,
Where hungry warre had made himself a Guest :
And comming late had eat up Guests and all,
Who prov'd the feast to their owne funerall, &c.

Out of the Greeke Cupid's Cryer.

LOve is lost, nor can his Mother
Her little fugitive discover :
Shee seekes, shee sighs, but no where spyes him ;
Love is lost ; and thus shee cryes him.

O yes ! if any happy eye,
This roaving wanton shall descry :
Let the finder surely know
Mine is the wagge ; Tis I that owe
The winged wand'rer, and that none
May thinke his labour vainely gone, 10
The glad descryer shall not misse,
To tast the Nectar of a kisse
From Venus lipps. But as for him
That brings him to mee, hee shall swim
In riper joyes : more shall bee his (Venus assures him) then a kisse ;
But least your eye discerning slide
These markes may bee your judgements guide ;
His skin as with a fiery blushing
High-colour'd is ; His eyes still flushing 20
With nimble flames, and though his mind
Be ne're so curst, his Tongue is kind :
For never were his words in ought
Found the pure issue of his thought.
The working Bees soft melting Gold,
That which their waxen Mines enfold,
Flow not so sweet as doe the Tones
Of his tun'd accents ; but if once
His anger kindle, presently
It boyles out into cruelty, 30
And fraud : Hee makes poore mortalls hurts,
The objects of his cruell sports.
With dainty curles his froward face
Is crown'd about ; But ô what place,
What farthest nooke of lowest Hell

 Of Heavens high'st Arches to fall narrow.
 The Gold that on his Quiver smiles,
 Deceives mens feares with flattering wiles. 50
 But ô (too well my wounds can tell)
 With bitter shafts 'tis sauc't too well.
 Hee is all cruell, cruell all ;
 His Torch Imperious though but small
 Makes the Sunne (of flames the sire)
 Worse then Sun-burnt in his fire.
 Wheresoe're you chance to find him
 Cease him, bring him, (but first bind him)
 Pitty not him, but feare thy selfe
 Though thou see the crafty Elfe, 60
 Tell down his Silver-drops unto thee,
 They'r counterfeit, and will undoe thee.
 With baited smiles if he display
 His fawning cheeks, looke not that way
 If hee offer sugred kisses,
 Start, and say, The Serpent hisses.
 Draw him, drag him, though hee pray
 Wooe, intreat, and crying say
 Prethee, sweet now let me goe,
 Here's my Quiver Shafts and Bow, 70
 I'll give thee all, take all, take heed
 Lest his kindnesse make thee bleed.
 What e're it be Love offers, still presume
 That though it shines, 'tis fire and will consume.

Vpon the Death of a Gentleman.

Faithlesse and fond Mortality,
Who will ever credit thee ?
Fond and faithlesse thing ! that thus,
In our best hopes beguilest us.
What a reckoning hast thou made,
Of the hopes in him we laid ?
For Life by volumes lengthened,
A Line or two, to speake him dead.
For the Laurell in his verse,
The sullen Cypresse o're his Herse.
For a silver-crowned Head,
A durty pillow in Death's Bed.
For so deare, so deep a trust,
Sad requitall, thus much dust !
Now though the blow that snatcht him hence,
Stopt the Mouth of Eloquence,
Though shee be dumbe e're since his Death,
Not us'd to speake but in his Breath,
Yet if at least shee not denyes,

 Still lives, which when weake Time shall be pour'd out

Here, ô here we should have knowne it,
 Here or no where hee'd have showne it
 For hee whose pretious memory,
 Bathes in Teares of every eye :
 Hee to whom our sorrow brings,
 All the streames of all her springs : 10
 Was so rich in Grace and Nature,
 In all the gifts that blesse a Creature.
 The fresh hopes of his lovely Youth,
 Flourisht in so faire a growth.
 So sweet the Temple was, that shrin'd
 The Sacred sweetnesse of his mind.
 That could the Fates know to relent ?
 Could they know what mercy meant ;
 Or had ever learnt to beare,
 The soft tincture of a Teare : 20
 Teares would now have flow'd so deepe,
 As might have taught Griefe how to weepe.
 Now all their steely operation,
 Would quite have lost the cruell fashion.
 Sicknesse would have gladly been,
 Sick himselfe to have sav'd him :
 And his Feaver wish'd to prove Burning, onely in his Love.

The Muses with their teares supply.

Vpon Mr. Staninough's Death.

D Eare reliques of a dislodg'd soule, whose lacke
Makes many a mourning Paper put on blacke ;
O stay a while e're thou draw in thy Head,
And wind thy selfe up close in thy cold Bed :
Stay but a little while, untill I call
A summons, worthy of thy Funerall.
Come then youth, Beauty, and Blood, all ye soft powers,
Whose silken flatteryes swell a few fond houres
Into a false Eternity, come man,
(Hyperbolized nothing !) know thy span. 10
Take thine owne measure here, downe, downe, and bow
Before thy selfe in thy Idæa, thou
Huge emptinesse contract thy bulke, and shrinke
All thy wild Circle to a point ! ô sinke
Lower, and lower yet ; till thy small size,
Call Heaven to looke on thee with narrow eyes ;
Lesser and lesser yet, till thou begin
To show a face, fit to confesse thy kin

 Thy selfe in this unfeign'd reflection ;
 Here gallant Ladyes, this unpartiall glasse
 (Through all your painting) shoves you your own face.
 These Death-seal'd Lipps are they dare give the lye,
 To the proud hopes of poor Mortality.
 These curtain'd windowes, this selfe-prison'd eye,

Not yet exhaust ? O no. Heavens have no bound,
But in their infinite and endlesse Round
Embrace themselves. Our measure is not theirs ; [Embraee 48]
Nor may the pov'rtie of mans narrow prayers
Span their immensitie. More Princes come :
Rebellion, stand thou by ; Mischief, make room :

But stay, what glimpse was that ? why blusht the day ?
 Why ran the started aire trembling away ?
 Who's this that comes circled in rayes, that scorne
 Acquaintance with the Sunne ? what second Morne
 At mid-day opes a presence which Heavens eye 70
 Stands off and points at ? is't some Deity
 Stept from her Throne of starres deignes to be seene ?
 Is it some Deity ? or is't our Queene ?
 'Tis shee, 'tis shee : her awfull Beauties chase

 That word's a warrant, by whose vertue I
 Have full authority to bid you Dy

Dy, dy, foul misbegotten Monsters ; Dy :
 Make haste away, or e'r the world's bright Eye
 Blush to a cloud of bloud. O farre from men
 Fly hence, and in your Hyperborean den
 Hide you for evermore, and murmure there
 Where none but Hell may heare, nor our soft aire
 Shrink at the hatefull sound. Mean while we bear
 High as the brow of Heaven, the noble noise
 And name of these our just and righteous joyes,
 Where Envie shall not reach them, nor those eares
 Whose tune keeps time to ought below the spheres.

But thou, sweet supernumerary Starre,
 Shine forth ; nor fear the threats of boyst'rous Warre.
 The face of things has therefore frown'd a while
 On purpose, that to thee and thy pure smile
 The world might ow an universall calm ;
 While thou, fair Halcyon, on a sea of balm
 Shalt flote ; where while thou layst thy lovely head,
 The angry billows shall but make thy bed .
 Storms, when they look on thee, shall straight relent ;
 And Tempests, when they tast thy breath, repent
 To whispers soft as thine own slumbers be,
 Or souls of Virgins which shall sigh for thee.

Shine then, sweet supernumerary Starre ;

Ah my Heart, her eyes and shee,
 Have taught thee new Astrology.
 How e're Loves native houres were set,
 What ever starry Synod met,
 'Tis in the mercy of her eye,
 If poore Love shall live or dye.

If those sharpe Rayes putting on Points of Death bid Love be gone
 (Though the Heavens in counsell sate,
 To crowne an uncontrouled Fate,
 Though their best Aspects twin'd upon
 The kindest Constellation,
 Cast amorous glances on his Birth,
 And whisper'd the confederate Earth
 To pave his pathes with all the good
 That warmes the Bed of youth and blood)
 Love ha's no plea against her eye
 Beauty frownes, and Love must dye.

But if her milder influence move ;
 And guild the hopes of humble Love :
 (Though heavens inauspicious eye
 Lay blacke on loves Nativitye ;
 Though every Diamond in Loves crowne
 Fixt his forehead to a frowne,)
 Her Eye a strong appeale can give,
 Beauty smiles and love shall live.

O if Love shall live, ô where
 But in her Eye, or in her Eare,
 In her Brest, or in her Breath,
 Shall I hide poore Love from Death ?
 For in the life ought else can give,
 Love shall dye although he live.

Or if Love shall dye, ô where,
 But in her Eye, or in her Eare,
 In her Breath, or in her Breast,
 Shall I Build his funerall Nest ?
 While Love shall thus entombed lye,
 Love shall live, although he dye.

 Mârs ne sub his oculis esset, an esset Amor.
 Quippe illic Mars est, sed qui bene possit amari ;
 Est & Amor certe, sed metuendus Amor :
 Talis Amor, talis Mars est ibi cernere ; qualis
 Seu puer hic esset, sive vir ille deus.
 Hic tibi jam scitus succedit in oscula fratris,
 Res (ecce !) in lusus non operosa tuos.
 Basia jam veniant tua quantacunque caterva ;
 Jam quocunque tuus murmure ludat amor. 30
 En ! Tibi materies tenera & tractabilis hic est :
 Hic ad blanditias est tibi cera satis.
 Salve infans, tot basiolis, molle argumentum,
 Maternis labiis dulce negotiolum,
 O salve ! Nam te nato, puer auræe, natus
 Et Carolo & Mariæ tertius est oculus.

 How Love came nak't, a Boy, and blind?
 'Tis this; listning one day too long,

 The extasie of a delight
 So much o're-mastring all his might,
 To that one Sense, made all else thrall,
 And so he lost his Clothes, eyes, heart and all.

An Epitaph

Vpon Mr. Ashton a conformable Citizen.

THE modest front of this small floore
 Beleeve mee, Reader can say more
 Then many a braver Marble can ;
Here lyes a truly honest man.
 One whose Conscience was a thing,
 That troubled neither Church nor King.
 One of those few that in this Towne,
 Honour all Preachers ; heare their owne.
 Sermons he heard, yet not so many,
 As left no time to practise any. 10
 Hee heard them reverently, and then
 His practice preach'd them o're agen.
 His Parlour-Sermons rather were
 Those to the Eye, then to the Eare.
 His prayers tooke their price and strength
 Not from the lowdnesse, nor the length.
 Hee was a Protestant at home,
 Not onely in despiht of Rome.
 Hee lov'd his Father ; yet his zeale
 Tore not off his Mothers veile. 20
 To th'Church hee did allow her Dresse,
 True Beauty, to true Holinesse.
 Peace, which hee lov'd in Life, did lend
 Her hand to bring him to his end ;
 When Age and Death call'd for the score,
 No surfets were to reckon for.
 Death tore not (therefore) but sans strife
 Gently untwin'd his thread of Life.
 What remains then, but that Thou
 Write these lines, Reader, in thy Brow, 30

Rex Redux.

Ille redit, redit. Hoc populi bona murmura volvunt;
Publicus hoc (audin' ?) plausus ad astra refert :
Hoc omni sedet in vultu commune serenum ;
Omnibus hinc una est lætitiæ facies.
Rex noster, lux nostra redit ; redeuntis ad ora
Arridet totis Anglia læta genis :
Quisque suos oculos oculis accendit ab istis ;
Atque novum sacro sumit ab ore diem.
Forte roges tanto quæ digna pericula plausu
Evadat Carolus, quæ mala, quosve metus :
Anne pererrati male fida volumina ponti
Ausa illum terris pene negare suis :
Hospitis an nimii rursus sibi conscia, tellus
Vix bene speratum reddat Ibera caput.
Nil horum ; nec enim male fida volumina ponti
Aut sacrum tellus vidit Ibera caput.
Verus amor tamen hæc sibi falsa pericula fingit :
(Falsa peric'la solet fingere verus amor)
At Carolo qui falsa timet, nec vera timeret :
(Vera peric'la solet temnere verus amor)
Illi falsa timens, sibi vera pericula temnens,
Non solum est fidus, sed quoque fortis amor.
Interea nostri satis ille est causa triumphi :
Et satis (ah !) nostri causa doloris erat.
Causa doloris erat Carolus, sospes licet esset ;
Anglia quod saltem dicere posset, Abest.
Et satis est nostri Carolus nunc causa triumphi ;
Dicere quod saltem possumus, Ille redit.

Come and let us live my Deare,
 Let us love and never feare,
 What the sowrest Fathers say :
 Brightest Sol that dyes to day
 Lives againe as blith to morrow,
 But if we darke sons of sorrow
 Set ; ô then, how long a Night
 Shuts the Eyes of our short light !
 Then let amorous kisses dwell
 On our lips, begin and tell
 A Thousand, and a Hundred, score
 An Hundred, and a Thousand more,
 Till another Thousand smother
 That, and that wipe of another.
 Thus at last when we have numbred
 Many a Thousand, many a Hundred ;
 Wee'l confound the reckoning quite,
 And lose our selves in wild delight :
 While our joyes so multiply,
 As shall mocke the envious eye.

W^Ho ere shee bee,
That not impossible shee
That shall command my heart and mee ;

Where ere shee lye,

Of Chrystall flesh, through which to shine :

Meet you her my wishes, .
Bespeake her to my blisses,
And bee yee call'd my absent kisses.

*Durus es, ah, quisquis tam dulcia vincula solvis ;
Quæ ligat, & quibus est ipse ligatus Amor.
O bene junctarum divortia sæva sororum,
Tam penitus mixtas quæ tenuère manus !
Nam quæ (tam varia) in tam mutua viscera vivunt ?
Aut ubi, quæ duo sunt, tam propè sunt eadem ?
Alternis sese circum amplexuntur in ulnis :
Extrâque & suprâ, subter & intus eunt.
Non tam Nympha tenax, Baccho jam mista marito,
Abdidit in liquidos mascula vina sinus. 20
Compare jam dempto, saltem sua murmura servat
Turtur ; & in viduos vivit amara modos.
At Fidei sit demptus Amor ; non illa dolebit,
Non erit impatiens, ægrâque : jam moritur.
Palma, marem cui tristis hyems procul abstulit umbram,
Protinus in viridem procubuit faciem ?
Undique circumfert caput, omnibus annuit Euris ;
Siqua maritalem misceat aura comam :
Ah misera, expectat longum, lentumque expirat,
Et demum totis excutitur foliis. 30
At sine Amore Fides, nec tantum vivere perstat
Quo dici possit vel moritura Fides.
Mortua jam nunc est : nisi demum mortua non est
Corporea hæc, animâ deficiente, domus.
Corpore ab hoc Fidei hanc animam si demis Amoris,
Jam tua sola quidem est, sed malè sola Fides.
Hectore ab hoc, currus quem jam nunc sentit Achillis,
Hectora eum speres quem modò sensit herus ?
Tristes exuvias, Oetæi frustra furoris,
(Vanus) in Alcidæ nomen & acta vocas ? 40
Vel satis in monstra hæc, plus quam Nemeæa, malorum
Hoc Fidei torvum & triste cadaver erit ?
Immo, Fidem usquè suos velut ipse Amor ardet amores ;
Sic in Amore fidem comprobât ipsa Fides.*

Probare in uno juvene quid queant omnes,
Fecere. tantæ terra impar fuit liti,
Ergo hic ab ipso Judicem manent cælo.

Et sibi & Academiae parturientem.

HUc ô sacris circumflua cœtibus,
Huc ô frequentem, Musa, choris pedem
Fer, annuo doctum labore
Purpureas agitare cunas.
Fœcunditatem provocat, en, tuam
Maria partu nobilis altero,
Prolémque Musarum ministram
Egregius sibi pœscit Infans.
Nempe Illa nunquam pignore simplici
Sibi soli facta puerpera est :
Partu represso, vel absens,
Perpetuos procreat gemellos.
Hos Ipsa partus scilicet efficit,
Inque ipsa vires carmina suggerit,
Quæ spiritum vitæque donat
Principibus simul & Camœnis.
Possit Camœnas, non sine Numine,
Lassare nostras Diva puerpera,
Et gaudiis siccare totam
Perpetuis Heliconis undam.

An Apologie for the length of the following Panegyrick.

WHEN you are Mistresse of the song,
Mighty Queen, to thinke it long,
Were treason 'gainst that Majesty
Your vertue wears. Your modesty
Yet thinks it so. But ev'n that too
(Infinite, since part of You)
New matter for our Muse supplies,
And so allowes what it denies.
Say then Dread Queen, how may we doe
To mediate 'twixt your self and You ? 10
That so our sweetly temper'd song
Nor be to short, nor seeme to long.
Needs must your Noble prayses strength
That made it long excuse the length.

Progressions 'twixt whose termes poor time grows old ?
 With thee alone he weares no beard, thy braine
 Gives him the morning worlds fresh gold againe.
 'Twas only Paradice, 'tis onely thou,
 Whose fruit and blossoms both blesse the same bough. 20
 Proud in the patterne of thy pretious youth,
 Nature (methinks) might easily mend her growth.
 Could she in all her births but coppie thee,
 Into the publick yeares proficiencie,
 No fruit should have the face to smile on thee
 (Young master of the worlds maturitie)
 But such whose sun-borne beauties what they borrow
 Of beames to day, pay back againe to morrow,
 Nor need be double-gilt. How then must these,
 Poore fruites looke pale at thy Hesperides ! 30
 Faine would I chide their slownesse, but in their Defects I draw mine owne dull character.
 Take them, and me in them acknowledging,
 How much my summer waites upon thy spring.

WAS CAR then Crashawe ; or WAS Crashawe CAR,
 Since both within one name combined are ?
 Yes, Car's Crashawe, he Car ; t'is loue alone
 Which melts two harts, of both composing one.
 So Crashawe's still the same : so much desired
 By strongest witts ; so honor'd so admired.
 CAR WAS but HE that enter'd as a friend
 With whom he shar'd his thoughtes, and did commend (While yet he liu'd) this worke ; they lou'd each other :
 Sweete Crashawe was his friend ; he Crashawes brother. 10
 So Car hath Title then ; t'was his intent
 That what his riches pen'd, poore Car should print
 Nor feares he checke praying that happie one
 Who was belou'd by all ; dispraysed by none.
 To witt, being pleas'd with all things, he pleas'd all.
 Nor would he giue, nor take offence ; befall
 What might ; he would possesse himselfe : and liue
 As deade (deuoyde of interest) t'all might giue
 Desease t'his well composed mynd ; forestal'd
 With heauenly riches : which had wholly call'd 20
 His thoughtes from earth, to liue aboue in'th aire
 A very bird of paradise. No care
 Had he of earthly trashe. What might suffice
 To fitt his soule to heauenly exercise,
 Sufficed him : and may we guesse his hart
 By what his lipps brings forth, his onely part
 Is God and godly thoughtes. Leaues doubt to none
 But that to him one God is all ; all's one.

What he might eate or weare he tooke no thought.
 His needfull foode he rather found then sought. 30
 He seekes no downes, no sheetes, his bed's still made.
 If he can find a chaire or stoole, he's layd,
 When day peepes in, he quitts his restlesse rest.
 And still, poore soule, before he's vp he's dres't.
 Thus dying did he liue, yet lued to dye

 His virgine thoughtes and words, and thence was styld
 By foes, the chaplaine of the virgine myld
 While yet he liued without : His modestie
 Imparted this to some, and they to me. 40
 Liue happie then, deare soule ; inioy the rest
 Eternally by paynes thou purchacedest,
 While Car must liue in care, who was thy friend
 Nor cares he how he liue, so in the end,

EPIGRAMME

Vpon the pictures in the following Poemes which the Authour first made with his owne hand, admirably well, as may be seene in his Manuscript dedicated to the right Honorable Lady the L. Denbigh.

Twixt pen and pensill rose a holy strife
Which might draw vertue better to the life.
Best witts gaue votes to that : but painters swore
They neuer saw peeces so sweete before
As thes : fruites of pure nature ; where no art
Did lead the vntaught pensill, nor had part
In th'worke.
The hand growne bold, with witt will needes contest.
Doth it preuayle ? ah no : say each is best.
This to the eare speakes wonders ; that will trye 10
To speake the same, yet lowder, to the eye.
Both their aymes are holy, both conspire
To wound, to burne the hart with heauenly fire.
This then's the Doome, to doe both parties right :
This, to the eare speakes best ; that, to the sight.

*'Tis not the work of force but skill
To find the way into man's will.
'Tis love alone can hearts unlock.
Who knows the WORD, he needs not knock.*

TO THE
Noblest & best of Ladyes, the Countesse of Denbigh.
Perswading her to Resolution in Religion,
& to render her self without further delay into the Communion of the Catholick Church.

What heau'n-intreated HEART is This ?
Stands trembling at the gate of blisse ;
Holds fast the door, yet dares not venture
Fairly to open it, and enter.
Whose DEFINITION is a doubt
Twixt life & death, twixt in & out.
Say, lingring fair ! why comes the birth
Of your braue soul so slowly forth ?
Plead your pretences (o you strong
In weaknes ! why you choose so long

10

Non Vi. &c. This poem appeared for the first time in 52. See, however, the different version below, p. 348, printed separately 1653. That version prints ll. 7-12 after l. 20 and from l. 26 to l. 60 differs widely from 52.

In labor of your selfe to ly,
 Nor daring quite to liue nor dy ?
 Ah linger not, lou'd soul ! a slow
 And late consent was a long no,
 Who grants at last, long time tryd
 And did his best to haue deny'd.
 What magick bolts, what mystick Barres
 Maintain the will in these strange warres !
 What fatall, yet fantastick, bands
 Keep The free Heart from it's own hands ! 20
 So when the year takes cold, we see
 Poor waters their owne prisoners be.
 Fetter'd, & lockt vp fast they ly
 In a sad selfe-captiuity.
 The' astonisht nymphs their flood's strange fate deplore,
 To see themselues their own seuerer shore.
 Thou that alone canst thaw this cold,
 And fetch the heart from it's strong Hold ;
 Almighty LOVE ! end this long warr,
 And of a meteor make a starr. 30
 O fix this fair INDEFINITE.
 And 'mongst thy shafts of soueraign light
 Choose out that sure decisiue dart
 Which has the Key of this close heart,
 Knowes all the corners of't, & can controul
 The self-shutt cabinet of an vnsearcht soul.
 O let it be at last, loue's houre.
 Raise this tall Trophee of thy Powre ;
 Come once the conquering way ; not to confute
 But kill this rebell-word, IRRESOLVTE 40
 That so, in spite of all this peeuish strength
 Of weaknes, she may write RESOLV'D AT LENGTH,
 Vnfold at length, vnfold fair flowre
 And vse the season of loue's showre,
 Meet his well-meaning Wounds, wise heart !
 And hast to drink the wholesome dart.
 That healing shaft, which heaun till now
 Hath in loue's quiuer hid for you.
 O Dart of loue ! arrow of light !
 O happy you, if it hitt right, 50

It must not fall in vain, it must
Not mark the dry regardles dust.
Fair one, it is your fate ; and brings
Æternall worlds vpon it's wings.
Meet it with wide-spread armes ; & see
It's seat your soul's iust center be.
Disband dull feares ; giue faith the day.
To saue your life, kill your delay
It is loue's seege ; and sure to be Your triumph, though his victory.
'Tis cowardise that keeps this feild
And want of courage not to yeild.
Yeild then, ô yeild, that loue may win
The Fort at last, and let life in.
Yeild quickly. Lest perhaps you proue
Death's prey, before the prize of loue.
This Fort of your fair selfe, if't be not won,
He is repulst indeed ; But you're vndone.

Goe, SOVL, out of thy Self, & seek for More.

Answer my Call

And come along ;

60

Help me to meditate mine Immortall Song.

Come, ye soft ministers of sweet sad mirth,

Bring All your houshold stuffe of Heavn on earth;

O you, my Soul's most certain Wings,

Complaining Pipes, & prattling Strings,

Bring All the store

Of SWEETS you haue ; And murmur that you haue no more.

Come, nere to part,

NATVRE & ART !

Come ; & come strong,

70

To the conspiracy of our Spatious song.

Bring All the Powres of Praise

Your Prouinces of well-vnited WORLDS can raise ;

Bring All your LVTES & HARPS of HEAVN & EARTH;

What e're cooperates to The common mirth

Vessells of vocall Ioyes,

Or You, more noble Architects of intellectuall Noise,

Cymballs of Heav'n, or Humane sphears,

Solliciters of SOVLES or EARES ;

And when you're come, with All

80

That you can bring or we can call ;

O may you fix

For euer here, & mix

Your selues into the long

And euerlasting series of a deathlesse SONG ;

Mix All your many WORLDS, Aboue,

And loose them into ONE of Loue.

Powres of my Soul, be Proud !
 And speake lowd
 To All the dear-bought Nations This Redeeming Name,
 And in the wealth of one Rich WORD proclaim
 New Similes to Nature.
 May it be no wrong
 Blest Heauns, to you, & your Superiour song,
 That we, dark Sons of Dust & Sorrow,
 A while Dare borrow 100
 The Name of Your Delights & our Desires,
 And fitt it to so farr inferior LYRES.
 Our Murmurs haue their Musick too,
 Ye mighty ORBES, as well as you,
 Nor yeilds the noblest Nest
 Of warbling SERAPHIM to the eares of Loue,
 A choicer Lesson then the ioyfull BREST
 Of a poor panting Turtle-Doue.
 And we, low Wormes haue leaue to doe
 The Same bright Busynes (ye Third HEAVENS) with you. 110
 Gentle SPIRITS, doe not complain.
 We will haue care
 To keep it fair,
 And send it back to you again.
 Come, louely NAME ! Appeare from forth the Bright
 Regions of peacefull Light
 Look from thine own Illustrious Home,
 Fair KING of NAMES, & come.
 Leaue All thy natiue Glories in their Gorgeous Nest,
 And giue thy Self a while The gracious Guest 120
 Of humble Soules, that seek to find
 The hidden Sweets
 Which man's heart meets
 When Thou art Master of the Mind.

 O see, so many WORLDS of barren yeares
 Melted & measur'd out in Seas of TEARES.
 O see, The WEARY liddes of wakefull Hope

Hath mett loue's Noon in Nature's night ;
Come lift we vp our loftyer Song
And wake the SVN that lyes too long.

To all our world of well-stoln joy

Tell him, Thyrsis, what th'hast seen.

Tityrus. Gloomy night embrac't the Place
Where The Noble Infant lay.
The BABE look't vp & shew'd his Face ;
In spite of Darknes, it was DAY.
It was THY day, SWEET ! & did rise
Not from the EAST, but from thine EYES.

A HYMN.
SUNG AS BY THE THREE KINGS

In the Glorious &c. First printed in 48, with heading : A Hymne for the Epiphanie. Sung as by the three Kings.

(1. KINGE.)

BRight BABE ! Whose awfull beautyes make
The morn incurr a sweet mistake ;

(2.) For whom the'officious heauns devise
To disinheritt the sun's rise,

(3.) Delicately to displace
The Day, & plant it fairer in thy face ;

[1.] O thou born KING of loues,

[2.] Of lights,

[3.] Of ioyes !

(Cho.) Look vp, sweet BABE, look vp & see

10

For loue of Thee

Thus farr from home

The EAST is come

To seek her self in thy sweet Eyes

(1.) We, who strangely went astray,

Lost in a bright

Meridian night,

(2.) A Darkenes made of too much day,

(3.) Becken'd from farr

By thy fair starr,

20

Lo at last haue found our way.

(Cho.) To THEE, thou DAY of night ! thou east of west !

Lo we at last haue found the way.

To thee, the world's great vniuersal east.
The Generall & indifferent DAY.

(1.) All-circling point. All centring sphear.

The world's one, round, Æternall year.

(2.) Whose full & all-vnwrinkled face
Nor sinks nor swells with time or place ;

(3.) But euery where & euery while 30
Is One Consistent solid smile ;

(1.) Not vext & tost

(2.) 'Twixt spring & frost,

(3.) Nor by alternate shreds of light
Sordidly shifting hands with shades & night.

(Cho.) O little all ! in thy embrace
The world lyes warm, & likes his place.

Nor does his full Globe fail to be Kist on Both his cheeks by Thee.

Time is too narrow for thy YEAR 40
Nor makes the whole WORLD thy half-spear.

(1.) To Thee, to Thee

From him we flee

(2.) From HIM, whom by a more illustrious ly,
The blindnes of the world did call the eye ;

(3.) To HIM, who by These mortall clouds hast made
Thy self our sun, though thine own shade.

(1.) Farewell, the world's false light.

Farewell, the white

Ægypt ! a long farewell to thee 50

Bright IDOL ; black IDOLATRY.

The dire face of inferior DARKNES, kis't

And courted in the pompous mask of a more specious mist.

(2.) Farewell, farewell

The proud & misplac't gates of hell,

Pertch't, in the morning's way

And double-guilded as the doores of DAY.

The deep hypocrisy of DEATH & NIGHT

More desperately dark, Because more bright.

(3.) Welcome, the world's sure Way ! 60

HEAVN's wholsom ray.

MAIESTY.

MADAME.
M'ongst those long rowes of crownes that guild your race,
These Royall sages sue for decent place.
The day-break of the nations ; their first ray ;
When the Dark WORLD dawn'd into Christian DAY
And smil'd i'th' BABE's bright face, the purpling Bud
And Rosy dawn of the right Royall blood ;
Fair first-fruits of the LAMB. Sure KINGS in this ;
They took a kingdom while they gaue a kisse.
But the world's Homage, scarce in These well blown,
We read in you (Rare Queen) ripe & full-grown. 10
For from this day's rich seed of Diadems
Does rise a radiant croppe of Royalle stemms,
A Golden haruest of crown'd heads, that meet
And crowd for kisses from the LAMB's white feet.
In this Illustrious throng, your lofty foud
Swells high, fair Confluence of all highborn Bloud !
With your bright head whole groues of scepters bend
Their wealthy tops ; & for these feet contend.
So swore the LAMB's dread sire. And so we see't.
Crownes, & the HEADS they kisse, must court these FEET. 20

Sancta Maria, &c. First published in 48, with heading. The Mother of Sorrowes. and without stanzas 7 and 8. MS. Ar, stanzas 1-6 only. Heading in Ar: Sancta Maria dolorum | Or the Mother of | sorrowes.

SANCTA MARIA

DOLORVM.

I.

IN shade of death's sad TREE
 Stood Dolefull SHEE.
 Ah SHE ! now by none other
 Name to be known, alas, but SORROW'S MOTHER.
 Before her eyes
 Her's, & the whole world's ioyes,
 Hanging all torn she sees ; and in his woes
 And Paines, her Pangs & throes.
 Each wound of His, from euery Part,
 All, more at home in her owne heart.

II.

What kind of marble than
 Is that cold man
 Who can look on & see,
 Nor keep such noble sorrowes company ?
 Sure eu'en from you
 (My Flints) some drops are due

To see so many vnkind swords contest
 So fast for one soft Brest.
 While with a faithfull, mutuall, floud
 Her eyes bleed TEARES, his wounds weep BLOOD.

III.

O costly intercourse
 Of deaths, & worse,
 Diuided loues. While son & mother
 Discourse alternate wounds to one another ;
 Quick Deaths that grow
 And gather, as they come & goe :
 His Nails write swords in her, which soon her heart
 Payes back, with more then their own smart
 Her SWORDS, still growing with his pain,
 Turn SPEARES, & straight come home again.

IV.

She sees her son, her GOD,
 Bow with a load
 Of borrowd sins ; And swimme
 In woes that were not made for Him.
 Ah hard command
 Of loue ! Here must she stand
 Charg'd to look on, & with a stedfast ey
 See her life dy :
 Leauing her only so much Breath
 As serues to keep aliue her death.

V.

O Mother turtle-doue !
 Soft sourse of loue
 That these dry lidds might borrow
 Something from thy full Seas of sorrow !
 O in that brest
 Of thine (the noblest nest
 Both of loue's fires & flouds) might I recline
 This hard, cold, Heart of mine !
 The chill lump would relent, & proue
 Soft subject for the seige of loue.

VI.

O teach those wounds to bleed
 In me ; me, so to read
 This book of loues, thus writ
 In lines of death, my life may copy it
 With loyall cares.
 O let me, here, claim shares ;
 Yeild something in thy sad prærogatiue
 (Great Queen of greifes) & giue
 Me too my teares ; who, though all stone,
 Think much that thou shouldst mourn alone.

VII.

Yea let my life & me
 Fix here with thee,
 And at the Humble foot
 Of this fair TREE take our eternall root.
 That so we may
 At least be in loues way ;
 And in these chast warres while the wing'd wounds flee
 So fast 'twixt him & thee,
 My brest may catch the kisse of some kind dart,
 Though as at second hand, from either heart.

VIII.

O you, your own best Darts
 Dear, dolefull hearts !
 Hail ; & strike home & make me see
 That wounded bosomes their own weapons be.
 Come wounds ! come darts !
 Nail'd hands ! & peirced hearts !
 Come your whole selues, sorrow's great son & mother !
 Nor grudge a yonger-Brother
 Of greifes his portion, who (had all their due)
 One single wound should not haue left for you.

IX.

Shall I, sett there
 So deep a share
 (Dear wounds) & onely now
 In sorrows draw no Diuidend with you ?

O be more wise
 If not more soft, mine eyes !
 Flow, tardy founts ! & into decent showres
 Dissolue my Dayes & Howres.
 And if thou yet (faint soul !) deferr
 To bleed with him, fail not to weep with her.

X.

Rich Queen, lend some releife ;
 At least an almes of greif
 To'a heart who by sad right of sin
 Could proue the whole summe (too sure) due to him.
 By all those stings
 Of loue, sweet bitter things,
 Which these torn hands transcrib'd on thy true heart
 O teach mine too the art
 To study him so, till we mix
 Wounds ; and become one crucifix.

XI.

O let me suck the wine
 So long of this chast vine
 Till drunk of the dear wounds, I be
 A lost Thing to the world, as it to me.
 O faithfull freind
 Of me & of my end !
 Fold vp my life in loue ; and lay't beneath
 My dear lord's vitall death.
 Lo, heart, thy hope's whole Plea ! Her pretious Breath Powr'd out in prayers for thee ; thy lord's in death.

From thy head & from thy feet,
From thy hands & from thy side
All the purple Riuers meet.

II.

What need thy fair head bear a part
In showres, as if thine eyes had none ?
What need They help to drown thy heart,
That striues in torrents of it's own ?

III.

Thy restlesse feet now cannot goe
For vs & our eternall good,
As they were euer wont. What though ?
They swimme. Alas, in their own floud.

Thy hands to giue, thou canst not lift ;
Yet will thy hand still giuing be.

Half so fruitfull, half so flowing.

VI.

To this red sea of thy blood
Their little channells can deliuer
Somthing to the Generall flood.

VII.

All the riuers nam'd before ?

But ô that onc is one all ore.

VIII.

Rain-swoln riuers may rise proud,

But when indeed all 's ouerflow'd
They themselues are drowned too.

IX.

T E

With all the powres my poor Heart hath
 Of humble loue & loyall Faith,
 Thus lowe (my hidden life !) I bow to thee
 Whom too much loue hath bow'd more low for me.
 Down down, proud sense ! Discourses dy.
 Keep close, my soul's inquiring ey !
 Nor touch nor tast must look for more
 But each sitt still in his own Dore.

Your ports are all superfluous here,
 Saue That which lets in faith, the eare. 10
 Faith is my skill. Faith can beleieue
 As fast as loue new lawes can giue.
 Faith is my force. Faith strength affords
 To keep pace with those powrfull words.
 And words more sure, more sweet, then they
 Loue could not think, truth could not say.

O let thy wretch find that releife
 Thou didst afford the faithfull theife.
 Plead for me, loue ! Alleage & show
 That faith has farther, here, to goe 20

And lesse to lean on. Because than Though hidd as GOD, wounds writt thee man,
Thomas might touch ; None but might see
At least the suffring side of thee ;
And that too was thy self which thee did couer,
But here eu'n That's hid too which hides the other.

Sweet, consider then, that I
Though allow'd nor hand nor eye
To reach at thy lou'd Face , nor can
Tast thee GOD, or touch thee MAN 30
Both yet beleue ; and wittnesse thee
My LORD too & my GOD, as lowd as He.

Help lord, my Faith, my Hope increase ;
And fill my portion in thy peace.
Giue loue for life ; nor let my dayes
Grow, but in new powres to thy name & praise.

O dear memoriall of that Death
Which liues still, & allowes vs breath !
Rich, Royall food ! Bountyfull BREAD !
Whose vse denyes vs to the dead ; 40
Whose vitall gust alone can giue
The same leaue both to eat & liue ;
Liue euer Bread of loues, & be
My life, my soul, my surer selfe to mee.

O soft self-wounding Pelican !
Whose brest weepes Balm for wounded man.
Ah this way bend thy benign floud
To'a bleeding Heart that gaspes for blood.
That blood, whose least drops soueraign be
To wash my worlds of sins from me. 50
Come loue ! Come LORD ! & that long day
For which I languish, come away.
When this dry soul those eyes shall sec,
And drink the vnseal'd sourse of thee.
When Glory's sun faith's shades shall chase,
And for thy veil giue me thy FACE.

THE BL.

SACRAMENT.

I.

Rise, Royall SION ! rise & sing
 Thy soul's kind shepherd, thy hart's KING.
 Stretch all thy powres ; call if you can
 Harpes of heaun to hands of man.
 This soueraign subject sitts aboue
 The best ambition of thy loue.

II.

Lo the BREAD of LIFE, this day's Triumphant Text, prouokes thy prayse.
 The liuing & life-giuing bread,
 To the great twelue distributed
 When LIFE, himself, at point to dy
 Of loue, was his own LEGACY.

III.

Come, loue ! & let vs work a song
 Lowd & pleasant, sweet & long ;
 Let lippes & Hearts lift high the noise
 Of so iust & solemn ioyes,
 Which on his white browes this bright day
 Shall hence for euer bear away.

 With a new Lamb blesses the Board.
 The aged Pascha pleads not yeares
 But spyes loue's dawn, & disappeares.

 And their NIGHT dyes into our Day.

V.

But lest THAT dy too, we are bid
 Euer to doe what he once did.
 And by a mindfull, mystick breath
 That we may liue, reuiue his DEATH ;
 With a well-bles't bread & wine
 Transsum'd, & taught to turn diuine.

IN MEDITATION OF
THE DAY OF

I.

H Ears't thou, my soul, what serious things
Both the Psalm and sybyll sings
Of a sure iudge, from whose sharp Ray
The world in flames shall fly away.

II.

O that fire ! before whose face
Heaun & earth shall find no place.
O those eyes ! whose angry light
Must be the day of that dread Night.

III.

O that trump ! whose blast shall run
An euen round with the circling Sun.
And vrge the murmuring graues to bring
Pale mankind forth to meet his king.

V.

O that Book ! whose leaues so bright
Will sett the world in seuere light.
O that Iudge ! whose hand, whose eye
None can indure ; yet none can fly.

VI.

Ah then, poor soul, what wilt thou say ?
And to what Patron chuse to pray ?
When starres themselues shall stagger ; and
The most firm foot no more then stand.

VII.

But thou giu'st leaue (dread Lord) that we Take shelter from thy self, in thee ;
And with the wings of thine own doue
Fly to thy scepter of soft loue.

VIII.

Dear, remember in that Day
Who was the cause thou cam's't this way.
Thy sheep was stray'd ; And thou wouldst be Euen lost thy self in seeking me.

IX.

Shall all that labour, all that cost
Of loue, and eu'n that losse, be lost ?
And this lou'd soul, iudg'd worth no lesse
Then all that way, and wearynesse ?

X.

Iust mercy then, thy Reckning be
With my price, & not with me
'Twas pay'd at first with too much pain,
To be pay'd twice ; or once, in vain.

XI.

Mercy (my iudge) mercy I cry
With blushing Cheek & bleeding ey,
The conscious colors of my sin
Are red without & pale within.

XII.

O let thine own soft bowells pay
Thy self ; And so discharge that day.
If sin can sigh, loue can forgiue.
O say the word my Soul shall liue.

XIII.

Those mercyes which thy MARY found
Or who thy crosse confes't & crown'd,
Hope tells my heart, the same loues be Still aliuie ; and still for me.

XIV.

Though both my Prayres & teares combine,
Both worthlesse are ; For they are mine.
But thou thy bounteous self still be ;
And show thou art, by sauing me.

XV.

O when thy last Frown shall proclaim
The flocks of goates to folds of flame,
And all thy lost sheep found shall be,
Let come ye blessed then call me.

XVI.

When the dread IRE shall diuide
Those Limbs of death from thy left side,
Let those life-speaking lipps command
That I inheritt thy right hand.

XVII.

O hear a suppliant heart ; all crush't
And crumbled into contrite dust.
My hope, my fear ! my Iudge, my Freind !
Take charge of me, & of my END.

Loe where a WOVNDED HEART with Bleeding EYES conspire.
Is she a FLAMING Fountain, or a Weeping fire !

Sainte Mary &c. The couplet first published in 48 under the heading of The Weeper as an introduction to that poem. MS. Ar.

I.

HAil, sister springs !
 Parents of syluer-footed rills !
 Euer bubbling things !
 Thawing crystall ! snowy hills,
 Still spending, neuer spent ! I mean
 Thy fair eyes, sweet MAGDALENE !

II.

 Heauens thy fair eyes be ;
 Heauens of euer-falling starres.
 'Tis seed-time still with thee
 And starres thou sow'st, whose haruest dares
 Promise the earth to counter shine
 Whateuer makes heaun's forehead fine.

The Weeper. MS. Dobell. For earlier version in 46, and collation with other MSS, see p 79, above 52 generally follows 48, exceptions noted here. 48 indents first and third lines of each stanza, as 46 1-2 footed] forded 48 2-2 starres] starres, 52

III.

But we're deceu'd all.
 Starres indeed they are too true ;
 For they but seem to fall,
 As Heaun's other spangles doe.
 It is not for our earth & vs
 To shine in Things so pretious.

IV.

Vpwards thou dost weep.
 Heaun's bosome drinks the gentle stream.
 Where th'milky riuers creep,
 Thine floates aboue ; & is the cream.
 Waters aboue th' Heauns, what they be
 We' are taught best by thy TEARES & thee.

V.

Euery morn from hence
 A brisk Cherub something sippes
 Whose sacred influence
 Addes sweetnes to his sweetest Lippes.
 Then to his musick. And his song
 Tasts of this Breakfast all day long.

VI.

Not in the euening's eyes
 When they Red with weeping are
 For the Sun that dyes,
 Sitts sorrow with a face so fair,
 No where but here did euer meet
 Sweetnesse so sad, sadnesse so sweet.

VII.

When sorrow would be seen
 In her brightest majesty
 (For she is a Queen)
 Then is she drest by none but thee.
 Then, & only then, she weares
 Her proudest pearles ; I mean, thy TEARES.

VIII.

The deaw no more will weep
 The primrose's pale cheek to deck,
 The deaw no more will sleep
 Nuzzel'd in the lilly's neck ;
 Much reather would it be thy TEAR,
 And leaue them Both to tremble here.

IX.

There's no need at all
 That the balsom-sweating bough
 So coyly should let fall
 His med'cinable teares ; for now
 Nature hath learn't to'extract a deaw
 More soueraign & sweet from you.

X.

Yet let the poore drops weep
 (Weeping is the ease of woe)
 Softly let them creep,
 Sad that they are vanquish't so.
 They, though to others no releife,
 Balsom maybe, for their own greife.

XI.

Such the maiden gemme
 By the purpling vine put on,
 Peeps from her parent stemme
 And blushes at the bridegroom sun.
 This watry Blossom of thy eyn,
 Ripe, will make the richer wine.

XII.

When some new bright Guest
 Takes vp among the starres a room,
 And Heaun will make a feast,
 Angels with crystall violles come
 And draw from these full eyes of thine
 Their master's Water : their own Wine.

Golden though he be,
Golden Tagus murmures tho ;
Were his way by thee,
Content & quiet he would goe.
So much more rich would he esteem
Thy syluer, then his golden stream.

XIV.

Well does the May that lyes
Smiling in thy cheeks, confesse
The April in thine eyes.
Mutuall sweetnesse they expresse.
No April ere lent kinder showres,
Nor May return'd more faithfull flowres.

XV.

O cheeks ! Bedds of chast loues
By your own showres seasonably dash't
Eyes ! nests of milky doues
In your own wells decently washt,
O wit of loue ! that thus could place
Fountain & Garden in one face.

XVI.

O sweet Contest ; of woes
With loues, of teares with smiles disputing !
O fair, & Freindly Foes,
Each other kissing & confuting !
While rain & sunshine, Cheekes & Eyes
Close in kind contrarieties.

XVII.

But can these fair Flouds be
Freinds with the bosom fires that fill thee
Can so great flames agree
Æternall Teares should thus distill thee !

That digg'd these wells, & drest this Vine ;
And taught the wounded HEART
The way into these weeping Eyn.
Vain loues auant ! bold hands forbear !
The lamb hath dipp't his white foot here.

XIX.

And now where're he strays,
Among the Galilean mountaines,
Or more vnwellcome wayes,
He's follow'd by two faithfull fountaines ;
Two walking baths ; two weeping motions ;
Portable, & compendious oceans.

O Thou, thy lord's fair store !
In thy so rich & rare expenses,
Euen when he show'd most poor,
He might prouoke the wealth of Princes.
What Prince's wanton'st pride e're could Wash with Syluer, wipe with Gold.

Who is that King, but he
Who calls't his Crown to be call'd thine,
That thus can boast to be
Waited on by a wandring mine,
A voluntary mint, that strowes
Warm syluer shoures where're he goes !

Does day close his eyes ?
Still the FOUNTAIN weeps for all.
Let night or day doe what they will,
Thou hast thy task ; thou weepest still.

Does thy song lull the air ?
Thy falling teares keep faith full time.
Does thy sweet-breath'd praire

Still at each sigh, that is, each stop,
A bead, that is, A TEAR, does drop.

XXV.

At these thy weeping gates,
(Watching their watry motion)
Each winged moment waits,
Takes his TEAR, & gets him gone.
By thine Ey's tinct enobled thus
Time layes him vp ; he's pretious.

XXVI.

Not, so long she liued,
Shall thy tomb report of thee ;
But, so long she greiued,
Thus must we date thy memory.
Others by moments, months, & yeares
Measure their ages ; thou, by TEARES.

The fugitiue sons of those fair Eyes
Your fruitfull mothers !
What make you here ? what hopes can tice
You to be born ? what cause can borrow
You from Those nests of noble sorrow ?

XXIX.

Whither away so fast ?
For sure the sordid earth
Your Sweetnes cannot tast
Nor does the dust deserue your birth.
Sweet, whither hast you then ? o say
Why you trip so fast away ?

The darlings of Auroras bed,
The rose's modest Cheek
Nor the violet's humble head.
Though the Feild's eyes too WEEPERS be Because they want such TEARES as we.

Much lesse mean we to trace
The Fortune of inferior gemmes,
Preferr'd to some proud face
Or pertch't vpon fear'd Diadems.
Crown'd Heads are toyes. We goe to meet

HYMNE.

LOue, thou art Absolute sole lord
 LOF LIFE & DEATH. To proue the word,
 Wee'l now appeal to none of all
 Those thy old Souldiers, Great & tall,
 Ripe Men of Martyrdom, that could reach down
 With strong armes, their triumphant crown ;
 Such as could with lusty breath
 Speak lowd into the face of death
 Their Great LORD's glorious name, to none
 Of those whose spatious Bosomes spread a throne 10
 For LOVE at larg to fill : spare blood & sweat ;
 And see him take a priuate seat,
 Making his mansion in the mild
 And milky soul of a soft child.

Scarse has she learn't to lisp the name
 Of Martyr ; yet she thinks it shame
 Life should so long play with that breath
 Which spent can buy so braue a death.
 She neuer vndertook to know
 What death with loue should haue to doe ; 20
 Nor has she c're yet vnderstood
 Why to show loue, she should shed blood
 Yet though she cannot tell you why,
 She can LOVE, & she can DY.

Scarse has she Blood enough to make
 A guilty sword blush for her sake ;
 Yet has she'a HEART dares hope to proue
 How much lesse strong is DEATH then LOVE.

Be loue but there ; let poor six yeares
 Be pos'd with the maturest Feares 30
 Man trembles at, you straight shall find
 LOVE knowes no nonage, nor the MIND.
 'Tis LOVE, not YEARES or LIMBS that can
 Make the Martyr, or the man.

LOVE touch't her HEART, & lo it beates
 High, & burnes with such braue heates ;
 Such thirsts to dy, as dares drink vp,
 A thousand cold deaths in one cup.
 Good reason. For she breathes All fire.
 Her weake brest heaues with strong desire 40
 Of what she may with fruitles wishes
 Seek for amongst her MOTHER's kisses.

Since 'tis not to be had at home
 She'l trauail to a Martyrdom
 No home for hers confesses she
 But where she may a Martyr be.

Sh'el to the Moores ; And trade with them,
 For this vnualued Diadem.
 She'l offer them her dearest Breath,
 With CHRIST's Name in't, in change for death. 50
 Sh'el bargain with them ; & will giue
 Them GOD ; teach them how to liue
 In him : or, if they this deny,
 For him she'l teach them how to DY.
 So shall she leaue amongst them sown
 Her LORD's Blood ; or at lest her own.

FAREWEL then, all the world ! Adieu.
 TERESA is no more for you.

Farewell, all pleasures, sports, & ioyes,
 (Neuer till now esteemed toyes) 60
 Farewell what ever deare may bee,
 MOTHER's armes or FATHER's knee
 Farewell house, & farewell home !
 SHE 's for the Moores, & MARTYRDOM.

SWEET, not so fast ! lo thy fair Spouse
 Whom thou seekst with so swift vowes,
 Calls thee back, & bids thee come
 T'embrace a milder MARTYRDOM.

Blest powres forbid, Thy tender life
 Should bleed vpon a barborous knife ; 70

 Wise heaun will neuer haue it so

 A death more mysticall & high.
 Into loue's armes thou shalt let fall
 A still-suruiuing funerall.
 His is the DART must make the DEATH
 Whose stroke shall tast thy hallow'd breath ; 80
 A Dart thrice dip't in that rich flame
 Which writes thy spouse's radiant Name
 Vpon the roof of Heau'n ; where ay
 It shines, & with a soueraign ray
 Beates bright vpon the burning faces
 Of soules which in that name's sweet graces
 Find euerlasting smiles. So rare,
 So spirituall, pure, & fair
 Must be th'immortall instrument
 Vpon whose choice point shall be sent 90
 A life so lou'd ; And that there be Fitt executioners for Thee,
 The fair'st & first-born sons of fire
 Blest SERAPHIM, shall leaue their quire
 And turn loue's souldiers, vpon THEE
 To exercise their archerie.
 O how oft shalt thou complain
 Of a sweet & subtle PAIN.
 Of intolerable IOYES ;
 Of a DEATH, in which who dyes 100
 Loues his death, and dyes again.
 And would for euer so be slain.
 And liues, & dyes ; and knowes not why
 To liue, But that he thus may neuer leaue to DY.

94 SERAPHIM] Seraphims 48

How kindly will thy gentle HEART
 Kisse the sweetly-killing DART !
 And close in his embraces keep
 Those delicious Wounds, that weep
 Balsom to heal themselues with. Thus
 When These thy DEATHS, so numerous,
 Shall all at last dy into one,
 And melt thy Soul's sweet mansion ;
 Like a soft lump of incense, hasted
 By too hott a fire, & wasted
 Into perfuming clouds, so fast
 Shalt thou exhale to Heaun at last
 In a resolving SIGH, and then
 O what ? Ask not the Tongues of men.
 Angells cannot tell, suffice,
 Thy selfe shall feel thine own full ioyes
 And hold them fast for euer. There
 So soon as thou shalt first appear,
 The MOON of maiden starrs, thy white
 MISTRESSE, attended by such bright
 Soules as thy shining self, shall come
 And in her first rankes make thee room ;
 Where 'mongst her snowy family
 Immortall wellcomes wait for thee.

110

120

O what delight, when reueal'd LIFE shall stand
 And teach thy lipps heau'n with his hand ;
 On which thou now maist to thy wishes
 Heap vp thy consecrated kisses.
 What ioyes shall seize thy soul, when she Bending her blessed eyes on thee
 (Those second Smiles of Heau'n) shall dart
 Her mild rayes through thy melting heart !

130

Angels, thy old freinds, there shall greet thee
 Glad at their own home now to meet thee.

 Shall own thee there ; and all in one

 FOR THE FORE-GOING HYMNE
 as hauing been writt when the author was yet among the protestantes.

THus haue I back again to thy bright name
 (Fair flood of holy fires !) transfus'd the flame
 I took from reading thee, tis to thy wrong
 I know, that in my weak & worthlesse song
 Thou here art sett to shine where thy full day
 Scarse dawnes. O pardon if I dare to say Thine own dear bookes are guilty. For from thence
 I learn't to know that loue is eloquence.
 That hopefull maxime gaue me hart to try
 If, what to other tongues is tun'd so high, 10
 Thy praise might not speak English too ; forbid
 (By all thy mysteryes that here ly hidde)
 Forbid it, mighty Loue ! let no fond Hate
 Of names & wordes, so farr præiudicate.
 Souls are not SPANIARDS too, one freindly flood
 Of BAPTISM blends them all into a blood.
 CHRIST's faith makes but one body of all soules
 And loue's that body's soul, no law controwlls
 Our free traffique for heau'n, we may maintaine
 Peace, sure, with piety, though it come from SPAIN. 20
 What soul so e're, in any language, can Speak heau'n like her's is my souls country-man.

TERESA,

(AS SHE IS VSVALLY EXpressed with a SERAPHIM

WELL meaning readers ! you that come as freinds
And catch the pretious name this peice pretends ;
Make not too much hast to' admire
That fair-cheek't fallacy of fire.
That is a SERAPHIM, they say
And this the great TERESIA.
Readers, be rul'd by me ; & make
Here a well-plac't & wise mistake
You must transpose the picture quite,
And spell it wrong to read it right ; 10
Read HIM for her, & her for him ;
And call the SAINT the SERAPHIM.
Painter, what didst thou vnderstand
To put her dart into his hand !
See, euen the yeares & size of him
Showes this the mother SERAPHIM.
This is the mistresse flame ; & duteous he
Her happy fire-works, here, comes down to see.
O most poor-spirited of men !
Had thy cold Pencil kist her PEN 20
Thou couldst not so vnkindly err
To show vs This faint shade for HER

 And mockes with female FROST loue's manly flame.
 One would suspect thou meant'st to paint
 Some weak, inferiour, woman saint.
 But had thy pale-fac't purple took
 Fire from the burning cheeks of that bright Booke
 Thou wouldst on her haue heap't vp all
 That could be found SERAPHICALL ;
 What e're this youth of fire weares fair,
 Rosy fingers, radiant hair,
 Glowing cheek, & glistering wings,
 All those fair & flagrant things,
 But before all, that fiery DART
 Had fill'd the Hand of this great HEART.

30

Doe then as equall right requires,
 Since HIS the blushes be, & her's the fires,
 Resume & rectify thy rude design ;
 Vndresse thy Seraphim into MINE.
 Redeem this iniury of thy art ;
 Giue HIM the vail, giue her the dart.

40

Giue Him the vail ; that he may couer

 Asham'd that our world, now, can show
 Nests of new Seraphims here below.

Giue her the DART for it is she

 Say, all ye wise & well-peirc't hearts

 Say & bear wittnes. Sends she not
 A SERAPHIM at euery shott ?

 For in loue's feild was neuer found
 A nobler weapen then a WOVND.
 Loue's passiues are his actiu'st part.
 The wounded is the wounding heart.
 O HEART ! the æquall poise of lou'es both parts
 Bigge alike with wounds & darts.
 Liue in these conquering leaues ; liue all the same ;
 And walk through all tongues one triumphant FLAME
 Liue here, great HEART ; & loue and dy & kill ;
 And bleed & wound ; and yeild & conquer still. 80
 Let this immortall life wherere it comes
 Walk in a crowd of loues & MARTYRDOMES.
 Let mystick DEATHS wait on't ; & wise soules be

 O sweet incendiary ! shew here thy art,

 Let all thy scatter'd shafts of light, that play
 Among the leaues of thy larg Books of day, Combin'd against this BREST at once break in

A SONG.

LOrd, when the sense of thy sweet grace
 Sends vp my soul to seek thy face.
 Thy blessed eyes breed such desire,
 I dy in loue's delicious Fire.
 O loue, I am thy SACRIFICE.
 Be still triumphant, blessed eyes.
 Still shine on me, fair suns ! that I
 Still may behold, though still I dy.

Second part.

Though still I dy, I liue again ;
 Still longing so to be still slain, 10
 So gainfull is such losse of breath,
 I dy euen in desire of death.
 Still liue in me this louing strife
 Of liuing DEATH & dying LIFE.
 For while thou sweetly slayest me
 Dead to my selfe, I liue in Thee.

PRAYER.

AN ODE, WHICH WAS
Præfixed to a little Prayer-book giuen to a young
GENTLE - WOMAN.

LO here a little volume, but great Book !
LA nest of new-born sweets ;

Whose native fires disdaining
To ly thus folded, & complaining
Of these ignoble sheets,
Affect more comly bands
(Fair one) from thy kind hands
And confidently look
To find the rest

Of a rich binding in your BREST.

10

It is, in one choise handfull, heauenn ; & all
Heaun's Royall host ; incamp't thus small
To proue that true, schooles vse to tell,
Ten thousand Angels in one point can dwell.
It is loue's great artillery
Which here contracts it self, & comes to ly
Close couch't in your white bosom : & from thence
As from a snowy fortresse of defence,
Against your ghostly foes to take your part,
And fortify the hold of your chast heart.

20

It is an armory of light

Let constant vse but keep it bright,

You'l find it yeilds

To holy hands & humble hearts

More swords & sheilds

Then sin hath snares, or Hell hath darts.

 Must be a sure house-keeper ;
 And yet no sleeper.
 Dear soul, be strong.
 MERCY will come e're long 40
 And bring his bosom fraught with blessings,
 Flowers of neuer fading graces
 To make immortall dressings
 For worthy soules, whose wise embraces
 Store vp themselves for HIM, who is alone
 The SPOUSE of Virgins & the Virgin's son.
 But if the noble BRIDEGROOM, when he come,

 To take her pleasure & to play
 And keep the deuill's holyday ;
 To dance ith' sunshine of some smiling

 Some slippery Pair
 Of false, perhaps as fair,
 Flattering but forswearing eyes ;

 Will take possession of that sacred store
 Of hidden sweets & holy ioyes.

 Of froth & bubbles, what to look for here.
 Say, gentle soul, what can you find 10
 But painted shapes,
 Peacocks & Apes,
 Illustrious flyes,
 Guilded dunghills, glorious L Y E S,
 Goodly surmises
 And deep disguises,
 Oathes of water, words of wind ?
 TRVTH biddes me say, 'tis time you cease to trust
 Your soul to any son of dust.
 'Tis time you listen to a brauer loue, 20
 Which from aboue
 Calls you vp higher
 And biddes you come
 And choose your roome
 Among his own fair sonnes of fire,
 Where you among
 The golden thron
 That watches at his palace doores
 May passe along
 And follow those fair starres of yours ; 30
 Starrs much too fair & pure to wait vpon
 The false smiles of a sublunary sun.
 Sweet, let me prophesy that at last t'will proue

THE FORSAKEN WIFE
OF SAINTE ALEXIS.
THE FIRST ELEGIE.

I late the roman youth's lou'd prayse & pride,
Whom long none could obtain, though thousands try'd,
Lo here am left (alas), For my lost mate
T'embrace my teares, & kisse an vnkind FATE.
Sure in my early woes starres were at strife,
And try'd to make a WIDOW ere a WIFE.
Nor can I tell (and this new teares doth breed)
In what strange path my lord's fair footsteppes bleed.
O knew I where he wander'd, I should see
Some solace in my sorrow's certainty 10
I'd send my woes in words should weep for me.
(Who knowes how powrfull well-writt praires would be ?)
Sending's too slow a word, my selfe would fly.
Who knowes my own heart's woes so well as I ?
But how shall I steal hence ? ALEXIS thou
Ah thou thy self, alas, hast taught me how.
Loue too, that leads the way, would lend the wings
To bear me harmlesse through the hardest things.
And where loue lends the wing, & leads the way,
What dangers can there be dare say me nay ? 20
If I be shipwrack't, Loue shall teach to swimme.
If drown'd ; sweet is the death indur'd for HIM,

 While through the world she sought her wandring mate. 30

 Those, course & negligent, As the naturall lockes
 Of these loose groues, rough as th'vnpolish't rockes.
 A hasty Portion of præscribed sleep ;
 Obedient slumbers ? that can wake & weep,
 And sing, & sigh, & work, and sleep again ;
 Still rowling a round speare of still-returning pain.
 Hands full of harty labours ; Paines that pay
 And prize themselves ; doe much, that more they may, 20
 And work for work, not wages ; let to morrow's
 New drops, wash off the sweat of this daye's sorrows.
 A long & dayly-dying life, which breaths
 A respiration of reuiuing deaths.

HOPE.

HOPE whose weak beeing run'd is
 Ahke if it succeed or if it misse !
 Whom ill or good does equally confound
 And both the hornes of fate's dilemma wound.

Vain shadow ; that dost vanish quite
 Both at full noon & perfect night !

The starres haue not a possibility
 Of blessing Thee.

If things then from their end we happy call,
 'Tis hope is the most hopelesse thing of all.

10

Hope, thou bold Taster of delight !
 Who instead of doing so, deuourst it quite.
 Thou bringst vs an estate, yet leau'st vs poor
 By clogging it with legacyes before.

The ioyes which we intire should wed
 Come deflour'd-virgins to our bed.

Good fortunes without gain imported be

Such mighty custom's paid to Thee.

For ioy like wine kep't close, does better tast ;
 If it take air before his spirits wast.

20

Hope fortun's cheating lottery
 Where for one prize, an hundred blankes there be.
 Fond archer, hope. Who tak'st thine aime so farr
 That still or short or wide thine arrowes are

Thinne empty cloud which th'ey deceiues
 With shapes that our own fancy giues.

A cloud which guilt & painted now appears
 But must drop presently in teares

When thy false beames o're reason's light prevail,
 By IGNES FATVI for north starres we sail. 30
 Brother of fear more gayly clad.
 The merryer fool oth two, yet quite as mad.
 Sire of repentance, child of fond desire
 That blow'st the chymick & the louer's fire.
 Still leading them insensibly'on
 With the strong witchcraft of Anon.
 By thee the one docs changing nature through
 Her endlesse labyrinth's pursue,
 And th'other chases woman ; while she goes
 More wayes & turnes then hunted nature knowes. 40

 ANSWER
 FOR HOPE.

DEar hope ! earth's dowry, & heaun's debt !
 The entity of those that are not yet.
 Subtlest, but surest beeing ! Thou by whom
 Our nothing has a definition !
 Substantiall shade ! whose sweet allay
 Blends both the noones of night & day.
 Fates cannot find out a capacity
 Of hurting thee.
 From Thee their lean dilemma, with blunt horn,
 Shrinks, as the sick moon from the wholesome morn. 10
 Rich hope ! loue's legacy, vnder lock
 Of faith ! still spending, & still growing stock !
 Our crown-land lyes aboue yet each meal brings
 A seemly portion for the sonnes of kings.
 Nor will the virgin ioyes we wed
 Come lesse vnbroken to our bed,

Because that from the bridall cheek of blisse
 Thou steal'st vs down a distant kisse.
 Hope's chast stealth harmes no more ioye's maidenhead
 Then spousall rites preiudge the marriage bed. 20
 Fair hope ! our earlyer heau'n by thee
 Young time is taster to eternity
 Thy generous wine with age growes strong, not sowre.
 Nor does it kill thy fruit, to smell thy flowre.
 Thy golden, growing, head neuer hangs down
 Till in the lappe of loues full noone
 It falls ; and dyes ! o no, it melts away
 As does the dawn into the day.
 As lumps of sugar loose themselues ; and twine
 Their supple essence with the soul of wine. 30
 Fortune ? alas, aboue the world's low warres
 Hope walks ; & kickes the curld heads of conspiring starres.
 Her keel cutts not the waues where These winds stirr
 Fortune's whole lottery is one blank to her.
 Her shafts, and shee fly farre above,
 And forrage in the fields of light and love.
 Sweet hope ! kind cheat ! fair fallacy by thee
 We are not WHERE nor What we be,
 But WHAT & WHERE we would be. Thus art thou
 Our absent PRESENCE, and our future Now.
 Faith's sister ! nurse of fair desire ! 40
 Fear's antidote ! a wise & well-stay'd fire !
 Temper twixt chill despair, & torrid ioy !
 Queen Regent in yonge loue's minority !
 Though the vext chymick vainly chases
 His fugitiue gold through all her faces ;
 Though loue's more feirce, more fruitlesse, fires assay
 One face more fugitiue then all they ;
 True hope's a glorious hunter & her chase,
 The GOD of nature in the feilds of grace. 50

A LETTER FROM
M^r. CRASHAW
to the
Countess of DENBIGH,

Against Irresolution and Delay in matters of RELIGION.

LONDON..

Against Irresolution and Delay in matters of RELIGION.

What Heav'n-besieged Heart is this
Stands Trembling at the Gate of Blisse :
Holds fast the Door, yet dares not venture
Fairly to open and to enter ?
Whose Definition is, A Doubt
'Twixt Life and Death, 'twixt In and Out.
Ah ! linger not, lov'd Soul : A slow
And late Consent was a long No.
Who grants at last, a great while try'de,
And did his best to have Deny'de.

10

What Magick-Bolts, what mystick Barrs
Maintain the Will in these strange Warrs ?
What Fatall, yet fantastick, Bands
Keep the free Heart from his own Hands ?
Say, lingring Fair, why comes the Birth
Of your brave Soul so slowly forth ?
Plead your Pretences, (O you strong
In weaknesse) why you chuse so long
In Labour of your self to ly,
Not daring quite to Live nor Die.

20

So when the Year takes cold we see
Poor Waters their own Prisoners be :
Fetter'd and lock'd up fast they lie
In a cold self-captivity.
Th'astonish'd Nymphs their Floud's strange Fate deplore,
To find themselves their own severer Shoar.

Love, that lends haste to heaviest things,
In you alone hath lost his wings.
Look round and reade the World's wide face,
The field of Nature or of Grace ;
Where can you fix, to find Excuse
Or Pattern for the Pace you use ?

30

A Letter from Mr. Crashaw. 349

Mark with what Faith Fruits answer Flowers,
And know the Call of Heav'n's kind showers :
Each mindfull Plant hasts to make good
The hope and promise of his Bud.
Seed-time's not all ; there should be Harvest too.
Alas ! and has the Year no Spring for you ?

Both Winds and Waters urge their way,
And murmur if they meet a stay. 40
Mark how the curl'd Waves work and wind,
All hating to be left behind.
Each bigge with businesse thrusts the other,
And seems to say, Make haste, my Brother.
The aiery nation of neat Doves,
That draw the Chariot of chast Loves,
Chide your delay : yea those dull things,
Whose wayes have least to doe with wings,
Make wings at least of their own Weight,
And by their Love controll their Fate. 50
So lumpish Steel, untaught to move,
Learn'd first his Lightnesse by his Love.

What e're Love's matter be, he moves
By th'even wings of his own Doves,
Lives by his own Laws, and does hold
In grossest Metalls his own Gold.

All things swear friends to Fair and Good,
Yea Suitours ; Man alone is wo'ed,
Tediously wo'ed, and hardly wone : 60
Only not slow to be undone.
As if the Bargain had been driven
So hardly betwixt Earth and Heaven ;
Our God would thrive too fast, and be Too much a gainer by't, should we
Our purchas'd selves too soon bestow
On him, who has not lov'd us so.
When love of Us call'd Him to see
If wee'd vouchsafe his company,
He left his Father's Court, and came
Lightly as a Lambent Flame, 70
Leaping upon the Hills, to be
The Humble King of You and Me.
Nor can the cares of his whole Crown
(When one poor Sigh sends for him down)

350 A Letter from Mr. Crashaw.

Detain him, but he leaves behind
The late wings of the lazy Wind,
Spurns the tame Laws of Time and Place,
And breaks through all ten Heav'ns to our embrace.

Yield to his Siege, wise Soul, and see
Your Triumph in his Victory.

80

Disband dull Feares, give Faith the day :
To save your Life, kill your Delay.
'Tis Cowardise that keeps this Field ;
And want of Courage not to Yield.

Yield then, O yield, that Love may win
The Fort at last, and let Life in.

Yield quickly, lest perhaps you prove Death's Prey, before the Prize of Love.

This Fort of your Fair Self if't be not wone,
He is repuls'd indeed, but You'r undone.

Ps. 1.

O te te nimis, & nimis beatum !
Quem non lubricus implicavit error ;
Nec risu misero procax tumultus.
Tu cùm grex sacer vndique execrandis
Strident consilijs, nec aure (felix !)
(Felix !) non animo, vel ore mixtus,
Haud intelligis impios susurros.
Sed tu delicijs ferox repòstis
Cultu simplice, sobriâque curâ
Legem numinis usque, & vsque voluis.

10

Læta sic fidas colit arbor undas :
Quam nec immati violentus aurâ
Seirius frangit, neque contumacis
Ira procellæ.

At tu, profane pulvis, & lusus sacer
Cujusvis auræ ; fronte quâ tandem feres
Vindex tribunal ? quanta tum, & qualis tuæ
Moles procellæ stabit ? ô quàm ferreo
Frangère nutu, præda frontis asperæ,
Sacrique fulminandus ah procul, procul
A luce vultûs, aureis procul à locis,
Vbi longa gremio mulcet æterno pios
Sincera semper pax, & vmbrosâ super
Insurgit alâ, vividique nectaris
Imbres beatos rore perpetuo pluit.

Et stabit irâ torvus in impios,
Seseque sub mentes bonorum
Insinuat facili favore.

Joh. 4. Rogavit eum, vt descenderet, & sanaret filium suum.

Ille vt eat tecum, in natiqve, tuique salutem ?
Qui petis ; ah nescis (credo) quòd Ales Amor.
Ille vt eat tecum ? quàm se tua vota morantur !
Ille vt eat ? tantò seriùs esset ibi.
Ne tardus veniat, Christus tecum ire recusat :
Christi nempe ipsum hoc ire moratur iter.

Christi nempe vijs perit hoc quodcunque meatur :
 Christi nempe vijs vel properare mora est.
 Hic est, cui tu vota facis tua, Christus : at idem
 (Crede mihi) dabit hæc qui rata, Christus ibi est. 10

Luc. 5. 9. Pavor enim occupauerat eum super capturam piscium.

Dum nimiùm in captis per te, Petre, piscibus hæres,
 Piscibus (ut video) captus es ipse tuus.
 Rem scio. te prædam Christus sibi cepit : & illi
 Vna in te ex istis omnibus esca fuit.

Joh. 15. 24. vidérunt, & odérunt me.

Vidit ? & odit adhuc ? Ah, te non vidit, Jesu.
 Non vidit te, qui vidit, & odit adhuc.
 Non vidit, te non vidit (dulcissime rerum)
 In te qui vidit quid, quod amare neget.

Luc. 18. 39.

Tu mala turba tace. mihi tam mea vota propinquant,
 Tuque in me linguam vis tacuisse meam ?
 Tunc ego, tunc taceam, mihi cùm meus Ille loquetur.
 Si nescis, oculos vox habet ista meos.
 O noctis miserere meæ. miserere, per illam,
 Quæ tam læta tuo ridet in ore diem.
 O noctis miserere meæ. miserere, per illam
 Quæ, nisi te videat, nox velit esse, diem.
 O noctis miserere meæ. miserere, per illam,
 Hæc mea quam (fidei) nox habet ipsa, diem. 10
 Illa dies animi (Jesu) rogat hanc oculorum.
 Illam (oro) dederis ; hanc mihi ne rapias.

Mat. 22. In Phariseos Christi uerbis insidiantes.

Ergò veni ; quicumque ferant tua signa timores :

Veris descriptio.

Tempus adest, placidis quo Sol novus auctior horis
Purpureos mulcere dies, & sydere verno
Floridus, augusto solet ire per æthera vultu,
Naturæ communis amor ; spes aurea mundi ;
Virginæum decus ; & dulcis lascivia rerum,
Ver tenerum, ver molle subit ; jam pulchrior annus
Pube novâ, roseæque recens in flore juuentæ
Felici fragrat gremio, & laxatur odorâ
Prole parens ; per aquas, perque arva, per omnia latè
Ipse suas miratur opes, miratur honores.
Jam Zephyro resoluta suo tumet ebria tellus,
Et crebro bibit imbre Jovem. Sub frondibus altis
Flora sedens, audit (fœlix !) quo murmure lapsis
Fons patrius minitetur aquis, quæ uertice crispo
Respiciunt tantum, & strepero procul agmine pergunt.
Audit & arboreis siquid gemebunda recurrens
Garriat aura comis. audit quibus ipsa susurris
Annuit, & facili cervice remurmurat arbor.
Quin audit querulas, audit quodcunque per vmbras
Flebilibus Philomela modis miserabile narrat.
Tum quoque præcipuè blandis Cytheræa per orbem
Spargitur imperijs ; molles tum major habenas
Incutit increpitans, cestus magis ignea iores
Ingeminat, tumidosque sinus flagrantior ambit ;
Nympharum incedit latè, charitumque coronâ
Amplior, & plures curru jam nectit olores :
Quin ipsos quoque tum campis emittit apricis
Læta parens, gremioque omnes effundit Amores.
Mille ruunt equites blandi, peditumque protervæ
Mille ruunt acies : levium pars terga ferarum
Insiliunt, gaudentque suis stimulare sagittis ;
Pars optans gemino multum properare volatu
Aërios conscendit equos ; hic passere blando
Subsiliens leue ludit iter ; micat huc, micat illuc

 Et brevibus miscere vias, ac frangere gyris :
 Pars leviter per prata vagi sua lilia dignis
 Contendunt sociare rosis ; tum floreus ordo
 Consilio fragrante venit : lascivit in omni
 Germine læta manus : nitidis nova gloria pennis
 Additur ; illustri gremio sedet aurea messis ;
 Gaudet odoratas coma blandior ire sub vmbras.
 Excutiunt solitas (immutia tela) sagittas,

 Heauen was asham'd, to see our mother Earth

 But in a vaile of clouds muffling her head
 A solitary life she would haue led.
 Affrighted Phæbus would haue lost his way,
 Giving his wanton palfreys leaue to play 20
 Olympick games in the' Olympian plaines,
 His trembling hands loosing the golden raines.
 The Queene of night gott the greene sicknes then,

Upon the Kings Coronation.

Strange Metamorphosis ! It was but now
 The sullen heauen had vail'd its mournfull brow
 With a black maske : the clouds with child by greife
 Traueld th' Olympian plaines to find releife.
 But at the last (having not soe much powe'r
 As to refraine) brought forth a costly shower
 Of pearly drops, & sent her numerous birth
 (As tokens of her greife) unto the earth.
 Alas, the earth, quite drunke with teares, had reel'd
 From of her center, had not Joue vpheld
 The staggering lumpe : each eye spent all its store,
 As if heereafter they would weepe noe more.
 Streight from this sea of teares there does appeare
 Full glory flaming in her owne free sphære.
 Amazed Sol throwes of his mournfull weeds,
 Speedily harnessing his fiery steeds,
 Up to Olympus stately topp he hies,
 From whence his glorious rivall hee espies.
 Then wondring starts, & had the curteous night
 Withheld her vaile, h' had forfeited his sight.
 The joyfull sphæres with a delicious sound
 Affright th' amazed aire, & dance a round
 To their owne Musick, nor (vntill they see
 This glorious Phæbus sett) will quiet bee.
 Each aery Siren now hath gott her song,
 To whom the merry lambes doe tripp along
 The laughing meades, as joyfull to behold
 Their winter coates couer'd with flaming gold.
 Such was the brightnesse of this Northerne starre,
 It made the Virgin Phœnix come from farre
 To be repaird : hither she did resort,
 Thinking her father had remou'd his court.
 The lustre of his face did shine soe bright,
 That Rome's bold Eagles now were blinded quite,

Bright starre of Majesty, oh shedd on mee
A precious influence, as sweet as thee.
That with each word, my loaden pen letts fall,
The fragrant spring may be perfum'd withall.
That Sol from them may suck an honied shower,
To glutt the stomach of his darling flower.
With such a sugred livery made fine,
They shall proclaime to all, that they are thine.
Lett none dare speake of thee, but such as thence

Yet shall my loyall tongue keepe this command :
But giue me leaue to ease it with my hand.
And though these humble lines soare not see high,
As is thy birth ; yet from thy flaming eye
Drop downe one sparke of glory, & they'l proue
A præsent worthy of Apollo's loue. 20
My quill to thee may not præsume to sing :
Lett th' hallowed plume of a Seraphick wing
Bee consecrated to this worke, while I
Chant to my selfe with rustick melodie.
Rich, liberall heauen, what, hath yor treasure store
Of such bright Angells, that you giue vs more ?
Had you, like our great Sunne, stamped but one
For earth, 't had beene an ample portion.
Had you but drawne one liuely coppy forth,
That might interpret our faire Cynthia's worth, 30
Y' had done enough to make the lazy ground
Dance, like the nimble sphæres, a joyfull round.

But such is the cælestiall Excellence,
 That in the princely patterne shines, from whence
 The rest pourtraicted are, that 'tis noe paine
 To ravish heauen to limbe them o're againe.
 Wittnesse this mapp of beauty ; eüery part
 Of wth doth show the Quintessence of art.
 See ! nothing's vulgar, every atome heere
 Speakes the great wisdome of th' artificer. 40
 Poore earth hath not enough perfection,
 To shaddow forth th' admired Paragon.
 Those sparkling twinnes of light should I now stile
 Rich diamonds, sett in a pure siluer foyle ;
 Or call her cheeke a bed of new blowne roses ;
 And say that Ivory her front composes ;
 Or should I say, that with a scarlet waue
 Those plumpe soft rubies had bin drest soe braue ;
 Or that the dying lilly did bestow
 Vpon her neck the whitest of his snow ; 50
 Or that the purple violets did lace
 That hand of milky doune : All these are base ;
 Her glories I should dumme with things soe grosse,
 And foule the cleare text with a muddy glosse.
 Goe on then, Heauen, & limbe forth such another,
 Draw to this sister miracle a brother ;
 Compile a fift glorious Epitome
 Of heauen, & earth, & of all raritie ;
 And sett it forth in the same happy place,
 And I'le not blurre it with my Paraphrase. 60

 But with one cordiall smile. for (loe) that power
 Of Loues all-daring hand, that makes me burne,
 Makes me confess't. Oh, doe not thou with scorne,
 Great Nymph, o'relooke my lownesse. heau'n you know,

Upon the death of a freind.

Hee's dead : Oh what harsh musicks there
Vnto a choyce, and curious eare !
Wee must that Discord surely call,
Since sighs doe rise, and teares doe fall.
Teares fall too low, sighes rise too high,
How then can there be Harmony ?
But who is he ? him may wee know,
That jarres, and spoiles sweet consort soe ?
O Death, 'tis thou : you false time keepe,
And stretch'st thy dismall voice too deepe. 10
Long time to Quavering age you giue,
But to Large youth short time to liue.
You take vpon you too too much,
In striking where you should not touch.
How out of tune the world now lies,
Since youth must fall, when it should rise !
Gone be all Consort, since alone
He, that once bore the best part,'s gone.
Whose whole life Musick was ; wherein
Each vertue for a part came in. 20
And though that Musick of his life be still,
The Musick of his name yett soundeth shrill.

An Elegy upon the death of Mr Stanninow fellow of Queenes Colledge.

Hath aged winter, fledg'd with feathered raine,
 To frozen Caucasus his flight now tane ?
 Doth hee in downy snow there closely shrowd
 His bedrid limmes, wrapt in a fleecy clowd ?
 Is th' earth disrobed of her apron white,
 Kind winter's guft, & in a greene one dight ?
 Doth she beginne to dandle in her lappe
 Her painted infants, fedd with pleasant pappe,
 W^{ch} their bright father in a pretious showre
 From heavens sweet milky streame doth gently poure ? 10
 Doth blith Apollo cloath the heavens with joye,
 And with a golden waue wash cleane away
 Those durty smutches, w^{ch} their faire fronts wore,
 And make them laugh, w^{ch} frown'd, & wept before ?
 If heaven hath now forgot to weepe ; ô then
 W^t meane these shoures of teares amongst us men ?
 These Cataracts of greife, that dare eu'n vie
 With th' richest clowds their pearly treasure ?
 If winter's gone, whence this vntimely cold,
 That on these snowy limmes hath laid such hold ? 20
 What more than winter hath that dire art found,
 These purple currents hedg'd with violets round
 To corralize, w^{ch} softly wont to slide
 In crimson wauelets, & in scarlet tide ?
 If Flora's darlings now awake from sleepe,
 And out of their greene mantletts dare to peepe :
 O tell me then, what rude outrageous blast
 Forc't this prime flowre of youth to make such hast
 To hide his blooming glories, & bequeath
 His balmy treasure to the bedd of death ? 30
 'Twas not the frozen zone ; One sparke of fire,
 Shott from his flaming eye, had thaw'd it's ire,
 And made it burne in loue : 'Twas not the rage,
 And too vngentle nippe of frosty age :
 'Twas not the chast, & purer snow, whose nest
 Was in the modest Nunnery of his breast :

Noe. none of these ravish't those virgin roses,
 The Muses, & the Graces fragrant posies.
 W^{ch}, while they smiling sate upon his face,
 They often kist, & in the sugred place 40
 Left many a starry teare, to thinke how soone

Stay, silver-footed Came, striue not to wed
 Thy maiden streames soe soone to Neptunes bed :
 Fixe heere thy wat'ry eyes vpon these towers,
 Vnto whose feet in reuerence of the powers,
 That there inhabite, thou on euery day
 With trembling lippes an humble kisse do'st pay.
 See all in mourning now ; the walles are jett,
 With pearly papers carelesly besett.

See a sweet streame of Helicon,
Runne into death's black Ocean.
See his pretious siluer waue
I' th' jetty channele of a graue.
Hitler, Muses, turne your eyes,
See where your Aqua=vitæ lies.
Angry heaven doth now bequeath
This living fountaine vnto death.
Come therefore now, & him interre,
Find him a glorious Sepulcher. 10
But trust him not vnto the earth,
She had him euer since his birth.
In yo^r breasts lett him haue roome,
In those snowy hills a tombe.
Come, weaue your locks, those threads of gold,
Make a winding sheet, t'enfold
His Ivory limbs ; & in this shrine,
Heauens milky way he shall outshine.
From the Alabaster banckes
Of your cheekes pluck all the ranckes 20
Of those modest blusling roses,
And the Lillies : make you posies,
To deck his hearse ; & lett each were
The liquid jewell of a teare.
Your starry eyes, like tapers, burne,
That may conduct vs to his urne.

Death hath drawne our golden Carre
Into the miry graue soe farre,
That there (alas !) it's like to stand,
Vntill some loving Angells hand
Out of this prison sett's it free,
And mount it on heavens axell tree.
Then each cælestiall precious stone,
From their Christall boxes gone,
Shall gladly runne to kisse his feete,
And smoothly paue the milky street,
W^{ch} leads vnto the rosy harbour,
Where Apollo's bride doth harbour.
There he shall leane his louely head,
Vpon her crimson veluet bedd ;
From whence this starre of excellence
Shall shed his precious influence ;
And in spite of the sick steames,
And lazy foggs of death, his beames
Shall smiling flow in a bright shower
From Aurora's guilded bower.

Studies by heauens candle light,
And reades the volumes of the sky
With a too-ambitious eye,

An Elegy on the death of the Lady Parker.

Can such Perfection fade ? can Vertue die,
And find a graue, & not an Elegie ?
Can such a flaming Constellation
Of heauens bright graces, sweetly mett in one,
In silence be eclips'd, & forc'd to shrowd
Their precious beames under a marble clowd,
Without a swanlike Dirge ? Should I in verse,
As broken as my heart, her worth rehearse,
The jarring accents of my ragged song
Her lifes melodious harmony would wrong. 10
Nor can my humble fancy soare soe high,
As was her Excellence. Oh could I fly
Betwixt Seraphick pinions ! that I might Towre vpp to th' loftiest spheare, & take the height
Of full growne goodnes, & exactly see
The perfect modell of bright Sanctity !
Then would I dare in order to repeate
Each Scæne of her pure life, & tell how great
Her glories were, & euery grace enrowle,
And make a mappe of her most Holy soule. 20

 May with one groane be splitt ; & how I may

 How through the open sluces of mine eyes

An Elegy upon the death of Mr Christopher Rouse Esquire.

Christopher Rouse. } Anagr.
 Oh rich purest rose. }

Rich, purest rose, prime flowre of blooming youth,
 That once did'st flourish in a happy growth,
 Soe sweetly loaden with perfumes, that low
 The fragrant burthen made thy stalke to bow :
 When amorous heav'en beheld it, straightway to it
 Thousands of sacred Cupids came to woo it.
 Like as I'ue seene the daily labouring Bee
 Fly from her thatched cottage merrily
 Vnto some honyed mine, & all along
 The way singing a plaine melodious song, 10
 Spying at length the lillies snowy breasts,
 Or the pure sanguine roses cheekes, she rests,
 And Siren-like pleasantly sings a while,
 Vntill sh' hath flatter'd out her precious spoile,

Then to her waxen closets home she flies,
Bearing the liquid gold upon her thighes :
Just soe those heavenly Sirens, that doe swimme
In gulfes of deepest blisse, when they saw him,
Came singing divine Anthems, as they flew
Into the Paradise, where this rose grew. 20
Then on each part sate a cælestiall Bee,
That sung a sweet song for as sweet a fee ;
Thus heaven with earth did traffick, they did buy
The purest sweetnes for pure harmony.
But at the length into their starry hiue
They snatch't the rose itselfe ; thus they depriue
Earth of its most delicious influence,
Of all perfumes the very Quintessence ;
I meane that precious soule, where euery Grace
Tooke vpp its heauen on earth ; that glorious place, 30
Where each faire Virgin-vertue had her throne,
Each her embalmed habitation.
This was the Muses Helicon, the blest
Parnassus, where each had a Phoenix nest.
This haue they tooke, leaving the spoiled stemme,
I meane that corpes, the Caskett of that jemme,
W^{ch} earst wee had, sparkling with heavenly light,
With euery starre of excellencie dight ;
But now haue lost. ô Sorrow, giue me leaue
To begg this boone of those, that did bereaue 40
Vs of our blisse, that from their wings soe bright
One golden quill may take an easy flight :
With w^{ch} these lines I may characterize O're the blest place, where this rich relique lies.

 safe may she rest
 her laden boughes,
 on thy firme breast,
 and fill thy vowes,

up to the brimm, till she make euen their full topps with the faire eyed heauen,
And heauen to guild those glorious Hero's birth
 stoope and kisse earth : 120

11. Long may this happy heauen tyed band exercise its most holy art, keeping her heart within his hand,
 keeping his hand upon her heart, but from her eyes
 feeles he noe Charmes, finde she noe joy
 but in his armes ;
May each maintaine a well fledged neast of winged loues in eithers breast, 130
Be each of them a mutuall sacrifice of eithers eyes :

12. May their whole life a sweet song proue sett to two well composed parts, by musickes noblest master, Loue, playd on the strings of both their harts ;
 whose mutuall sound
 may euer meete
 in a just round,
 not short though sweet ; 140
Long may heauen listen to the songe, and thinke it short though it bee long ;
oh proue't a well sett song indeed, which showes sweet'st in the Close.

POEMS PROBABLY SPURIOUS.

On the Frontispiece of Isaacsons Chronologie explained.

IF with distinctive Eye, and Mind, you looke
Vpon the Front, you see more then one Booke.
Creation is Gods Booke, wherein he writ
Each Creature, as a Letter filling it.

History is Creations Booke ; which shoves
To what effects the Series of it goes.
Chronologie's the Booke of Historie, and beares
The just account of Dayes, Moneths, and Yeares.
But Resurrection, in a Later Presse,
And New Edition, is the summe of these. 10

The Language of these Bookes had all been one,
Had not th' Aspiring Tower of Babylon
Confus'd the Tongues, and in a distance hurl'd
As farre the speech, as men, oth' new fill'd world.

Set then your eyes in method, and behold
Times embleme, Saturne ; who, when store of Gold
Coynd the first age, Devour'd that Birthe, he fear'd :
Till History, Times eldest Child appear'd ;
And Phœnix-like, in spight of Saturnes rage,
Forc'd from her Ashes, Heyres in every age. 20
From th'rising Sunne, obtaining by just Suit,
A Springs Ingender, and an Autumnes Fruit.
Who in those Volumes at her motion pen'd,
Vnto Creations Alpha doth extend.

Againe ascend, and view Chronology,
By Optick Skill pulling farre History
Neerer ; whose Hand the piercing Eagles Eye
Strengthens, to bring remotest Objects nigh.
Vnder whose Feet, you see the Setting Sunne,
From the darke Gnomon, o're her Volumes runne, 30
Drown'd in eternall Night, never to rise ;
Till Resurrection, show it to the eyes

D Um vires refero vomitûs, & nobile munus,
Da mihi de vomitu, grandis Homere, tuo.
Nempe olim, multi cùm carminis anxia moles
Vexabat stomachum, magne Poëta, tuum ;
Ægraque jejuno tenuabat pectora morsu,
Jussit & in crudam semper hiare famem :
Phæbus (ut est medicus) vomitoria pocula præbens
Morbum omnem longos expulit in vomitus.
Protinus & centum incumbunt toto ore Poëtæ,
Certantes sacras lambere reliquias. 10
Quod vix fecissent, (scio) si medicamen ineptum
Venisset miserè posteriore viâ.
Quippe per amfractus, cæcique volumina ventris
Sacra (putas) hostem vult medicina sequi ?
Tam turpes tenebras hæc non dignatur. at ipsum

Quid parat iste tuus, posterus iste furor ?
Ah, truculente puer ! tam fædo parce furori.
Nec rapiat tragicas tam gravis ira nates.
Ecce fremit, fremit ecce indignabundus Apollo.

 O meritò spectatur equi patientia nostri !
 Dicite Jô. tantum quis toleravit equus ?
 Pegasus iste ferox, mortales spretus habenas,

 Noster equus tamen exemplo non turget in isto :
 Stat bonus, & solito se pede certus habet.
 Imò licèt tantos de te tulit ille pudores,
 Te tulit ille iterum. sed meliore modo.
 Tunc rubor in scapulas ô quàm bene transijt iste,
 Qui satis in vultus noluit ire tuos !

 Mille modis rabidam : jura, forumque fremit.
 Quin fera tu, taceas ; aut jura, forumque tacebunt :
 Tu legi vocem non sinis esse suam. 30
 O malè vibratæ rixosa volumina linguæ !

BIOGRAPHICAL DOCUMENTS.

Memoires of the Lives, Actions, Sufferings & Deaths of those Noble, Reverend, and Excellent Personages, That Suffered . . . for the Protestant Religion, And the great Principle thereof, Allegiance to their Sovereigne, In our late Intestine Wars, . . . By Da: Lloyd, A.M. sometime of Oriel-Colledge in Oxon. London . . . MDCLXVIII.

(p. 618)

Mr. Richard Crashaw, his Father had done so well in the Temple where he was Preacher ; and he promised so much where he was a Scholar, that two great Lawyers, I think Sir Henry Yelverton, and Sir Randolph Crew took him to their care, the one paying for his Diet, the other for his Cloaths, Books, and Schooling till he was provided of both in the Royal Foundation at Charter-House, where his nature being leisuely advanced by Art, and his own pretty conceits improved by those of the choicest Orators and Poets, which he was not onely taught to understand, but imitate and make, not only their rich sense his own, but to smooth his soul as well as fill it, for things are rough without words, their expressions too ; the essays Mr. Brooks (his worthy Master still alive, whose even, constant, and pursuing diligence and industry, did wonders in that School) imposed upon him, on the Epistles and Gospels, at School, were the ground of that Divine fancy, so famous in (a) Pembroke-hall, where he was Scholar ; and Peter-house, where he was Fellow, in Cambridge, where he was esteemed the other (b) Herbert of our Church, for making Poetry, as

Marginal notes by Lloyd :

(a) Whose way of versifying on sacred subjects was brought by Sir R. Dallington, sometimes Greek Scholar there, into the Charter-house, where he was Master and another Justinian.

(b) Mr. Herbert Brother to the Lord Herbert of Cherbury, Orator of the University of Cambridge, a Priest of the Church of England, whose Lyturgy he was ravished with, as all are with his Poems the Temple.

Divine in its object, as in its Original, and setting wit disparaged in talking out most of its gallant Genius on Fables, Women, Drollery, or Flattery; upon a matter and subject as noble as its nature, making his Verses not in his Study at St. Peters-house, but in his Devotions, wherein he spent many a night, at St. Maries Church; warbling his Hymns for St. Ambroses his Saints, under Tertullians Roof of Angels; having no other Helicon, than the Jordan of his eyes; nor Parnassus, than the Sion where dwelled his thoughts, that made the Muses Graces, and taught Poems to do what they did of old, propagate Religion, and not so much Charm as Inspire the Soul. Hebrew, Greek, Latine, Spanish, French, Italian, were as familiar to him as English. Philosophy came as plausible from him as his Speeches or Sermons; those thronged Sermons on each Sunday and Holiday, that ravished more like Poems, than both the Poet and Saint (two (c) of the most sacred names in heaven and earth) scattering not so much Sentences and [?] read 'as'] Extasies, his soul brea[t]hing in each word, was the soul of the Assembly, as its original is of the World. Poetry, Musick, Drawing, Limning, Graving, (exercises of his curious Invention, and sudden Fancy) were the subservient recreations of his vacant hours, not the grand business of his soul; his diet was temperate, to a Lesson [read 'Lessian'] exactness, whence his memory was so clear, that he had ready at his service the choicest treasures of Greek and Latine Poets, those Gibeonites to draw water to the Tabernacle. This Divine Poet, that had set a Language (made up of the Quintessence of Fancy and Reason) for the Angels (as the Schoolmen state their way of discourse) to converse in; seeing Atheism prevailing in England, embraced Popery in Italy, chusing rather to live in the Communion of that corrupt Church, in the practise of fundamental truths, confessed to be then mixed with some errors, than to stay here, where was hardly the face of any Church, after the overthrow of those to make way for all errors; being resolved to any Religion, than that which taught a holy Rebellion (d) and Perjury, a pious Sacrilege, a godly Parricide, and made the very horrors of nature, the glory of Christianity. And died of a Fever, the holy order of his soul over-heating his body, Canon of Loretto, whence he was carried to heaven, as that Church was brought thither by Angels, singing.

(c) A. C.

(d) He was turned out for not taking the Covenant.

Incorporations for 1641.¹)

This year Rich, Crashaw of Cambridge was incorporated, not that it appears so in the publick register, but in the private observations of a certain Master of Arts that was this year living in the University ; but in what degree he was incorporated those observations mention not. This person who was the Son of an eminent Divine named Will. Crashaw, was educated in Grammar learning in Suttons Hospital called the Charter-house near to London, and in Academical, partly in Pemb. Hall of which he was Scholar, and afterwards in Peter House of which he was Fellow ; where, as in the former House, his admirable faculty in Latin and English Poetry was well known. Afterwards he was Master of Arts, in which degree, 'tis probable, he was incorporated : But being soon after thrown out of his Fellowship, as many others of the said University of Cambridge were, for denying the Covenant in the time of the rebellion, he was for a time put to his shifts. At length upon an infallible foresight that the Church of England would be quite ruined by the unlimited fury of the Presbyterians, he changed his religion and went beyond the Seas, and took up his abode for a time in the great City of Paris : But being a meer Scholar and very shiftless, Mr. Abr. Cowley the Poet, did, upon intimation of his being there, find him out in a sorry condition, an. 1646 or thereabouts. Whereupon exhibiting to him, as much as laid in his power, for the present, did afterwards obtain for him Letters of commendation from Henrietta Maria Queen of England, then in those parts, and some relief. Afterwards he journied into Italy, and by virtue of those Letters he became Secretary to a Cardinal in Rome, and at length one of the Canons or Chaplains of the rich Church of our Lady at Loretto some miles distant thence, where he died and was buried about 1650. Before he left England he wrot certain Poems, which were intit. Steps to the Temple, because in the Temple of God, under his wing, he led his life, in S. Maries Church near to Peter House before mention'd. There, as 'tis said, he lodged under Tertullians roof of Angels. There he made his nest more gladly than Dauids swallow near the House of God, where like a primitive Saint he offer'd more prayers in the night, than others usually offer in the day. There he pen'd the said Poems called Steps to the Temple for happy Souls to climb Heaven by. To the said Steps are joyned other Poems intit. The delights of the Muses, wherein are several Latin Poems ; which tho of a more humane mixture, yet they are sweet, as they are innocent. He hath also written Carmen Deo nostro, being Hymns and other sacred Poems, addressed to the Countess of Denbigh. He was excellent in five Languages besides the Mother Tongue, viz. in Hebrew, Greek, Latin, Italian and Spanish ; the two last whereof tho he had little use, yet he had the knowledg of them, &c.

IV. *The record of Crashaw's death.*¹

Anno Domini 1649 die 21 Augusti

Reuerendus Dominus Riccardus Crosius Beneficiatus Almæ Domus Lauretanæ de Anglia ætatis suæ annorum 36 circiter in Communione Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ Animam Deo reddidit, cuius confessionem audiuit Reuerendus P. Erigus Lindunus Pœnitentiarius, sed a Reuerendo Domino Giorgio Tinto Curato roboratus fuit sacra Olei unctione, cuius corpus sepultum est in tumulo sacerdotum.

V. *A further note of Crashaw's appointment.*²

Riccardo Crashaw Inglese fu familiare del Card. Pallotto Protettore. Con Bolla 24 aprile 1649 ottenne il beneficio N° 7 le cui rendite consistevano in appezzamenti rustici e fruttavano scudi 96 : 46. oltre la porzione di pane e vino quotidiana e un assegno in danari.

¹ From the Archivi Parrochiali di Loreto, 'Liber Mortuorum', vol. II (1646-57), fo. 73. The date of the letter, similar to No. 1 above, appointing Crashaw's successor, is Aug. 25, 1649. ('Registro di Lettere, etc.' fo. 30 v.)

COMMENTARY.

THE MS. DEDICATION IN MS. ADDIT. 40176.

PAGE 2, ll. 21-2 sydus oris tui te plenissimū & virtutum tuarum. The mingled construction of 'plenus' with the ablative 'te' and the genitive 'virtutum', 'your countenance so full of yourself and your virtues', though curious, seems not impossible for a writer of Renaissance Latin. It also avoids 'oris tui tui'.

l. 23. modestiae. 'Modestia' has been suggested and may have been replaced by 'modestiae' owing to a slip in writing. If 'modestiae' is kept, the subject of 'dispensat' must be an unexpressed pronoun standing for 'sydus'. This goes well enough with 'minūs fervido . . . sed dulci . . . radio', though not so well with 'ymbram . . . offundens'; on the whole it seems best to retain 'modestiae'.

EPIGRAMMATUM SACRORUM LIBER.

[Cross-references will be found in the Index of first lines showing where Crashaw's Latin, Greek, and English epigrams correspond.]

PAGE 6, Heading] Benjaminio Lany. See D.N.B., art. 'Benjamin Laney'. Laney, whose dates are 1591-1675, was Master of Pembroke Hall from 1630 until his ejection in March 1643/4. The High Church principles and practices for which Crashaw praises him here and in the following poem caused him to be denounced by Prynne as 'one of the professed Arminians, Laud's creatures to prosecute his designs in the university of Cambridge' (Canterburies Doome, 1646, p. 176). After the Restoration he became bishop successively of Peterborough, Lincoln, and Ely.

PAGE 7, l. 60 (Non alio . . . &c) These words refer to 'pectra' in the previous line, and a modernized text would require a stop after the second bracket (or after 'Phæbo' inside the bracket).

PAGE 8, l. 70. Majorque cerni. The expression is copied from maiorque videri, used of the Cumaean Sibyl in Aeneid, vi. 49.

l. 76 comit. Compare p. 64, l. 4: 'Quæque comunt . . .' In both places Crashaw treats the first syllable of the verb as if it were short, and he seems to connect the word with cōma, hair, in accordance with a widespread error. Compare Cooper's Thesaurus (ed. 1573), art. 'Coma'.

l. 77. ipse Deus, Deus. Compare Virgil, Eclogues, 5, l. 64:
deus, deus ille, Menalca!

and Lucretius, 5, l. 8:

deus ille fuit, deus, inclute Memmi.

PAGE 9, Heading] Magistro Tournay. 'Joannes Turney' was admitted to Pembroke Hall March 1, 1620, and took the degrees of A.B. 1623-4; A.M. 1627; and S.T.B. (B.D.), 1634. On June 14, 1634, Dr. Samuel Ward wrote from 'Sidney College' to James Ussher: ' . . . We have had some doings here of late about one of Pembroke-Hall, who preaching in St Mary's, about the beginning of Lent, upon that text, James, chap. ii. ver. 22 seemed to avouch the insufficiency of faith to justification, and to impugn the doctrine of our 11th article of justification by faith only; for which he was convented by the vice-chancellor, who was willing to accept of an easy acknowledgment. but the same party preaching his Latin sermon, pro gradu, the last week, upon Rom. chap. iii ver 28 he said, he came not, palmodium canere; which moved our vice-chancellor, Dr. Love, to call for his sermon; which he refused to deliver Whereupon, upon Wednesday last, being Barnaby day, the day appointed for the admission of the bachelors of divinity, and the choice of the bachelors of divinity, which must answer die comitiorum; he was stayed by the major part of the suffrages of the doctors of the faculty And though sundry doctors did favour him, and would have had him to be the man that should answer die Comitiorum, yet he is put by, and one Mr Flatkers of our college chosen to answer. Whose first question is

1. Sola fides justificat

2. Realis præsentia Christi in eucharistia non ponit transubstantiationem

The truth is, there are some heads among us, that are great abettors of Mr Tourney, the party above-mentioned, who are no doubt backed by others.' (Elrington, Works of Ussher, 1847, vol xv, p 579) Compare the title of Crashaw's Latin poem, p. 208, below, 'Fides quæ sola justificat, non est sine Spe & Dilectione'.

l 11 (heu simili de prole puerpera) Compare Horace, Odes, iv v 23.

Laudantur simili prole puerperæ,

l 16 (Quàm primum potuit dicere) dixit, erit. Compare the second line of the distich which Suetonius ('Domitianus', 23) records as having been composed as a comment on the raven's remark, "Ἐσται πάντα καλῶς, a few months before Domitian's assassination.

Nuper Tarpeio quæ sedit culmine cornix

Est bene non potuit dicere, dixit: erit.

PAGE 10, Heading] Magistro Brook. Robert Brooke is described in Alumni Carthusiani, 1913 (B. Marsh and F. A. Crisp), as 'Usher 27 October 1626, Schoolmaster 8 December 1628, removed at the Assembly of 25 January 1644, after being sequestered by a Committee of the House of Commons for refusing the Solemn League and Covenant He matriculated 27 June, 1623, from Magdalen Hall, Oxford.' He received a pension after the Restoration (24 Jan 1664) and was still living when David Lloyd wrote his account of Crashaw (q v App II, p 415, above)

ll 15-16. Hic tuus inveniet, &c Crashaw may have remembered the lines in Hall's Satires (vi. 1 1-4), where marking with the nail and placing an obelus in the margins to indicate disapproval are mentioned:

Labeo reserves a long nayle for the nonce

To wound my Margent through ten leaues at once,

Much worse then Aristarchus his blacke Pile,

That pierc'd olde Homers side.

PAGE 11, l 31 Hæc coram, atque oculis legeret Lucretia justis. Crashaw probably had in his mind the concluding lines (9-10) of Martial, xi 16.

Erubuit posuitque meum Lucretia librum,

Sed coram Bruto; Brute, recede: leget.

PAGE 12, ll. 51-2 Veronensi . . Bilbilicisve. The reference is to Catullus and Martial, born at Verona and Bilbilis respectively.

PAGE 13, l 93. sint & bibit. Compare p. 53, ll. 7-8.

l 121. amaverit undas. The conjecture that 'ignes' should replace 'undas' might be adopted in view of (1) the weak antithesis in 'aquas' and 'undas'; (2) the 'ille ignis' of l. 123, apparently referring to the lines immediately preceding; and (3) Crashaw's use of this kind of phrase in the same connexion in 'The Weeper' (st. 17, p 311, below):

But can these fair Flouds be
Freinds with the bosom fires that fill thee

PAGE 14, l 126. testis for testis.. The comma seems more likely to represent a printer's error than an intentional break in the sentence on Crashaw's part.

l. 9 (prose) vendicant. Cooper's Thesaurus (ed. 1573) in accordance with an opinion then general has 'vendico . . . to vindicate : to clayme · to challenge to himselfe' as well as the classical 'vindico', to which is given the meaning : 'To reuenge or punish · to defend or deliuer from danger or wrong to restore to liberty'

l. 20 (prose). Quamquam δ. Compare Virgil, Aeneid, v. 194-5:

Non iam prima peto Mnestheus, neque vincere certo; Quamquam o!

l 25 (prose) magistros Acygnianos. See Biography, p xxii, above. The following passage in Barclay's Euphormionis Satyricon, Pars III ('Apologia Euphormionis pro se') is relevant to Crashaw's remarks: 'Quis captos Acignianorum artibus ignorat, qui cæterorum quidem tanquam barbara & incondita ingenia aspernati, apud Acignianos credunt Musas omnes felici facinore pæne in custodia haberi? Majestas & moderatio incessus, & secretum ab externis penetrale, tum quorundam ingeniorum felicitas, quæ in illis vigerunt, eos ad tam immodicam scientiæ famam evexit'

The spelling 'Acygnianos' instead of 'Acignianos', preferred by Barclay, probably refers to the derivation ἀ-κύκνος, which turns on the black dress of the Jesuits, as well as to the name of the society's founder.

PAGE 15, l. 4. Plus habet hic templi; plus habet ille Dei. This is an adaptation of the last line of Claudian's poem 'De sene Veronensi qui suburbium numquam egressus est' (ed. Koch, 1893, Carmina Minora, xx. 22):

Plus habet hic vitæ, plus habet ille viæ.

l. 13. Quis novus hic, &c. Compare Virgil, Aeneid, iv. 10:

Quis novus hic nostris successit sedibus hospes!

PAGE 17, l. 2. Nec frustra Æthiopem nempe lavare fuit. Compare the Greek proverb quoted by Lucian, 'Adversus indoctum', cap 28, Οἶδα ὡς μάτην ταῦτά μοι λελήρηται καὶ κατὰ τὴν παροιμίαν Αἰθίοπα σμήχειν ἐπιχειρῶ, and the epigram in the Anthologia Palatina (xi. 428), attributed to Lucian:

Εἰς τί μάτην νύπτεῖς δέμας Ἰνδικόν; Ἰσχεο τέχνης
Οὐ δύνασαι δυοφεμὴν νύκτα καθηλύσαι.

The legend to Alciati's fifty-ninth 'Emblema' is a translation of this Greek:

Abluīs Æthiopem quid frustra? ah desine: noctis
Illustrare nigræ nemo potest tenebras.

Erasmus in his 'Adagia' (p. 320, col. 2, in the 'Adagia' of J. J. Grynæus) has Æthiopem lavas · Æthiopem dealbas, and quotes Lucian κατὰ τὴν παροιμίαν, &c. (as above) with the translation 'Ac juxta proverbium, Æthiopem lavare conor'.

PAGE 18, ll. 7-8 Cur tibi tota vagos, &c. It looks as though Crashaw had the Fourth Satire of Juvenal fresh in his memory, or at least the earlier part, compare ll. 25-6 :

potuit fortasse minoris

Piscator quam piscis emi and 29-31 :

cum tot sestertia, partem

Exiguam et modicae sumptam de margine cenae,

Purpureus magni ructarit scurra Paletī and with Crashaw's line ending '... patrimonium census' compare Juvenal, x. 13 :

... cuncta exuperans patrimonium census.

PAGE 19, l. 5. (sic, sic juvat ire sub umbras) : from Virgil, Aeneid, iv. 660

PAGE 20, l. 14 Inque bonam felix i fugitive crucem This is a play on the common formula of objurgation.

I in malam crucem. Plautus, Casina, 977

Compare :

fugite hinc in malam crucem. Menaechmi, 1017

Ei directe in maximam malam crucem. Poenulus, 347.

PAGE 21, ll. 3-4.

unus

Iste oculus fiam totus & omnis ego.

Compare Catullus, xiii. 13-14 :

Quod tu cum olfacies, deos rogabis,

Totum ut te faciant, Fabulle, nasum

PAGE 23, l. 13. Pellibus exiguis arctatur, &c. This is a curious adaptation of Martial, xiv. 190 :

Titus Livius in membranis.

Pellibus exiguis artatur Livius ingens,

Quem mea non totum bibliotheca capit

Crashaw would have found the abandoned spelling 'arctatur'

PAGE 24, ll. 7-12. Frustra illum, &c. Compare Marino, La Lira, Part III, p. 175 (ed. 1615), 'Nel Martirio di S. Stefano', ll. 5-8 :

Son ben per lui crudeh, e fieri ordigni

La pietre sì ; ma 'l Martire dolente

Più de le vostre colpe i colpi sente,

Che 'l fulminar de' rigidi macigni.

PAGE 24, ll. 19-20. Ah, redeas, &c. Compare ll. 47-50 of the English poem on the same text, p. 380, below.

PAGE 30, l. 5. Vicinia sæva salutis, &c. Compare p. 236, l. 2 sqq., 'Stands trembling at the gate of blisse', &c.

l. 6. O quàm tu malus es proximitate boni ! Compare Ovid, Ars Amatoria, ii. 662 :

Et lateat vitium proximitate boni.

l. 7. Ah ! portu qui teste perit, bis naufragus ille est Crashaw is referring to a Latin proverbial saying. See A. Otto, Die Sprichwörter und sprichwörtlichen Redensarten der Römer, p. 284, where 'Navem in portu mergis' is quoted from Seneca the rhetorician (Rhet. Controv. ii 6 4), 'in portu, ut dicitur, naufragium' from St Jerome, Adv. Ioann. Hieros. 37, and 'in Romano portu naufragium fecit' from Jerome's In Rufinum ii 32.

Dimidium facti qui coepit habet Horace, Epistiles, i. ii. 40.

l. 16. Non possum Autumno nobiliore frui This recalls a line in Martial (xi. 69 12) which Crashaw probably had in his mind :

Non potui fato nobiliore mori.

*An Saulus fuerit cæcus, vix dicere possum ;
Hoc scio, quod captus lumine Saulus erat.*

This couplet belongs to a class of which the earliest and best-known is Martial's epigram, i. 32 :

Non amo te, Sabidi, nec possum dicere quare :
Hoc tantum possum dicere, non amo te.

Cf. Martial, xi 64 :

Nescio tam multis quid scribas, Fauste, puellis :
Hoc scio, quod scribit nulla puella tibi.

and John Owen, Bk V (Renouard's edition), epigram 8 :

An Petrus fuerit Romæ, sub iudice lis est ;
Simonem Romæ nemo fuisse negat.

Tantane vos generis tenuit fiducia vestri ?
Virgil, Aeneid, i 132

PAGE 35, l. 14. Dormit ; nec dormit omnibus illa tamen. 'Non omnibus dormio' was proverbial. See A. Otto, Die Sprichwörter und sprichwörtlichen Redensarten der Römer, p 121. It is in Polydore Vergil's Proverbiorum liber and Erasmus's Adagia. Crashaw would probably have known it from Erasmus, if not from Cicero, Epp. ad Fam. vii. 24. 1. The story with which the origin of the proverb was connected is thus told by R. Y. Tyrrell in his note on the passage of Cicero, who attributes the saying to Cypius.

The story about Cypius was that he was in the habit of pretending to be asleep, lest he should find himself forced to condemn something in the conduct of his wife ; but that on one occasion, when a slave, taking advantage of his apparent slumber, was making away with a stolen cup, he suddenly started up with the words, " I am not asleep to every one ", and recovered his stolen property.'

PAGE 38, ll. 15-16. Qui tanta negotia, &c. Compare 'Sospetto d' Herode' st. 15, ll. 7-8 (p. 113, below)

whose Birth
Was the great businesse both of Heav'n and Earth.

l. 24. Nympha pudica, &c. For this line, the best-known of all Crashaw's Latin verses, Prof. E. Bensly points out in Notes and Queries, Tenth Series, x, Oct. 17, 1908 (p. 307) that the poet may have been indebted to Maximilianus Sandæus (van der Sandt, 1578-1656) : Maria Flos mysticus siue Orationes Ad Sodales in festivitatis deiparæ Habitæ desumpta materia a floribus cum figuris Ereus [Mainz, 1629] 'On p. 24 opposite the beginning of the first oration ("Maria in Purificatione Rosa"), is an emblem, a rose with a picture in its centre of the presentation in the Temple, and under it the distich, Vin' scire unde suum rosa candida traxerit ostrum ?

Purgantem vidit Virginem, et erubuit

Compare also the translation from Grotius, p. 399, below, l. 52:

The water blush'd, and started into wine.

Crashaw's three concluding words are also used by Cabilliau, Magdalena (Antwerp, 1625, p. 199), Magdalea Silva, lxiii, l. 2:

Monstrifero speculo vidit, & erubuit.

Vida's Christiad, ii. 431:

Pars Jedaba venere: Canam hi liquere modo atra
Miratam puras in vina rubescere lymphas.

(See Notes and Queries, October 16, 1852, p. 358.)

Crashaw's epigram was remembered when its authorship was forgotten and it has been attributed to Dryden and to Addison. It was sometimes quoted (without original authority) with 'Lympha' for 'Nympha'. Grosart in his edition gives several translations into English by subsequent authors. See also Notes and Queries, Fourth Series, iv, p. 244 (1869).

PAGE 41, ll. 13-20 Sive oculos, sive ora, &c. Compare Marino, La Lira, Part II, p. 142 (ed. 1615), 'Alla piaga del costato', ll. 1-3:

Piaga dolce d' Amore,
Già tu piaga non sei,
Ma bocca di quel core,

PAGE 42, l. 7. antiqui agnosco vestigia patris The expression is apparently suggested by Virgil, Aeneid, iv. 23:

agnosco veteris vestigia flammae.

ll. 9-16. Nasceris, en! &c. Compare the poem 'Easter Day', which is a free version of this epigram, p. 100, below.

PAGE 45, ll. 5-6. Verum ubi composito, &c. The language is reminiscent of the passage in Aeneid, ii. 682-4, where Virgil describes the sudden appearance of fire which plays harmlessly about Iulus' head:

Ecce levis summo de vertice visus Iuli
Fundere lumen apex, tactuque innoxia mollis
Lambere flamma comas et circum tempora pasci.

PAGE 47, l. 17. I lictor; manibusque audacibus injice vinc'la. Compare Cicero, pro C. Rabirio, iv. 13, 'I, lictor, colliga manus', and Livy, i. 26. 11, 'I, lictor, conliga manus'.

PAGE 48, l. 2. Sic pugnum Logices stringere. For the clenched fist as the symbol of Logic (and the open hand that of Rhetoric) compare Owen, Epigrammata, Lib. II. 61:

Parcus & Prodigus.

Rhetoricæ studiosus ego sum, Prodigus inquit:

Parcus ait, Logicæ sum studiosus ego.

Semper clausa manus Logicam designat avari:

Prodiga Rhetoricam semper aperta manus.

l. 15. tumes: 'tume', which has been suggested, would no doubt give a more satisfactory sense, but as 'tumes' has both manuscript support and a meaning it seems best to retain it.

PAGE 50, l. 4. Cui vitæ ex ipso fonte sinitur aqua ! Compare Ovid, Epist. ex Ponto, III. v. 18 :

Gratius ex ipso fonte bibuntur aquae

l. 5. Felices animæ ! Compare Virgil, Aeneid, vi. 669, 'Dicite, felices animæ . . .', where Æneas is addressing the souls in Elysium

l. 19. Felix, qui potuit . Compare Virgil, Georgic, ii. 490 :

Felix, qui potuit rerum cognoscere causas.

PAGE 51, l. 5. Noli altum sapere (hoc veteres voluere magistri) It is rather curious that Crashaw should give this as a precept of 'veteres magistri', as it is a Biblical quotation, Rom xi 20 (Vulg.), 'Noli altum sapere, sed time' ('Be not high-minded, but fear') It seems possible that he was thinking for the moment of the printer's mark first adopted by Robert Étienne—the olive-tree bearing a scroll with 'Noli altum sapere sed time', and a figure of an aged man pointing to these words

PAGE 52, ll. 3, 4. Domitiane Crashaw has treated the first syllable as though it were long. Compare p. 365, 2, l. 6. below.

l. 6 possit ut ille mori. Compare Lucan, Belli Civilis, Lib. II 105-9, and especially l. 109 .

Non senis extremum piguit vergentibus annis
Præcepisse diem, nec primo in limine vitæ
Infantis miseri nascentia rumpere fata
Crimine quo parvi caedem potuere mereri ?
Sed satis est iam posse mori.

PAGE 64, l. 2 Heu cæli quantam hinc invidiam patimur ! Compare Virgil, Georgics, 1. 503 seq., where Virgil is praying that Octavian may still remain on earth :

Iam pridem nobis cæli te regia, Caesar,
Invidet, atque hominum queritur curare triumphos

ll. 5-6. tot pictæ vellera nubis ;

Vellera, quæ roseâ Sol varnavit acu.

Virgil, Georgics, . 441, has :

Ille ubi nascentem maculis variaverit ortum of the sun's spotted disk at rising, and Martial, viii. 28. 18, has

Texta, Semiramia quæ variantur acu, of embroidery. But to combine the notions and to speak of the sun's rosy needle is curious, though no doubt the fleeces of cloud help to introduce the metaphor, and also pictæ ; Virgil, e.g., has 'pictus acuchlamydem' (Aeneid, ix 582), 'pictus acu tunicas', &c. (Aeneid, xi. 777), and Ovid uses pingere acu for embroidering.

PAGE 65 [Title-page 1670]. Εἵνεκεν εὐμαθίης, &c. From Anthologia Palatina, vii. 22. 5-6 ; the poem is an epitaph on Sophocles. In the first line quoted Μελιχρὸς should be μελιχρὸς.

STEPS TO THE TEMPLE.

PAGE 75, l. 1. The Authors friend The identity of Crashaw's editor can only be conjectured. In view, however, of the close personal relations which the poet seems to have maintained with the Little Gidding community after his expulsion from Cambridge (see the letter which he wrote from Leyden in 1644, p. xxvii, above) it seems most natural that some member or associate of that community should have undertaken the work.

l. 4. Jamblichus (in vita Pythagoræ). The reference should be not to Iamblichus' Life of Pythagoras but to Eunapius' Life of Iamblichus in Vitæ Sophistarum (ed. Boissonade, 1878, p. 458), where mention is made of the power of levitation attributed to Iamblichus: 'te inter fundendum preces videri ab humo plusquam cubitos decem sublimem rapī atque attolli . . .'

l. 21. Suarez on the subject. The reference is probably to Suarez's Comm. et Disp. in Summam Theologicam S. Thomæ, I, pars II, lib. 2, c. 26, where it is denied that angels use human language, though there is no special mention of poetry.

l. 27. seven shares and a halfe. Compare Ben Jonson, Poëtaster, Act III, Sc. 1, ad fin., 'Commend me to seven-shares and a halfe'. Theatrical performers were distinguished as whole-sharers, three-quarter-sharers, half-sharers, &c.

PAGE 76, l. 42. St. Maries Church neere St. Peters Colledge. The church of Little St. Mary's, adjoining Peterhouse, was used as the college chapel prior to the building of the new chapel (begun 1632, see Introduction, p. xxii, above). It was the latter, and not Little St. Mary's, that was famous for the sculptured angels afterwards pulled down by the Parliamentary Commissioners in 1643.

l. 43. Tertullian's roofof Angels. Professor Souter suggests that this may refer to the passage in Tertullian's Liber de Spectaculis, c. xxvii (ed. Migne, I, col. 658), 'Dubitas enim illo momento, quo in diaboli Ecclesia fueris, omnes angelos prospicere de cælo, et singulos denotare, quis blasphemiam dixerit, &c.'. A writer in Notes and Queries, Fifth Series, vi, 1876, p. 233, E. Marshall, observes that Tertullian (De Anima, c. ix) speaks of the soul 'conversing with the angels' in church and calls the church 'heaven' in the De Spectaculis, c. xxv. It is also suggested that the phrase may refer to the interpretation which Tertullian gives of St. Paul's direction for the dress of women in public worship, who are 'to have power on the head because of the angels'; and the same writer notes Crashaw's own use of 'cælum' in connexion with Peterhouse Chapel in 'Votiva Domus Petrensis pro Domo Dei' (p. 206, ll. 7, 8, below):

nostrique per atria Cæli
(Sacra Domus nostrum est cælum).

l. 52. five Languages. David Lloyd (see Appendix II, p. 416, above) includes French.

l. 62. (almost Lessian temperance). See on p. 156 the poem 'In praise of Lessius his rule of health'.

PAGE 79. The Weeper. In this poem and in 'The Teare' (p. 84, above) Crashaw appears to have been indebted to Francisci Remondī Societatis Iesu Epigrammata et Elegiæ . . . Antverpiæ . . . M. DCVI., the work from which he translated his 'Alexias'.

elegies (see note, pp 450-2, below) Epigram xxix, Lib. I, (p 15) is as follows :

De lacrymis Sanctæ Mariæ Magdalenæ, quas ad Christi pedes effudit
*Felices nimium gemini tua lumina fontes,
Quæque venit trita sedula gutta via.
Se lacrymam esse tuam cuperet, dum vere tepenti
Labitur in molles humida gemma rosas.
Si manare oculis posset Pactolus ab istis,
Aurifer hac ret ditior amnis aqua
Tam pretiosa pedes Domini nisi lamberet unda,
Unda quid, ah ! querever, tam pretiosa peris ?*

Crashaw had also probably read some of Marino's verses on this subject : ' La Maddalena ai piedi di Christo | Madrigali ' (ed. Croce, 1913, p. 369), ' Maddalena di Tiziano ' (ed. cit., p. 242), ' Per la Maddalena alla Croce ' (ed. cit., p. 374) Crashaw may also have been indebted to Marino for the form See the stanza quoted below, note to st 14. Marino often uses stanzas of similar form See also the notes to the longer version, pp 448-9, below. Marvell's verses ' Eyes and Tears ' seem to show Crashaw's influence.

St. 1, ll. 1 and 3. Compare Baduini Cabillavi e Soc. Jesu Magdalena, Antwerp, 1625, Lib II. Elegia xiv (p 59) :

Magdalenæ lacrymæ gemmæ

Magdals vt glacies Phœbeo saucia telo
Liquitur, & vernâ plus nuue delacrymat.

St 4, ll 1-2. Vpwards thou dost weepe, &c Compare Hermannus Hugo, Pia Desideria, Lib. I. viii, who quotes from Ecclesiasticus xxxv 18 and 19 : ' Nonne lacrymæ viduæ ad maxillam descendunt ? A maxilla enim ascendunt, usque ad cœlum.'

St. 4, l. 3. milky rivers. See note to p 312, st. xix, ll. 4-6, below.

PAGE 80, St 5, l 6-st. 6, l. 6. Compare Donne, ' Twicknam Garden ' (Works, ed. Grierson, vol. i, p. 29), ll. 19-22 :

Hither with christall vyals, lovers come,
And take my teares, which are loves wine,
And try your mistresse Teares at home,
For all are false, that tast not just like mine ;

It will be observed that the phrase ' crystall violls ' is used in the 1648 and 1652 versions of ' The Weeper ', see p. 310, st. xii, below.

St. 7, l. 2. The Primroses pale cheek Compare Cymbeline, iv. ii 221 : ' The flower that's like thy face, pale primrose '.

St. 7, l 5. Much rather, &c Compare the epigram by Remond quoted above, note to heading, l. 3, ' Se lachrymam esse tuam cuperet '.

St. 8, l. 2. the Amber-weeping Tree. Crashaw no doubt refers to the story of the Heliades.

PAGE 81, St. 14, ll. 1-6. Golden, &c. Compare the epigram by Remond quoted above in note to heading, ll. 5-6. Compare also (for l. 6 especially) Marino, op. cit., ed. Croce, p. 371 :

Dalla testa e da' lumi
e di chiome e di lagrime confonde, sparse in lucide stille e 'n tepid' onde,
costei, torrenti e fiumi.
Oh ricchezza, oh tesoro !
Due piogge : una d'argento e l'altra d'oro.

l 2 murmurs though See foot-notes The use of 'though' in this way at the end of a sentence is paralleled in the verses 'On a Treatise of Charity' (p 138, l. 26, below)

PAGE 83. The Teare See note introductory to 'The Weeper' pp. 432-3, above 'The Teare' probably represents material not used in the longer poem In the 1648 edition st 5 of 'The Teare' is given in both poems.

[See the cross-references in the Index of first lines, showing where Crashaw's English epigrams correspond to the Latin and Greek. It will be noticed that with only three exceptions (p. 86.1, p. 100.1 and p. 102.2) Latin counterparts, more or less complete, of all the epigrams in English given here were either published in 1634 or exist in MS Tanner 465, but many of those in Latin have no English counterpart. It seems likely that the Latin epigrams were generally written first, a selection being afterwards translated into English.]

ll. 1-4 Each blest drop, &c Compare Joseph Beaumont, 'The Waters of H Baptisme' (Minor Poems, ed. Robinson, pp 38-9):

The Waves came crowding downe apace,
Each one ambitious for y^e grace
To touch that skin, a Purer Thing

Then their owne Spring.

Thus were They washed, (& not He Who came as clean as Puritie) . .

ll. 5-10. Let it no longer, &c. Compare the Latin version of this epigram in Stubbe's Horæ Subsecivæ (1651)—see Introduction, p. xlv, above—which is as follows:

In Æthiopem baptizatum. Act 8 38.

Opus nē videatur impossibile, Æthiopem
In-summo-nigrificantem lavare
Lotus est enim, & cutis nigra umbrosum jam
Animæ candidæ est velum
Nigram, puto, domum diliget perpetuò
Immortalis post hæc columba.

PAGE 86, ll 5-6. Here, where, &c. Compare ll. 7-8 of the Latin epigram Nascens, en! &c, p. 42, above

l. 11. my golden Lad. A similar expression is used by William Crashaw in The Iesuites Gospel (1610), pp. 9 and 72:

I will not, oh I dare not, golden childe translating:

Nolo tuas ô nolo tuas puer auree mammas:

PAGE 89, ll 19-20. Two went, &c. Compare the Latin version of this epigram in Stubbe's Horæ Subsecivæ (1651)—see Introduction, p. xlv, above—which is as follows:

Duo homines ascenderunt in templum ad precandum. Luc. 18. 10.

Precaturi ibant duo, vel ut ità dicam:
Ille precaturus, hic jactaturus
Hic grande incedens propè accessit, alter
Quâ è regione non sustinuit prospicere.
Unus quidem aram egregiam propè venit,
Sed prope Deum, qui sortitus est aram, unus.

PAGE 96, l 1 A Drop, one drop, &c. Compare William Crashaw, translating from Clarus Bonarscius (Carolus Scribanius) in The Iesuites Gospel (1610), p. 9 :

But one, euen one poore drop I do implore from thy right hand, or side : I aske no more.

PAGE 100, ll 1-6. Th' have left thee naked, &c. Compare Marino, La Lira, Part III, p. 190 (ed. 1615), ' Il sudore del sangue ' :

*Suda sangue (ahi bontade)
Rè, che prendendo la corona, e'l regno,
Di rugiadosa porpora celeste
Tesse a le membra sue la regia veste*

PAGE 102. Sampson, &c. l 1 Could not once, &c. Compare the Latin version of this epigram in Stubbe's Horæ Subsecivæ (1651)—see Introduction, p. xlv, above—which is as follows :

Samson excæcatus ad Dalilam.

Crudelis, nōne suffecit semel lumina auferre ?
Oculus captus eram ubi te primum vidi.

Psalme 23. To some extent this poem resembles in spirit and rhythm a poem in William Crashaw's A Manuall for True Catholics London, . . . 1611 That book begins with some translations of ' holy meditations and Prayers. Gathered out of certaine ancient Manuscripts, written 300 yeares ago, or more.', and this section contains the poem in question, a translation of the verses beginning ' Hæc est fides orthodoxa ' and headed ' The conclusion with a deuout and holy prayer ' (p. 32).

ll 5-6. On whose pastures, &c. Compare William Crashaw, op. cit., p. 36 :

Here the light doth neuer cease,
Endlesse spring and endlesse peace

PAGE 103, ll. 21-4. When my simple, &c. Compare William Crashaw, op. cit., p. 34 .

Oh doe thou stay my feete from treading
In paths to hell and horror leading :

PAGE 109. Sospetto d' Herode. Comparison with the original, Marino's La Strage de gli Innocenti (? first published in 1610), will show that as usual Crashaw has given himself a very free hand, and that for many of the most striking phrases in the English translation there is no counterpart in the Italian.

Argomento, l. 2. Death's Master. In T the reading is ' Monarch '. Below, st. 40, l. 7, T reads ' imperiall ' for ' impartiall ' ; and in st. 51, l. 1, the blank in the printed texts following the word ' Herod ' is filled in T by the phrase ' leige to Cesar '. It seems worth suggesting that the changes in the printed text in these instances may have been the work of an unintelligent censor, who thought it his duty to delete such references to kingship as caught his eye in a hasty reading. Compare the story of censorial objection to Milton's metaphor of the eclipse (Paradise Lost, l. 594-9) which ' with fear of change Perplexes Monarchs '.

St. 2, l. 1. Great Anthony. The reference is to St. Anthony of Padua.

PAGE III, St 7, l. 4 looke Kingdomes dead Compare Lovelace, Lucasta, 1649, p 127.

Finding she could not looke,
She struck him dead

St. 8, l 8 While his steele sides, &c. Compare Milton, On the Morning of Christs Nativity, l 172 :

Swindges the scaly Horrour of his fouled tail

PAGE II2, St. II, l 3 wasted with care. Compare Milton, Paradise Lost, l. 601-2 : 'care Sat on his faded cheek'.

St II, l 4. To become beautifull in humane blood. There appears to be nothing in the Italian original corresponding to this somewhat obscure line, which is probably to be taken with 'care' in l. 3 Satan, who has lost 'all the Beauties of his once bright Eyes' (st. 10, l. 2), has often experienced the desire ('care') to regain his beauty through the shedding of human blood.

PAGE II3, St. 15, ll 7-8. whose Burth, &c. See note to p 38, ll. 15-16

PAGE II4, St. 18, ll. 5-7 and spread his spatious wings &c. Compare Milton, Paradise Lost, ii 927-8 :

At last his Sail-broad Vannes
He spreads for flight.

St. 18, l. 8 Of sturdy Adamant . . . charne. Compare Paradise Lost, l. 48 'In Adamantine Chains'.

St 19, ll 6-7 And gave a gastly shreeke, &c. Compare Milton, Paradise Lost, l 542-3 :

A shout that tore Hells Concave, and beyond
Frighted the Reign of Chaos and old Night

PAGE II6, St 28, l. 2 To make the partner, &c. Compare Milton, Paradise Lost, i. 653-4 :

A generation, whom his choice regard
Should favour equal to the Sons of Heaven

St. 28, ll 7-8 What though I mist my blow, &c Compare Milton, Paradise Lost, l 105 sqq :

What though the field be lost ?
All is not lost ; the unconquerable Will, &c.

PAGE II7, St 30, l. 8. Oprest the common-people of the skyes. Compare Sir Henry Wotton, 'On his Mistris, the Queen of Bohemia', l. 4, 'You Common-people of the Skies' (Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, 1651, p. 518)

St. 31, ll. 3-8. the reflection of thy forepast joyes, &c. Compare Middleton, The Witch, II. i 218-21 :

'Tis not so much the horror of their pains,
Though they be infinite, as the loss of joys ;
It is that deprivation is the mother
Of all the groans in hell, . . .

PAGE 130. On Mr. G. Herberts booke intituled the Temple of Sacred Poems, sent to a Gentlewoman. The Temple. Sacred Poems and Private Ejaculations was first published in 1633.

ll. 11-12. These white plumes, &c. These two lines were printed in the 1650 edition of Recreation for Ingenuous Head-peeeces Or, A Pleasant Grove for their Wits to walke in, and in the subsequent editions of 1654, 1663, and 1667, in the course of a brief foreword to ll 11-28 of Vaughan's 'The Resolve' 'I would commend to thy sharpest view and serious consideration, The Sweet Cælestiall sacred Poems by Mr. Henry Vaughan, intituled Silex Scintillans

(Heare him thus invite thee home)'

PAGE 131. In memory of the Vertuous and Learned Lady Madre de Teresa, &c This poem was no doubt inspired by the autobiographical work, La Vida de la Santa Madre Teresa de Jesus. This was translated into English (though not for the first time) in 1642: The Flaming Hart or the Life of the Glorious S. Teresa, Foundresse of the Reformation, of the Order of the All-Immaculate Virgin-Mother, our B. Lady, of Mount-Carmel . . . Antwerpe M DC. XLII The translator signs himself 'M T.'. Compare the title of Crashaw's poem first published in 1648, The Flaming Heart, &c. (see p. 324, below)

PAGE 133, ll 79-80. His is the dart. The reference here and elsewhere in this poem, and also in The Flaming Heart (see p. 325, below), is to the incident recorded as follows in the 1642 translation of the biography, p. 419:

'It pleased our Blessed Lord, that I should haue sometimes, this following Vision I saw an Angell very neer me, towards my left side, and he appeared to me, in a Corporeall forme; though yet I am not wont to see anie thing of that kind, but very rarely. For, though . . . But, in this Vision, our Lord was pleased, that I should see this Angell, after this other manner He was not great; but rather little; yet withall, he was of very much beautie. His face was so inflamed, that he appeared to be of those most Superiour Angells, who seem to be, all in a fire; and he well might be of them, whome we call Seraphims; but as for me, they neuer tell me their names, or rankes; yet howsoever, I see thereby, that there is so great a difference in Heauen, between one Angell, and another, as I am no way able to expresse I saw, that he had a long Dart of gold in his hand; and at the end of the iron below, me thought, there was a little fire; and I conceaued, that he thrust it, some seuerall times, through my verie Hart, after such a manner, as that it passed the verie inwards, of my Bowells; and when he drew it back, me thought, it carried away, as much, as it had touched within me; and left all that, which remained, wholly inflamed with a great loue of Almightye God. The paine of it, was so excessiue, that it forced me to utter those groanes; and the suauitie, which that extremitie of paine gaue, was also so very excessiue, that there was no desiring at all, to be ridd of it; nor can the Soule then, receaue anie contentment at all, in lesse, then God Almightye himself'

PAGE 134. ll. 101-2. Loves his death, &c. Compare The Flaming Hart (1642), p. 417: 'For, the Soule, as I was saying, would alwaies be very glad, if she might be euer dying, of this Disease'.

PAGE 137. On a Treatise of Charity. Robert Shelford, the author of the book in which this poem first appeared in 1635 (see foot-notes), was an M.A. (1587) of Peterhouse. On the title-page of Five Pious and Learned Discourses, &c., he is described as 'of Ringsfield in Suffolk Priest'. James Ussher, writing to Dr Samuel Ward of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge, from Drogheda, Sept 15, 1635, refers to Shelford and his book as follows 'But while we strive here to maintain the purity of our ancient truth, how cometh it to pass that you in Cambridge do cast such stumbling blocks in our way? by publishing unto the world such rotten stuff as Shelford hath vented in his five discourses; wherein he hath so carried himself, ut Famosi Perni amanuensem possis agnoscere. The Jesuits of England sent over the book hither to confirm our papists in their obstinacy, and to assure them that we are now coming home unto them as fast as we can; I pray God this sin be not deeply laid to their charge, who give an occasion to one blind thus to stumble' (Elrington, Works of Ussher, vol xvi, p 9).

PAGE 139. On the Assumption This poem was strangely treated by Tate, who in the second edition of his Poems (1684, p. 169) has 'An Attempt on the Ode of Assumption, By Mr Crashaw'—a mere transposition of Crashaw's words.

PAGE 141, ll 47-52. All the sweetest showers, &c Compare Joseph Beaumont 'Jesus inter Ubera Maria' (read 'Mariæ') (Minor Poems, ed. Robinson, p. 17)

True, He needs no Sweets, say They,
But Sweets have need of Him, to keep them so.

PAGE 149. Musicks Duell. The Latin poem of which this is a free translation is by the Jesuit Famianus Strada (1572-1649) and appears to have been first published in Provisiones Academicæ, Oratoriæ, Historicæ, Poeticæ. R. P. Famiani Stradæ Romani à Societate Iesu . . . Colonia Agrippinæ, . . . Anno M DC XVII. (Lib. II. Prolvs. VI. Poet. Academia. II. p 351, Claudiani stylus): The following is the original text. It will be noticed that ll. 57-156 of Crashaw's poem are an expansion of only fifteen lines (35-49) of the original.

Et propè succedens stetit abdita frondibus, alte
Accipiens somnium, secumque remurmurat, & quos
Ille modos variat legitis, hæc gutture reddit.*

*Sensit se Fidicen Philomela imitante referri,
Et placuit ludum volucris dare. plenius ergo

Nunc cæsim variat, modulisque canora minutis.
Delibrat vocem, tremuloque reciprocatur ore.*

*Miratur Fidicen parvis è faucibus ire
Tàm varium tàm dulce melos · majoraque tentans
Alternat mira arte fides · dum torquet acutias,
Inciditque graues operoso verbere pulsat,
Permiscetque simul certantia rauca sonoris,
Ceu resides in bella viros clangore lacessat.
Hoc etiam Philomela canit dumque ore liquenti
Vibrat acuta sonum, modulisque interplicat æquis ;
Ex inopinato grauis intonat, & leue murmur
Turbinat introitus, alternantique sonore
Claratur, & infuscat ceu martha classica pulset.*

*Scilicet erubuit Fidicen, iraque calente,
Aut non hoc, inquit, referes Citharistria siluæ,
Aut fracta cedam cithara Nec plura loquutus
Non imitabilibus plectrum concentibus urget
Namque manu per fila volat, simul hos, simul illos
Explorat numeros, chordaque laborat in omni,
Et strepit, et tinnit, crescitque superbius, & se
Multiplicat relegens, plenoque choreumate plaudit
Tum stetit expectans, si quid paret æmula contra.
Illa autem, quanquam vox dudum exercita fauces
Asperat, impatiens vinci simul aduocat omnes
Ne quidquam vires. Nam dum discrimina tanta
Reddere tot fidium natia & simplice tentat
Voce, canaliculisque imitari grandia parvis ;
Impar magnanimis ausis, imparque dolori
Deficit & vitam summo in certamine linguens
Victoris cadit in plectrum, par nacta sepulcrum.
Vsque adeo & tenues animas ferit æmula Virtus.*

Strada's poem has been paraphrased by other English poets ; among Crashaw's contemporaries, by John Ford in The Lovers

Melancholy (publ. 1629), Act 1; Sc 1, by William Strode in The Academy of Pleasure (1656, p. 123), ed. Dobell (1907), pp. 16-18; by Vilvain, Enchiridion Epigrammatum, 1654, p. 177, and by 'Mr Wilson' in Poems by Several Hands, collected by N Tate, 1685, p. 405. There is an anonymous version, Strada's Musical Duel, . . . In Latine, Much Enlarg'd in English . . . 1671 4°. Sig. A3 has a drop-title 'Strada's Musical Duel, In Latine; First imitated in English by Mr Crashaw, then by Mr Hinton, and now by a third Hand so enlarg'd, and the whole Frame of the Poem so alter'd, that little of Strada is preserv'd, save only the Scene and Issue of the Duel. All in a more familiar Style then that of Claudian imitated by Strada'. There is a manuscript version in the British Museum, Add. MS 19268. Later versions were made by Ambrose Phillips, by I. M. in the Gentleman's Magazine, Aug. 1791, &c. Seventeenth-century allusions to contests between a nightingale and singers or musicians are numerous, as in Coryat's Crudities, 1611, p. 253.

He became a Jesuit in 1572 and was professor of philosophy at Douai for seven years. Hygiasticon, seu vera ratio valetudinis bonæ et vitæ . . . was published at Antwerp in 1613 and 1614. For further details see Biographie Nationale de Belgique, art. 'Leys'. The translation published at Cambridge in 1634 has been attributed to Nicholas Ferrar, but the evidence for this seems hardly complete.

This epigram is ascribed to Leonidas, apparently Leonidas of Alexandria. It is thus rendered by Grotius:

The Delights of the Muses. 441

(Note kindly supplied by Mr. A. Attwater.)

Vpon the Death of a Gentleman See headings in T and A3 quoted in the foot-notes. Michael Chambers entered Queens' College in 1625 and became Fellow of the same college in 1630. He was buried Feb. 16, 1633/4 in the college chapel. (Searle, The History of The Queens' College, 1871, p. 511.)

Why should some rude hand carve thy sacred stone,

And there incise a cheap inscription ?

When we can shed the tribute of our tears

So long, till the relenting marble wears ;

Which shall such order in their cadence keep,

That they a native epitaph shall weep ;

Dispiegate	Ch' a suelarlo,
Guance amate	Ch' a mostrarlo
Quella porpora acerbetta ,	Perderan le perle, e l'ostro.
Che peridenti	Apri o labro
Che dolenti	Di cinnabro

Deh scoprite,	Ch' ad aprirlo,
Deh partite	Ch' a scoprirlo
Chiare stelle i vostri rai ;	Riderà la terra, e 'l cielo.
Che partendo	Tocca, tocca
Che scoprendo	Bella bocca
Fia men chiaro il sol d' assai.	L'aria homai di qualch' accento ;
Deh togliete	Che toccando,
Quella rete	Che parlando
Auree chiome, aureo thesoro ,	Tacerà per l' aria il vento.
Ch'a toccarni	Ma se fuore
Ch'a spiegarui	Tant' honore
Tornerà quest' aria d'oro.	Non sospinge il tuo sereno,

Ad Principem nondum natum. The references to Charles I's return (presumably from Scotland; see the poem Rex Redux, p. 193, above, and note ad loc.) make it probable that the unborn child in question was James (afterwards James II), born Oct. 14, 1633.

PAGE 195. Wishes. This poem had already appeared in a shorter form in Witt's Recreations Augmented with Ingenious Conceits for the wittie, And Merrie Medecines for the Melancholie. . . . 1641. The first edition, 1640, does not contain the poem, which in that of 1641 is on pp. V8^v-X1^v (under separate division, entitled Fancies and Fantasticks) as follows:

Wishes to his supposed Mistresse.

Who e're she be,
That is the onely shee,
That shall command my heart and mee :

Might you heare my wishes,
 Bespeake her to my blisses,
 And be ye call'd my absent kisses
 I wish her beauty,
 That owes not all his duty
 To gawdie tyre, or some such folly
 A face that's best,
 By it's owne beauty drest,
 And can alone command the rest.
 Joyes that confesse
 Vertue her Mistresse,
 And have no other head to dresse
 Life that dares send
 A challenge to his end,
 And when it's come say, welcome friend
 I wish her store
 Of wealth may leave her poore
 Of wishes : and I wish no more
 Now if time knowes
 That her, whose radiant browes
 Weave them a Garland of my woes ;
 Her that dare be
 What these lines wish to see,
 I seeke no further, it is she Let her full glorie
 (My fancies) fly before ye
 Be ye my fection, but her my storie

PAGE 197, l. 70 flight In the sense of 'fleeting'. See art. 'flight' in O.E.D. There is no need to adopt the emendation 'slight'.

PAGE 206. Votiva Domus Petrensis Pro Domo Dei. In connexion with Crashaw's interest in Matthew Wren's new chapel at Peterhouse see Introduction, p. xxii, above, and T A Walker's Peterhouse (1906).

ll. 20, 27, 31, 33 Quando erit, ut . . . Crashaw has taken the phrase from Ovid, Héroides, vii (Dido to Aeneas), 19-20 :

*Quando erit, ut condas instar Carthaginis urbem,
 Et videas populos altus ab arce tuos ?*

PAGE 208. Fides quæ sola iustificat, non est sine Spe & Dilectione. See note to p 9, above.

PAGE 209, l. 45. Illa Fides vacuâ quæ sola superbiet aulâ : 'vacuâ . . . aulâ' may be an echo of Horace, Odes, iii xiv. 36 .

Et vacuum patefecit aulam.

PAGE 214. In Eundum Scazon. This poem immediately follows the elegy 'Vpon the Death of Mr. Herrys' beginning 'A Plant of noble stemme' (see p 167, above, and note to p 164).

Ad Reginam, &c. The collection in which this and the following poem, To the Queen, first appeared (see foot-note) was published in honour of the birth of Prince Henry, July 8, 1640. In 48 they immediately precede the poem To the Queen, Vpon her numerous

PAGE 221. Thesaurus malorum fœmina. The full proverb is as in T (see foot-note) Erasmus, Adagia under 'Thesaurus malorum' has : 'Extat inter Græcicas sententias huiusmodi senarius :

Θησαυρός ἐστὶ τῶν κακῶν κακὴ γυνή.

Id est Thesaurus est mulier malorum, si mala est '

PAGE 222, l 19 Hæc satis in nostros fabricata est machina muros. Compare Virgil, Aeneid, ll. 46 (of the Trojan horse) :

Aut hæc in nostros fabricata est machina muros.

In Apollinem depereuntem Daphnen. This piece and the three following are modelled metrically on the lines 'Pasiphaes Fabula' to be found in several books printed by Crashaw's time, e.g. Epigrammata et Poemata Vetera, Paris, 1590 (ed P. Pithou), p. 447. The twenty-two lines, each in a different metre, reproduce the various lines employed by Horace.

Eneas Patris, &c, ll 1-2. Mænna Trojæ, &c. Probably reminiscent of Virgil, Aeneid, ll. 289-90 :

'Heu fuge, nate dea, teque his' ait 'eripe flammis.

Hostis habet muros, ruit alto a culmine Troia '

PAGE 225, Elegia l 4. The meaning would no doubt be made clearer to the modern reader by printing :

Et saltem 'ah ! periit' dicere 'noster amor'.

But Crashaw does not make a habit in his Latin verses of distinguishing speeches by means of inverted commas.

PAGE 226. Damno affici sæpe fit lucrum. ll. 3-4. Luxuriam annorum, &c. The wanton life (luxuriam) attributed to the serpent is illustrated by a remark in the notes to the 1621 edition of Alciatus' Emblemata, p. 36, on emblem 5, 'Serpentem quoque inter significationes alias turpium voluptatum, & mollium illecebrarum notam esse, aliunde didicimus' (nota meaning practically 'symbol'). In Joachim Camerarius's Emblemata, centuria iv, no. 82, the serpent shedding its skin represents a man putting away sin, and a quotation from St. Basil is given, in which he exhorts men to be wise as serpents, and, as the serpent creeps through a narrow place to strip off its old skin, so to put off the old man by walking in the narrow way. Compare again Caussin, Polyhistor Symbolicus (1631), Lib IX, no. 4.

CARMEN DEO NOSTRO.

PAGE 231. The Countesse of Denbigh. A good account of the life of Susan, first Countess of Denbigh, is given in Royalist Father and Roundhead Son (1912), by Cecilia, Countess of Denbigh. The first countess was the daughter of Sir George Villiers and sister of George, Duke of Buckingham. She appears ultimately to have subscribed to the Roman Catholic faith, her son, Basil, second

Earl of Denbigh, having made formal acknowledgement to this effect in 1651.

so in the end,

He may enjoy his dearest Lord, &c.

Compare Sir T. Browne, Religio Medici, Part I, Section vii: 'so that I might' (first, unauthorized, edition (1642) has 'so I might') 'enjoy my Saviour at the last, I could with patience be nothing almost unto Eternity'.

PAGE 235. Vpon the pictures, &c. Search has been made for the manuscript in question, but vainly.

l. 16. Thomas Car See D.N.B., art. 'Thomas Carre' (Miles Pinkney). His dates were 1599-1674. After studying at the English College at Douay he was ordained priest in 1625 and was afterwards appointed procurator of the college, holding the office till 1634. He was then for many years occupied in founding the monastery of canonesses of St. Augustin at Paris, where he died.

PAGE 236. Emblem and verses, 'Tis not the work of force but skill, &c. Dr. M. Praz calls my attention to the similarity between this emblem and one on p. 140 of Af-beeldinghe van d'eerste eeuw der Societeyt Iesu . . . T'Antwerpen . . . M DC. XL. The heart is enclosed in a heavy ornamental frame; the hinge is on the left side and the lock on the right. Beneath the emblem are the words:

Tantum opus est verbo { Men kan het van buyten
Met een vvoort ontslyvten.

Crashaw may have seen the volume while in Holland.

l. 2. Stands trembling at the gate of blisse The main idea of this poem is anticipated in the Latin epigram beginning:

Penè? quid hoc penè est? Vicinia sæva salutis!
(see p. 30, above).

PAGE 237, l. 15. long time. Possibly the article 'a' has been dropped before 'long'. Compare the second version of this poem, p. 348, above, l. 9, 'a great while try'de'.

ll. 15-16 It seems possible that these two lines are interrogative, with the sense 'Who can be said to grant at last when every effort has been made to combat persuasion?' In neither version does the punctuation lend any positive support to this view; a full-stop was sometimes used in the seventeenth century after a question. But 'Who' more probably refers to 'no'.

ll. 46-7. And hast . . . That healing shaft. Compare Joseph Beaumont 'Love' (Minor Poems, ed. Robinson, p. 23):

Soft as y^e Ray
Of this Sweet Day

Are all His healing Shafts where e'r they slay.

PAGE 243, l. 142. And kill the Death of this Delay. Compare p. 238, l. 58:

To saue your life, kill your delay.

of' here signifies 'consisting in'.

PAGE 255. In the Glorious Epiphany, &c. l. 41. half-sphear. The form 'spear' for 'sphere' ('spheare' 48), although already old-fashioned by 1650 is repeated in this 1652 edition (see below, p. 338, l. 18) and might justifiably have been retained in both places.

PAGE 258, ll. 152-7. And the Great Penitent, &c. Crashaw perhaps visualizes the sun signifying by compression of its lips and by the 'loue-eclipse' its renunciation of the love (compare l. 161) or worship which it had formerly received. For this the laws of nature can offer no explanation, though the sun is acting in accordance with human domestic law, which it feels to be relevant to the sin of sun-worship and to the sorrow which it feels for having permitted it. Or, again, the sun's behaviour may be a mere gesture of sympathy and self-effacement, and the domestic laws those by which Christ was judged.

l. 162. Their hated louses. 'Hated' because of the sun's own repentance.

ll. 165-8. Miss-ledde before . . . stumble' on true Light. Compare King Lear, IV. i. 18-21:

I have no way, and therefore want no eyes;
I stumbled when I saw. Full oft 'tis seen,
Our means secure us, and our mere defects
Prove our commodities.

PAGE 259, l. 184. at lest, to worship Thee. The phrase 'at lest' appears to go with 'worship' and not with 'Him', 'to worship Thee' is not the only thing which may be learnt. The comma has emphasizing value. Crashaw may, however, have written 'last'.

l. 192. The right-ey'd Areopagite. The reference is to the pseudo-Dionysius (not, as Grosart stated, to St Paul) and to his doctrine of the 'via negativa' (compare ll. 210-12, below) and S. Dionysius Areopagita, De Mystica Theologia, especially chaps. 1 and 11 (ed. Migne, 1857, cols. 997-1032).

ll. 204-5. O ye two Twinne Sunnes! The reference is to the child's eyes. Compare Phineas Fletcher, Poetical Miscellanies, 'An Hymn' (ed. Anderson in Poets of Great Britain, vol. IV, p. 471) st. 2, ll. 1-3.

Wake, O mine eyes! awake, and view
Those two twin lights, whence heavens drew
Their glorious beams.

PAGE 260, l. 236. At lest by us. This would seem to mean 'through our agency, at least', if not in physical fact.

PAGE 263. The Office of the Holy Crosse. The original of this Office is in many medieval manuscript Books of Hours and was published in the Sarum Primers which appeared in Queen Mary's reign. See, for example, The Prymer in Englysshe and in Latin, sette out alonge, after the use of Sarum (Rothom. . . 1555). Compare also Maskell, Monumenta Ritualia Ecclesiae Anglicanae, 2nd edition, 1882, vol. III, pp. x-xii. Crashaw's translation of the verse is, as usual, of the freest possible order.

PAGE 266. The Prayer, l. 5. The omission in the text of 48 (see foot-notes), which eludes the charge of praying for the dead, may be due to some person who did not share Crashaw's Roman faith.

PAGE 277. Vexilla Regis. The freedom of Crashaw's rendering of this and of other well-known Church hymns or sequences will be appreciated by comparison with the originals. In the present instance see Daniel, Thesaurus Hymnologicus (1855), vol. I, p. 160.

PAGE 284. Sancta Maria Dolorum. Compare Daniel, Thesaurus Hymnologicus (1855), vol II, pp 131-3 (Jacobus de Benedictis: 'Sequentia de Septem Doloribus Beatæ Virginis').

PAGE 287, st. XI, ll. 7-10. Fold up my life, &c. The variant reading of 48 makes the meaning clearer. The two final lines are perhaps ambiguous; (i) 'thy lord's in death' might go with 'prayers'; sc. that thou may'st be thy lord's in death; (ii) more probably the concluding phrase parallels the preceding one; sc. thy lord's breath poured out for thee in (his) death.

PAGE 291. The Hymn of Sainte Thomas Compare the original 'Adoro te devote, latens deitas', given in Daniel, Thesaurus Hymnologicus (1855), vol I, p 255.

PAGE 294. Lauda Sion Salvatorem. Compare Daniel, Thesaurus Hymnologicus (1855), vol II, p 97 (S. Thomas Aquinas 'De venerabili Sacramento in festo Corporis Christi').

PAGE 298. Dies Iræ Compare Daniel, Thesaurus Hymnologicus (1855), vol II, pp. 103-8 (Thomas de Celano, 'Prosa de Mortuis').

PAGE 302. The Hymn O Gloriosa Domina The original hymn is mentioned though not included in Daniel's Thesaurus Hymnologicus; but is in Mone's Latinsche Hymnen des Mittelalters (1854), vol II, p. 129, with the heading 'Purificationis b. Mariæ v.' The text is as follows:

O gloriosa femina
excelsa supra sidera, qui te creavit provide,
lactas sacro ubere.

Quod Eva tristis abstulit, tu reddis almo germine;
intrent ut astra flebiles,
cœli fenestra facta es.

Tu regis alti janua et porta lucis fulgida:
vitam datam per virginem
gentes redemptæ plaudite!

Deo patri sit gloria etc.

PAGE 308. The Weeper. See notes to version first published in 1646, pp. 432-4, above.

PAGE 311, st. XVII. But can these fair Flouds, &c. Compare John Owen, Epigrammata, i 74 (published in 1606):

Nilo negli occhi, Ætna nel cuore

Frigidus ardentem intravit Nilus ocellos,
Dum cor Ætnæo carpitur igne meum
Nec tantus fluvio lacrymarum extinguitur ardor,
Nec tanti fletus flumina siccant amor.
Sic sibi discordes, exercent vim tamen ambo,
In me concordem, ignis et unda suam.

Compare also Green, Never too Late, 'Isabella's Ode', ll. 27-32:

Her eies carried darts of fire
Featherd all with swift desire;

Yet fourth these fierie darts did passe
 Pearled teares as bright as glasse ;
 That wonder 'twas in her eine
 Fire and water should combine

PAGE 312, st. xix, ll 4-6 two faithfull fountaines ; Two walking baths, &c. Many parallels to these much criticized lines might be quoted. Compare Hermannus Hugo, Pia Desideria (1624), Lib. I. viii :

Quis dabit capiti meo aquam, et oculis meis fontem lacrymarum, et plorabo die ac nocte.
 (Jer. ix. i.)

Capta nec Andromache qua lumina proluit unda,
 Illa meis lacrymis unda sat esse potest,
 Nec tua, Jesside, lacrymati balnea lecti,
 Balnea nocturnis humida semper aquis. (ll 9-12.)

Hos oculis voveam gravidis mihi currere nimbos ;
 Et caput hoc totus fiat ut Oceanus. (ll. 27-8.)

Compare also Cabilliau, Magdalena (1625), Magdalea Silva, xlvii (p. 186), ll 1-2 :

Everris madido concinno sedula lymphas,
 Vnde Dei in castos balnea fusa pedes.

and xlv (p. 200), ll. 3-4 .

Falleris, & nescis nec falleris. alba gemello
 Te dare fonte putas balnea ? flendo capis.

Southwell uses in a similar connexion the metaphor of the bath ; see ' Saint Peter's Complaint ', lxiv, ll. 1-2 :

O pooles of Hesebon ; the baths of grace,
 Where happie spirits diue in sweet desires,

Compare Gervase Markham, Marie Magdalens Lamentations, 1601 (ed. Grosart, ' The Conclusion,' st. 17, l. 4) :

Thou letst me wash Thy feet in my teare bath :

There are also Elizabethan usages of ' cistern ' in similar connexions. Compare Greene, Selimus, ll. 1450-2 :

for how can Aga weep ?
 Or run a brinish shower of pearled tears,
 Wanting the watery cisterns of his eyes ?

Compare also Marlowe, Hero and Leander, sestiad i, ll. 296-9 :

Forth from those two tralucet cisterns brake
 A stream of liquid pearl, which down her face
 Made milk-white paths

PAGE 324. The Flaming Heart. This title appears to be borrowed from that of the English translation of the Life of S. Teresa, published in 1642 at Antwerp. See note to p. 131, above.

PAGE 333, ll. 49-51. Thence he might tosse you, &c. Compare G. Herbert, 'The Pulley', ll. 19-20 :

If goodness lead him not, yet weariness
May toss him to my breast

PAGE 334. Alexias. The originals of these three elegies, in F. Remond's . . . Epigrammata et Elegiæ . . . Antverpiæ 1606, were published several times in the seventeenth century. The freedom with which Crashaw treats them will be seen by comparison with the following passages, which give all that seems obviously to have been drawn upon. In Crashaw's 'second elegy' only ll. 19-30 appear to be based on Remond, and the original Latin verses are found in Remond's 'Elegia Quinta'. Crashaw's 'third elegy' refers to Remond's 'Elegia Secunda'.

ELEGIA PRIMA

Illa ego Romana virgo laus magna iuuentæ
Quæ toties fueram mille negata procis,
En iaceo miseranda nouo sine coniuge coniux,
Pæne relictæ priùs quàm bene iuncta viro
Succedit tantis etiam noua cura querelis,
Vulneret (heu !) teneros quo vagas orbe pedes.
Si mihi nota foret regio qua liber oberrat,
Inciperet certus mitior esse dolor.
Illi missa graues narraret epistola curas,
Audirét meas forsitan ille preces
Nectuntur scribendo moræ : prior ipsa volarem,
Atque meæ fierem nuntia tristitiæ.
Cedere nam didici furtim, te, ô Alexi, magistro,
Et fugere è patria sola puella domo.
Ipse daret pedibus celeres amor anxius alas,
Præcipitque irem per loca vasta fuga.
Nullaque virgineos tardare pericula gressus,
Dicere nec possent, parua puella mane.

(Twenty-six lines not translated)

Méque docebit amor, fuerit si fracta carina,
Indociles vndis arte mouere manus.

(Eighteen lines not translated.)

Si tamen in me eritis crudeles vos quoque pisces,
Naufraga si duro sum pertura mari,
Me manibus perijsse tuis, amor alme, iuuabit :
Custus honorati funeris auctor eris.
Déque meo pontus faciet sibi nomine nomen,
Et felix inter sidera sidus ero.
Nauita præteriens illa plorabit in unda,
Firmabitque mea vota marina fide ;
Et dicet, periit quondam hîc Romana puella,
Dum toto amissum quæreret orbe virum.
Viuat tantus amor : semper sis, ô bona virgo,
Tam dilecta Deo, quàm bene fida viro.

(Sixteen lines not translated.)

In 'The Seconde Elegie', ll. 19-30 correspond to the following lines in Remond's

ELEGIA QUINTA.

Ast ego quot Soles numero ? si credis amanti, Quolibet in spatio sæcula mille traho.

*Iam didici stellas, iam Lunæ tempora novi,
Eois iam sum doctior Astrologis.
Surge, age, pacato sidus mihi noscere cælo,
Ætheredisque nouo lumine vince faces.
Quale Magos olim Christi ad cunabula reges
Duxit, & optatam constitit ante casam :
Nascere, & ambiguum radijs mihi percutere Alexim.
Ibo nec incertas pes teret usque vias.*

'The Third Elegie' corresponds to Remond's

ELEGIA SECVNDA.

*Crudelis regio, quæ te fouet vsque latentem
Illa meis facta est terra beata malis.
Ah ! percat quisquis, si fas est dicere, primus
Inuiri docuit terga domare salis ;
Intactum qui fregit iter, montesque subegit,
Virgineam pedibus qui violauit humum
Septem colles, & Tybridis Ostia, tutus
Exigui limes tunc erat imperij.
Tunc erat Vrbs vix nota sibi, paruoque Quiriti
Extremi Æthiopes porta Capena fuit
Dictator numerabat oues pressoque senator
Fessus aratro, humili sub lare iura dabat.
Nunc quoque sic vtinam, clausis regionibus, esses
Mecum sub vili pauper Alexi casa ?
Cur fugis à patria non ullo pulsus ab hoste ?
Si tibi cura mei est, ô fugitiue redi
Si tibi cura mei nulla est, miserere parentum ;
Quem trahis, ipse rubet spiritus esse prium
Non hæc sperabant merita solatra vitæ
Et pater infelix, & miseranda parens.
Immatura utrique paras heu ! funera, iam iam
In tumultum tristi cum patre mater abit.
Prompta tuæ tu solus habes medicamina culpæ ;
Funera regressu sunt reuocanda tuo.
Vita veni, quid enim peccauimus omnes ?
Totâne Roma potest esse nouerca tibi ?
Ast ego quid merui ? vel quo rea crimine dicor ?
Nullum in me crimen, præter amare, vides.
Si tibi virginitas, iuuenis castissime, sancta est,
Virgineo possum viuere nupta thoro.
Viuere si possum cum coniuge virgine virgo,
Cur fugis aspectus dure marite meos ?
Este mihi testes Superi, nil firmitus opto,
Quàm vita exacta cælibe posse mori.
Connubij non vincula venus, non fœdera nectit ;
Nec facit amplexus concubitusque virum.
Cælicolùm Regina potens, & gloria terræ
Ipsa simul coniux, virgo parensque fuit.
Cæcilia antiquæ potuit noua gloria gentis
O quàm dissimilem ducere virgo virum !
Contugis in thalamum prima cum nocte veniret,
Protinus exclamat, Valleriane caue :
Valleriane caue, custos fortissimus adstat,
Qui mihi libati corporis ultor erit.*

Est mihi virginitas summo iurata Tonanti ;
Perungul in lectum fert sua vota sopor.
Gorgone tuta, meo caream Alite ? telaque vibrans,
Fringitur à vobis Pallas, inermis ero ?
Crede mihi, Paradis non est hæc fabula vestri,
Cùm Menelaceo raptâ Lacena thoro est.
Sum tua, tu meus es, Christum cole ; sim modò virgo.
Tu pater, & coniux, & mihi frater eris.
Sic ait Ille sacro lustratus fonte, meretur
Optato cœtherei militis ore frui.
Sanguis utrumque iterum fecunda in morte maritat :
Ornat utrique manum palma, corona caput,
Noster Hymen tali caleat face, teda iugalîs
Sentiet haud flammâs dire Cupido tuas.
Femina, virque iugo sacri subiguntur amoris.
O quanta existit vis in amore pari !
Ast ego te rerum pulcherrime, semper amavi :
Sic placidi redeant in mea vota dies.
O ! quoties cum me peteret malè sana procorum
Turba, meus, dixi, solus Alexis erit.
Altera vera fuit, fuit, heu ! vox altera mendax ;
Et solus, sed non dicaris esse meus.

PAGE 338. Description of a Religious House. Compare Barclay, Argenis, Lib. V (p. 613 in Leyden edition of 1630) :

Non isthic aurata domus, luxurque fluentes
Sunt epulæ, spondave sopor pretiosus eburna,
Aut in carbaseo Tyrius velamine murex.
Non gemma vibrante nitor, non persona cantu
Limina, non prono famulantium examina collo,
Atque avidas quicquid trahit in certamina gentes ;
Sed nemora, & nudæ rupes, neglectaque squalent
Confraga : Sunt epulæ viles, jussæque quietis
Hora brevis Duro velantur corpora texto :
Et labor in pretio, & vitam mors longa fatigat.
At neque crudeles Diræ, vilique flagello
Sæviti cura ferox : falso non abditus ore
Ipse sua insanus furit in præcordia livor.
Alma quies parvisque habitat concordia tectis,
Et semper niveo veri de pectore risus.
Ipsa suæ meminit stirpis, seseque Deisque
Meus fruitur felix, & novit in astra reverti.

l. 18. sphear. See note to p. 255, l. 41, above.

PAGE 339, l. 35. kingdoms of contentfull Cells. Compare the phrase in the letter written by Crashaw in 1643, 'a little contentfull kingdom' (see Introduction, p. xxix, l. 32, above).

An Epitaph, &c. Printed as 'An Epitaph On Alcander, and Julietta his Wife, who died in one anothers Arms, two Days after Marriage. By R. S.' In New Miscellaneous Poems. With The Cavalier's Answers to the Nun's Five Love-Letters. In Verse. London . . . 1716, p. 62. The appropriation (on p. 202) follows this, the longer, original version, and the variants are chiefly in ll. 1-6 :

To these, whom Death again did wed,
 This Tomb's a second Marriage-bed ;

For tho' the cruel Hand of Fate
 Could Soul and Body separate,
 It could not Man and Wife divide,
 They liv'd one Life, one Death they dy'd.

A LETTER FROM MR. CRASHAW.

PAGES 348-50. See notes to pp. 236-7, above.

POEMS FROM MSS., INCLUDED IN PREVIOUS MODERN EDITIONS.

PAGE 352. Ps. 1. Crashaw's original MS. may have indicated by spaces after ll. 10, 14, and 25 the changes of metre, ll. 1-10 being Phalæcian hendecasyllables, ll. 11-14 a Sapphic stanza, ll. 15-25 six-footed iambics, and ll. 26-9 an Alcaic stanza.

PAGE 354. Epig. 1, l. 2. Certè non hominem vox sonat. euge Deus! Compare Virgil, Aeneid, i. 328:

... nec vox hominem sonat: O, dea certe.

1. 3. Sed tamen iste Deus qui sit, vos dicite, vermes. Compare Virgil, Eclogues, i. 18:

Sed tamen, iste deus qui sit, da, Tityre, nobis.

PAGE 355. Epig. 3, ll. 1, 3. Joannes . . . Joanne. Here and in some other places though the MS. reads 'J' the scansion is probably quadrasyllabic and would be clearer to the modern reader from the spelling with 'I'. 'J' and 'I', however, were hardly sufficiently differentiated in Crashaw's time to justify emendation.

Apocal. xii. 7, ll. 1, 2. Arma, viri! . . . A reminiscence, probably, of Aeneas's cry (Aeneid, ii. 668):

Arma, viri, ferte arma.

PAGE 356. Epig. 2, In Atheniensem merum. The expression seems to have been suggested by Juvenal, Sat. vi. 187, where mera Cecropis is applied to the Roman lady who discards her Latin dialect and becomes 'a pure Athenian'. (In both cases 'a pure Athenian' is applied not to a native of Athens but to one who has Athenian characteristics) Compare Introduction, p. xxxi, l. 1, above.

Nox erat, et caelo fulgebat luna sereno.

PAGE 358. Epig. 2, l. 2. Vt bene Vox fuerit, prætereaque nihil. Compare Erasmus, Apophthegmata, ii. 1. 13: Alius [sc. Laco] cum in luscinia plumis revulsis minimum reperisset carniū: Vox, inquit, tu es, præterea nihil. The original, ὡὰρ τὸ τὸ τὸ ἐσσί, καὶ οὐδὲν ἄλλο, is in Plutarch, Moralia, 233 A (Apophthegmata Laconica). Xylander's translation (1570) is Vox tu es, & nihil præterea.

PAGE 360. Epig. 1, l. 3 vos somnia terrent. Compare Virgil, Aeneid, iv. 9:

Anna soror, quae me suspensam insomnia terrent!

Epig. 2, l. 7. Vsque adeò haud tuus hic ferus est, neque ferreus hostis! The jingle is borrowed from Tibullus, i. x [xi in old edd.], 1-2 :

Quis fuit, horrendos primus qui protulit enses ?

Quam ferus et vere ferreus ille fuit !

or (less probably) from Cicero, Ad Quintum Fratrem, i. iii. 3 : Quem ego ferus ac ferreus e complexu dimisi meo.

PAGE 362. Epig. 3, l. 3. Non vidit, te non vidit (dulcissime rerum). From Horace, Satires, i. ix. 4 :

Quid agis, dulcissime rerum ?

PAGE 363. Epig. 5, l. 1. legat. One of Crashaw's mistakes of quantity. He must mean the verb 'legare', the first syllable of which is long.

Epig. 6, l. 1. quicunque. The meaning seems to be 'whatever terrors bring signs of thy coming'.

PAGE 364. Fehces! &c In this piece Crashaw shows once more his interest in the Massacre of the Innocents as a poetic theme. Compare pp. 88 and 109 sqq., above. The central thought is summed up in the last two lines, where 'vita' stands for true or eternal life and 'ævum' for mortal life

l. 15. In vitæ multo The expression may be somewhat unusual, but with the meaning 'in a long extent of life, in a prolonged life' exactly fits the sense of the passage, and the 'multo multæ' is in keeping with the pointed style of the piece. Crashaw could, further, have adduced Tacitus, Annals, iv 39 : 'nam sibi multum superque vitæ fore, quod tali cum principe explevisset.'

patet area. The phrase was probably suggested by Ovid, Epist. (Heroides), i. 72 :

Et patet in curas area lata meas.

and Tristia, iv. iii. 84 :

Et patet in laudes area magna tuas.

l. 20 Res longa, &c. The alteration is metrically necessary and Crashaw can hardly be thought responsible for the reading in the MS.

PAGE 365. Epig. 2, l. 6. Sic tua te Pallas, Domitiane, juvat ? 'tua Pallas' (1) because Domitian affected a special cult of Minerva ('Minervam, quam superstitione colebat', Suetonius, Domitianus, 15), and (2) because Pallas was the creator of the olive-tree. Pallas is sometimes used in poetry as actually equivalent to oil, e.g. in Ovid, Heroides, xix (Hero to Leander), 44 :

Pallade iam pingui tinguere membra putas ?

and Tristia, iv. v. 4 :

Ut vigil infusa Pallade flamma solet.

With the treatment here of 'Domitiane' as if the first syllable were long, compare that of cōmit, p. 8, l. 76, above, and see note thereon. See also note to p. 52, ll. 9-10, above.

Epig. 4, ll. 1-3 :

Ah ferus, ah culter ! qui tam bona lilia primus

In tam crudeles jussit abire rosas.

Virgineūm hoc qui primus ebur violavit ab ostro.

Compare Virgil, Aeneid, xii. 67-9 :

Indum sanguineo veluti violaverit ostro
Si quis ebur, aut mixta rubent ubi lilia multa
Alba rosa : talis virgo dabat ore colores.

PAGE 367. Epig 2, ll. 3-4. Compare p. 181, ll. 116-17.

PAGE 369, l. 26. Ego enim . . . mecum agnoscere, &c. Crashaw is contrasting 'mecum agnoscere' and 'profiteri palam', and though 'mecum agnoscere' is without satisfactory classical authority it seems best to keep it, in view of the 'secum cogitare' found in classical Latin and in the Vulgate, and of the passage in Cicero's De Fimibus (u. 23 76), by which Crashaw may have been influenced : 'Eamne rationem igitur sequere, qua tecum ipse et cum tuis utare, profiteri et in medium proferre non audeas ?'

PAGE 370. Spes Diva. l. 6 tugurij. The second syllable of this word, though short, is here treated as if it were long.

PAGE 371. Non accipimus brevem vitam, sed facimus. From Seneca, Dialogorum, Lib. X ('De Brevitate Vitæ'), cap. 1 4, 'Ita est : non accipimus brevem vitam sed facimus, nec inopes eius sed prodigi sumus'.

Pulchra non diuturna. l. 8. umbræque somnij. The ultimate origin of this phrase is in Pindar, Pythia, viii 135 (95) sq., 'Ἐπάμειροι· τί δέ τις ; τί δ' οὐ τις ; σκιῶς ὄναρ ἄνθρωπος, though in Crashaw the phrase is inverted, the 'dream of a shadow', becoming the 'shadow of a dream'. Jean Passerat (1534-1602) begins an epitaph which he wrote for himself with the lines .

Qui sim, viator, quæris ? ipse nescio :
Nisi quod sepultus pulvis, vmbrae somnium.

See Delitiæ C. Poetarum Gallorum (1609), Pars III, p. 171.

PAGE 373. Veris descriptio l. 15. strepero. There is no classical authority for the adjective 'streperus', but its existence in Crashaw's time is witnessed by the 1677 edition of Holyoke's Dictionary, where the meanings 'hoarse' and 'jarring' are assigned to it. It is also used by J. C. Scaliger, Poemata, Pars I (p. 77 in edition of 1574), 'Teretismata,' i, l. 42 :

Non gula : non strepero turris damnata fritillo.

PAGE 374, l. 55. astro. In late Latin 'iubere' is commonly followed by the dative, and emendation to 'astrum' seems therefore unnecessary.

PAGE 375. In Natales Mariæ Principis. l. 34. Tyndarida. The erroneous belief that 'Tyndarida' could be used as a nominative singular still persisted in Crashaw's time and is even discussed by Bentley with a view to its extirpation in his Horace (1711), note on Sat. i. i. 100. There is therefore no need to emend to 'Tyndaris' in accordance with classical usage.

PAGE 376. Honoratiss^o D^o Rob^o Heath. See article 'Robert Heath' in D.N.B. Heath became Chief Justice of Common Pleas in 1631.

l. 2. tuæ gloria magna togæ ! Suggested by Martial, ii. 90, 2 :

Gloria Romanae, Quintiliane, togæ.

PAGE 377. Serenissimæ Reginæ, &c. l. 3. Est Musæ de matre recens rubicundulus infans. Juvenal, Satires, vii. 196, has :

adhuc a matre rubentem.

Horatii Ode. Compare the English version, p. 382, below.

l. 13. ἐπικίδνουον Crashaw shortens the penultimate syllable, probably owing to his pronunciation of the Greek according to accent. Compare παρπίδος, l. 25, below, and τρικράνος, l. 33, below; also ἐπιχρύσφω, l. 26, below (nom. sing. ἐπίχρυστος).

l. 14. Βοσφόρον should strictly be accented on the first syllable and be spelt with a π, not φ. As spelt here it seems to be a back-formation from the Latin.

l. 5. sydus illud oris acre prospectans. The 'procul' appears to have crept in from l. 4. Professor Bensly, in suggesting the emendation, points out other examples of the same phrase, in p. 8, l. 21, above: 'Sydus illud oris tui auspicatissimum', and in the dedication in Add. MS. 40176, see p. 2, above, ll. 21-2.

l. 8. Cujus serena facilitas graves mores. Professor Bensly, in suggesting his emendation, points out that the manuscript reading does not scan and that the 'gravitas' cannot strictly be said to 'mulcere mores'. The contrast between gravitas and facilitas is classical. Compare Cicero, Pro Murena, 31, 66: 'si illius comitatem et facilitatem tuae gravitati severitatis asperseris.' Compare also p. 165, l. 45, above: 'Sub morum facilitate, severitas virtutis'.

PAGE 379, l. 11. videri festinus. 'fessus', in l. 12, suggesting the metaphor of the journey of life, lends support to the emendations proposed, but uncertainty as to what word has in fact been replaced by 'videri' seems to justify leaving the text open to conjecture.

l. 12. hunc mori. See foot-note. The metre could also be restored by deleting 'Et'; but 'Et' seems to have a function and there are other instances of metrical licence in Crashaw's Latin works.

In obitum Rev. V. D^{ns} Mansell. John Mansel was President of Queens' College 1622-31, on Oct. 7 of which year he died. He entered the college in 1594 and was elected to a Fellowship June 31, 1600. (Searle, The History of the Queens' College, 1871, pp. 447-9.)

l. 34. Neptunes silver-sheilded guard Crashaw is no doubt thinking of classical allusions to the dumbness of fishes, e.g. Horace, Odes, iv. iii. 19-20:

O mutis quoque piscibus
Donatura cycni, si libeat, sonum.

For the epithet, compare that of Alexander's Persian guards, ἀργυρόσπιδες (Aelian, Varia Historia, ix. 3).

Eyes are vocall, Teares have Tongues,
And there be words not made with lungs;

ll. 35-6. O, pri'thee death, &c. Compare 'Vpon the Death of the most desired Mr. Herry's', ll. 59-60, p. 170, above:

Spare him Death, & spare him then,
Spare the sweetest among men.

PAGE 403. the Lady Parker. It has not been possible to identify the person in whose honour this poem was written; if the poem is Crashaw's it cannot refer to the wife of William Parker, fourth Baron Monteagle and eleventh Baron Morley, as she died after Crashaw (Parish Register, Great Hallingbury) and in any case would have been referred to more naturally as Lady Monteagle. It seems possible, however, that the lady in question was William Parker's daughter Frances, of whom nothing appears to be recorded except that she 'died a Nun'. See art 'William Parker' in D.N.B.

ll. 3-4 Can such, &c. Compare the poem in memory of S. Teresa, ll. 139-43, p. 135, above:

All thy good workes which went before
 . . . and all in one
 Weave a Constellation
 Of Crownes, . . .

and 'His Epitaph', ll. 17-20, p. 173, above:
 That in the Center of his Brest

Every reconciled Grace,
 Had their Generall meeting place.

ll. 11-12. Nor can . . . Excellence. Compare 'Upon the birth of the Princesse Elizabeth', ll. 17-18, p. 391, above:

And though these humble lines soare not soe high,
 As is thy birth;

and 'To the Morning', ll. 19-20, p. 184, above:

Hence 'tis my humble fancy finds no wings,
 No nimble rapture starts to Heaven . . .

ll. 12-13. Oh could I fly Betwixt Seraphick pinions! Compare ll. 22-3, p. 391, above:

Lett th' hallowed plume of a Seraphick wing
 Bee consecrated to this worke,

PAGE 404, ll. 29-30 And gladly, &c. Compare 'Easter day', ll. 16-18, p. 100, above:

for may hee ly
 Thron'd in thy Grave;
 Death will on this condition be content to Dy.

ll. 32-6. How a heart, &c. Compare 'An Elegie on the death of Dr Porter', ll. 29-30, p. 396, above:

To sing their saddest Dir'ges, such as may Make their scar'd soules take wing, & fly away.

and 'On y^e Gunpowder-Treason', p. 384, above, ll. 28-30:

A winters thunder with a groane shall scare,
 And rouse the sleepy ashes of the dead,
 Making them skip out of their dusty bed.

l. 35. My nimble spirits Compare 'To the Morning', l. 20, quoted in note to ll. 11-12 of this poem, above.

ll. 38-9. Each crimson streame, &c. Compare 'An Elegy upon the death of Mr Stanninow', ll. 22-4, p. 394, above:

These purple currents hedg'd with violets round
 To corralize, w^{ch} softly wont to slide
 In crimson wauelets, & in scarlet tide?

Poems from unprinted MSS. 461

and 'On y^e Gunpowder-Treason', ll. 63-4, p. 385, above :

the warmest blood,

That runnes in violett pipes :

l. 42. That euery heart, &c. Compare 'His Epitaph', ll. 50-2, p. 174, above :

For now (alas) not in this stone

(Passenger who e're thou art)

Is he entomb'd, but in thy Heart.

Heading] Mr Christopher Rouse. A student of this name was admitted to Pembroke College (Crashaw's college) on April 19, 1621. He is described in the Admission Book as 'Johannis Equitis Aurati filius primogenitus Henham in agro Suffolcensi natus, 15 annos habens'. On March 2, 1623, 'Gratia ei conceditur ad respondend: quæstiones' (Pembroke Admission-Book). As to his later career and the date of his death no particulars have been discovered.

l. 1. Rich, purest rose See the note on Crashaw's fondness for the double adjective, Introduction, p. lxxiii, above.

prime flowre of blooming youth. Compare 'An Elegy upon the death of Mr Stanninow', l. 28, p. 394, above : 'this prime flowre of youth'.

ll. 14-16. Vntill sh' hath flatter'd, &c. Compare 'Cupid's Cryer', ll. 25-6, p. 159, above :

The working Bees soft melting Gold,

That which their waxen Mines enfold,

(for 'Mines' in this connexion, compare l. 9, above).

PAGE 405, ll. 17-18 that doe swimme In gulfes of deepest blisse. Compare 'Cupid's Cryer', ll. 14-15, p. 159, above :

hee shall swim

In riper joyes :

and 'Upon the Kings coronation', ll. 5-6, p. 389 :

Thou, glad Isle,

That swim'st as deepe in joy, as Seas,

ll. 29 and 36. I meane. See the references quoted in the Introduction, pp. lxxii-lxxiii, above.

ll. 29-32. where euery grace, &c. Compare 'His Epitaph', ll. 19-20, p. 173, above :

Every reconciled Grace

Had their Generall meeting place.

See also note to p. 403, ll. 3-4, above.

ll. 41-2. that from their wings, &c. Compare 'Upon the birth of the Princesse Elizabeth', ll. 22-3, p. 391, above :

Lett th' hallowed plume of a Seraphick wing

Bee consecrated to this worke,

and see also note to p. 403, ll. 12-13, above.

An Epitaph. l. 3. The brightest gemme, &c. Compare 'Vpon the Death of the most desired Mr. Herrys', l. 4, p. 168, above :

This is Natures choycest Iewell.

l. 4. W^{ch} now, &c. Compare 'The Weeper', st. 2, l. 6, p. 79, above :

What ever makes Heavens fore-head fine.

ll 5-6. Therefore its shrine, &c. Compare 'An Epitaph. Vpon Doctor Brooke', ll. 7-8, p. 175, above:

Meane while his loved bankes now dry,

The Muses with their teares supply.

and 'An Elegie on the Death of Dr Porter', ll. 43-4, p. 396, above:
all bubling eyes

Are teeming now with store of fresh supplies

l. 6 watry pearls Compare 'The Teare', st. 1, l. 4, p. 83, above: 'A watry Diamond'.

See the preliminary discussion of this MS, pp. lxxvi-lxxviii, above.

PAGE 407. Epythalamum, l. 58. noble Brampstons eyes. It is impossible to be sure as to the identity of this Brampton, but it seems very likely that he was Sir John Bramston the younger (1611-1700), whose father was Chief Justice between 1632 and 1642, and whose autobiography was published in 1845 by the Camden Society. From this it appears that he married in 1635 Alice, eldest daughter of Anthony Abdy, alderman of London. The seat of the Bramstons was at Whitechapel, of which parish William Crashaw, the poet's father, was rector from 1618 to 1626, between Richard Crashaw's sixth and fourteenth years, and acquaintance may easily have begun then. John Bramston's brother, Moundeford, went to Queens' College, Cambridge, in 1632, the year after Crashaw's admission to Pembroke. The reference to the Thames in stanza 4 renders it scarcely possible that the poem was written for Moundeford's own wedding, which took place in 1639, as Moundeford married a Suffolk girl and left Cambridge to live in that county. See the Autobiography, p. 26.

l. 59. The sense is clearer if a comma is understood after 'thence'.

ll. 64-7. I exhale, &c. Crashaw uses elsewhere the word 'exhale' in connexion with the idea of death. Compare 'On a prayer booke', ll. 71-2, p. 129, above.

Delicious deaths, soft exhalations

Of soule; deare, and divine annihilations.

Compare also the verses on S. Teresa, ll. 113-17 (p. 134, above), where the exhalation is associated, as it is here, with fire and sighs:

Like a soft lumpe of Incense, hasted

By too hot a fire, and wasted,

Into perfuming cloudes. So fast

Shalt thou exhale to heaven at last,

In a dissolving sigh,

l. 71. mother phoenixes. Compare 'Vpon the Duke of Yorke his Birth A Panegyricke', ll. 82-3, p. 180, above:

Those art the Mother Phoenix, and thy Breast

Chast as that Virgin honour of the East,

PAGES 407-8, ll. 76 and 81-2 Compare 'A Song', ll. 13-14, p. 327, above:

Still liue in me this louing strife

Of liuing DEATH & dying LIFE.

Compare also 'The Office of the Holy Crosse', Antiphona, ll. 1-2, p. 272, above:

O strange mysterious strife

Of open DEATH & hidden LIFE!

Poems from unprinted MSS. 463

With this stanza, in general, compare 'Wishes. To his (supposed) Mistressse', ll 70-5, p 197, above :

Feares, fond and flight,
As the coy Brides, when Night
First does the longing lover right
Teares, quickly fled,
And vaine, as those are shed
For a dying Maydenhead

PAGE 408, l. 86. this rich losse Compare 'In the Glorious Epiphanie', l. 142, p. 258, above :

Proud to haue gain'd this pretious losse

l. 94. the fires, &c. Compare 'Vpon the Duke of Yorke his Birth A Panegyricke', l. 118, p. 181, above :

Give then this rurall wreath fire from thine eyes.

ll. 105-6. The rhyme 'this is' and 'kisses' is used elsewhere by Crashaw Compare 'The Teare', st 4, ll 1-3, p. 84, above, and 'Wishes. To his (supposed) Mistressse', ll 121-3, p 198, above

ll. 109-12. Nor may thy Vine, &c The imagery and the phraseology are partially repeated in 'Vpon the Duke of Yorke his Birth A Panegyricke', ll. 102-3, p 180, above :

Long mayest thou laden with such clusters leane
Vpon thy Royall Elme (faire Vine)

PAGE 409, l. 121. heauen tyed. This type of compound is not uncommon in Crashaw, especially with 'heaven' as its first element, 'heau'n-intreated' (p. 236, l. 1, above), 'Heaun-instructed' (p 295, st 6, l. 1, above), 'heau'n-designed' (p 331, l. 1, above)

l. 129 neast This is one of Crashaw's favourite words In the Hymn 'To the Name . . of Iesus', pp 239-45, above, it occurs five times in the rhyming position. In this 'Epithalamum' it also occurs three times at the end of a line.

APPENDIX I.

POEMS PROBABLY SPURIOUS.

PAGE 410. On the Frontispiece of Isaacsons Chronologie explained. This poem is almost certainly the work of Edward Rainbow, D D, who became Fellow of Magdalene College, Cambridge, in 1633 and afterwards Bishop of Carlisle.

In his biography, published in 1688, reference is made (p. 84) to 'a Paper of Verses upon the Frontispiece of Mr Henry Isaacson's Chronology; which accurate Chronologer was our Bishops particular Friend . . .', and the writer goes on 'Of the Honour of the former of these Poems, printed without the addition of any name in 1633, he was robbed by the Publisher of Mr. Richard Crashaw's Poems, Entituled, Steps to the Temple, and ascribed by him to that Ingenious Epigrammatist. But he having no Title to it, but what the modest silence of Mr. Rainbow gave him, I have recovered it to the true Owner by a Melius inquirendum, and subjoyned it here.'
